Congressional Record.

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE SIXTY-SIXTH CONGRESS FIRST SESSION.

SENATE.

MONDAY, May 19, 1919.

THOMAS R. MARSHALL, of Indiana, Vice President of the United States, called the Senate to order at 12 o'clock meridian.

The Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, we have lived through days that have seen the most signal manifestations of Thy gracious favor. Peace has come to us once more and with it abounding prosperity. The proud Nation is welcoming home its victorious Army. Homes are gladdened with the faces of the boys who have come bearing with them the emblems of victory. There are saddened hearts over the boys that have paid the price of the world's prosperity and liberty and peace. May they have the consolation to know that the sacrifice their boys have made has enriched the world and will enrich it for all generations, that men shall ever arise to call them blessed.

We pray Thee to look with Thy continued gracious favor upon Thy servants whom Thou hast called to this place of honorable service. Give them far-sighted vision. Give them stout hearts to contend for the right as they see the right. Give them unity of counsel and spirit. May our flag still float as the emblem of liberty and victory and peace and ever be God's own evangel of good will among the nations of the earth. For Christ's sake. Amen.

PROCLAMATION.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The hour having arrived of the day on which, in accordance with the proclamation of the President of the United States, an extraordinary session of the Congress of the United States is to be convened, the Secretary of the Senate will read the proclamation.

The Secretary (James M. Baker) read the proclamation, as follows:

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA—A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas public interests require that the Congress of the United States should be convened in extra session at 12 o'clock noon on the 19th day of May, 1919, to receive such communication as may be made by the Executive: Now, therefore,

I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim and declare that an extraordinary occasion requires the Congress of the United States to convene in extra session at the Capitol, in the District of Columbia, on the 19th day of May, 1919, at 12 o'clock noon, of which all persons who shall at that time be entitled to act as Members thereof are hereby required to take notice.

Given under my hand and the seal of the United States of America the 7th day of May, in the year of our Lord 1919, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and forty-third.

[SEAL.] WOODROW WILSON.

By the President:

ROBERT LANSING,
Secretary of State.

ADMINISTRATION OF THE OATH TO SENATORS ELECT.

The VICE PRESIDENT, The newly elected Senators whose credentials are on file with the Secretary of the Senate, and to whose taking of the oath of office there is no objection, will now present themselves at the desk of the Secretary for that purpose. The Secretary will call the names of those who will take the oath.

The Secretary called the names of Mr. BALL, Mr. BANKHEAD, Mr. BORAH, and Mr. CAPPER.

These Senators, escorted by Mr. WOLCOTT, Mr. UNDERWOOD, Mr. NUGENT, and Mr. CURTIS, respectively, advanced to the Vice President's desk, and the oath prescribed by law was administered to them by the Vice President.

CALLING OF THE ROLL.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll of the Senate to ascertain whether there is a constitutional number of Senators present for the transaction of business.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Gore	McLean	Shields
Ball	Gronna	McNary	Simmons
Bankhead	Hale	Martin	Smith, Ariz.
Beckham	Harding	Moses	Smith, Ga.
Borah	Harrison	Myers	Smith, Md.
Brandegee	Henderson	Nelson	Smith, S. C.
Calder	Hitchcock	New	Smoot
Capper	Johnson, Calif.	Newberry	Spencer
Chamberlain	Jones, N. Mex.	Norris	Stanley
Colt	Jones, Wash.	Nugent	Sterling
Culberson	Kellogg	Overman	Sutherland
Cummins	Kendrick	Owen	Swanson
Curtis	Kenyon	Page	Thomas
Dial	Keyes	Penrose	Townsend
Dillingham	King	Phipps	Trammell
Edge	Kirby	Pittman	Underwood
Elkins	Knox	Poindexter	Wadsworth
Fall	La Follette	Pomerene	Walsh, Mass.
Fernald	Lenroot	Ransdell	Walsh, Mont.
Fletcher	Lodge	Reed	Warren
France	McCormick	Robinson	Watson
Frelinghuysen	McCumber	Sheppard	Williams
Gay	McKellar	Sherman	Wolcott

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I am in receipt of a telegram from the senior Senator from California [Mr. PHELAN] stating that prior to the announcement of the calling of Congress he had undertaken an engagement on Government business in the Imperial Valley, Calif., at a convention or meeting being held there; that he is now en route, and will be here within the next two or three days.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Ninety-two Senators having answered to the roll call, a constitutional number of Senators is present for the transaction of business.

NOTIFICATION TO THE HOUSE.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I offer the resolution which I send to the desk, for which I ask immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the resolution.

The resolution (S. Res. 1) was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary inform the House of Representatives that a quorum of the Senate is assembled and that the Senate is ready to proceed to business.

NOTIFICATION TO THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. LODGE submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 2), which was read and agreed to:

Resolved, That a committee consisting of two Senators be appointed to join such committee as may be appointed by the House of Representatives to notify the President of the United States that a quorum of each House is assembled and that Congress is ready to receive any communication he may be pleased to make.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. OVERMAN in the chair) appointed Mr. LODGE and Mr. MARTIN as the committee on the part of the Senate.

ELECTION OF PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE AND OFFICERS OF THE SENATE.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the election of President pro tempore of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. OVERMAN in the chair). If there is no objection, nominations to that office are now in order. The Chair hears none.

Mr. LODGE. I offer the resolution which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question submitted by the Senator from Massachusetts will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 3), as follows:

Resolved, That Hon. ALBERT B. CUMMINS, a Senator from the State of Iowa, be, and he hereby is, elected President of the Senate pro tempore, to hold office during the pleasure of the Senate and in accordance with the resolution of the Senate adopted on the 12th day of March, 1890, on the subject.

Mr. MARTIN. I send to the desk an amendment to the resolution which has just been offered by the Senator from Massachusetts.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Virginia to the resolution offered by the Senator from Massachusetts will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is moved to strike out the words "ALBERT B. CUMMINS, a Senator from the State of Iowa," and to insert in lieu thereof the words "KEY PITTMAN, a Senator from the State of Nevada."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment to the resolution of the Senator from Massachusetts proposed by the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. MARTIN. I ask that the vote on the amendment be taken by yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CALDER (when his name was called). During the Sixty-fifth Congress I had a general pair with the junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GERRY]. I believe it terminated at the end of that Congress. I inquired on Thursday at his office if he were in the city, and I was informed that he was in Europe. This morning several Senators on the other side approached me and insisted that the pair should be effective, and that the Senator from Rhode Island left the country with that idea in mind. Although I myself feel it should be disregarded, I propose, because of the attitude of these Senators, to recognize it for to-day on all questions that may come up, and therefore will not vote on this question.

The roll call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 42, nays 47, as follows:

YEAS—42.

Ashurst	Hitchcock	Pomerene	Stanley
Bankhead	Jones, N. Mex.	Ransdell	Swanson
Beckham	Kendrick	Reed	Thomas
Chamberlain	King	Robinson	Trammell
Culberson	Kirby	Sheppard	Underwood
Dial	McKellar	Shields	Walsh, Mass.
Fletcher	Martin	Simmons	Walsh, Mont.
Gay	Myers	Smith, Ariz.	Williams
Gore	Nugent	Smith, Ga.	Wolcott
Harrison	Overman	Smith, Md.
Henderson	Owen	Smith, S. C.

NAYS—47.

Ball	Frelinghuysen	Lodge	Phipps
Borah	Gronna	McCormick	Poindexter
Brandegee	Hale	McCumber	Sherman
Capper	Harding	McLean	Smoot
Colt	Johnson, Calif.	McNary	Spencer
Curtis	Jones, Wash.	Moses	Sterling
Dillingham	Kellogg	Nelson	Sutherland
Edge	Kenyon	New	Townsend
Elkins	Keyes	Newberry	Wadsworth
Fall	Knox	Norris	Warren
Fernald	La Follette	Page	Watson
France	Lenroot	Penrose

NOT VOTING—6.

Calder	Gerry	Phelan	Pittman
Cummins	Johnson, S. Dak.

So Mr. MARTIN's amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now is upon the original resolution submitted by the Senator from Massachusetts.

The resolution was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The President pro tempore elect will present himself at the desk and take the oath of office.

Mr. CUMMINS was escorted to the Vice President's desk by Mr. LODGE, and the oath of office was administered to him by the Presiding Officer.

Mr. LODGE submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 4), which was read and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Senate do now proceed to the election of the following officers in the order named: Secretary of the Senate, Sergeant at Arms and Doorkeeper of the Senate, Assistant Doorkeeper of the Senate, and Acting Assistant Doorkeeper of the Senate.

Mr. LODGE. Under the order of the Senate just adopted, I offer the resolution which I send to the desk.

The resolution (S. Res. 5) was read, as follows:

Resolved, That George A. Sanderson, of Illinois, be, and he is hereby, elected Secretary of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the resolution offered by the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment to that resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to amend the resolution by striking out the words "George A. Sanderson, of Illinois," and inserting in lieu thereof the words "James M. Baker, of South Carolina."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Virginia.

The amendment was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the original resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

George A. Sanderson, escorted by James M. Baker, appeared at the Vice President's desk, and the oath of office was administered to him by the Vice President.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, acting under the same order, I offer the resolution which I send to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution (S. Res. 6) was read as follows:

Resolved, That David S. Barry, of Rhode Island, be, and he is hereby, elected Sergeant at Arms and Doorkeeper of the Senate.

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment to that resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed as an amendment to strike out the words "David S. Barry, of Rhode Island," and to insert in lieu thereof the words "Charles P. Higgins, of Missouri."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Virginia.

The amendment was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the adoption of the original resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. LODGE. I offer, under the same order, the resolution which I send to the desk.

The resolution (S. Res. 7) was read, considered, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That Carl A. Loeffler, of Pennsylvania, be, and he is hereby, elected Assistant Doorkeeper of the Senate, and that Thomas W. Keller, of West Virginia, be, and he is hereby, chosen Acting Assistant Doorkeeper of the Senate.

Mr. LODGE. I offer the resolution which I send to the desk and for which I ask immediate consideration.

The resolution (S. Res. 8) was read, considered, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the President of the United States and the House of Representatives be notified of the election of Hon. ALBERT B. CUMMINS, a Senator from the State of Iowa, as President of the Senate pro tempore, and George A. Sanderson, of Illinois, as Secretary of the Senate.

HOUR OF DAILY MEETING.

Mr. LODGE submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 9), which was read, considered, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the hour of the daily meeting of the Senate be 12 o'clock meridian until otherwise ordered.

DEATH OF REPRESENTATIVE JOHN LAWSON BURNETT.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, I send to the desk resolutions for which I ask immediate consideration. I give notice that at some future date I shall ask the Senate to set apart a time for the purpose of paying tribute to the memory of the deceased Representative.

The resolutions (S. Res. 10) were read, considered by unanimous consent, and unanimously agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with deep sensibility the announcement of the death of Hon. JOHN LAWSON BURNETT, late a Representative from the State of Alabama.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives.

Mr. BANKHEAD. As a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased Representative, I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

The motion was unanimously agreed to; and (at 12 o'clock and 50 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow, Tuesday, May 20, 1919, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, May 19, 1919.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

This being the day fixed in the proclamation of the President for the assembling of the first session of the Sixty-sixth Congress, the Clerk of the last House, Mr. South Trimble, called the House to order.

The Chaplain of the House of Representatives of the Sixty-fifth Congress, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Father in Heaven, once more in the swift flight of time Thou hast brought us to a new Congress, now convened in extraordinary session by the President of the United States of America.

Under the changed conditions in human events the call is imperative and will tax the ingenuity and statesmanship of its Members. Great are the problems confronting it. Questions of moment wait upon it for solution. Hence we pray for Thy wisdom to guide it, Thy strength to sustain it, Thy courage to inspire it to deliberate yet speedy action.

Let Thy blessing descend upon the Speaker of this House and the Representatives of the people that he may guide with a firm and strong hand its Members to the highest and best solution of the great questions at home and abroad; that its acts may be to the best interests of all concerned and redound to the glory of the living God, our Heavenly Father.

Since the Sixty-fifth Congress passed into history two of its Members who had been elected to serve in this Congress have been called to the larger life. Their work well done, strong friendships formed, their going brings sadness to many hearts. We pray for those who knew and loved them, especially their respective families, that they may be comforted by the eternal hope of the immortality of the soul. This we ask in the name of Him who died and rose again. Amen.

PROCLAMATION OF THE PRESIDENT.

The CLERK. The Clerk will read the proclamation of the President.

The Clerk read as follows:

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA—A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas public interests require that the Congress of the United States should be convened in extra session at 12 o'clock noon on the 19th day of May, 1919, to receive such communication as may be made by the Executive: Now, therefore,

I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim and declare that an extraordinary occasion requires the Congress of the United States to convene in extra session at the Capitol, in the District of Columbia, on the 19th day of May, 1919, at 12 o'clock noon, of which all persons who shall at that time be entitled to act as Members thereof are hereby required to take notice.

Given under my hand and the seal of the United States of America the 7th day of May, in the year of our Lord 1919 and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and forty-third.

[SEAL.] WOODROW WILSON.

By the President:

The CLERK. Four hundred and two Members have answered to their names. A quorum is present. For the information of the House I present a statement of the changes that have taken place by death and resignation since the close of the Sixty-fifth Congress.

The Clerk read as follows:

District.	Name.	Date of vacancy.
Sixth Virginia	Carter Glass, resigned	Dec. 16, 1918
Twenty-second Pennsylvania	Edward E. Robbins, died	Jan. 25, 1919
Eighth Virginia	Charles C. Carlin, resigned	Mar. 3, 1919
Eighth Kentucky	Harvey Helm, died	Do.
Twelfth Texas	James C. Wilson, resigned	Apr. 3, 1919
Alaska	Charles A. Sulzer, died	Apr. 15, 1919
First Louisiana	Albert Estopinal, died	Apr. 28, 1919
Seventh Alabama	John L. Burnett, died	May 13, 1919

ELECTION OF SPEAKER.

The CLERK. The next business in order is the election of the Speaker. Nominations for Speaker are in order.

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Clerk, I am authorized by the unanimous action of the Republican conference to place in nomination for Speaker of the House of Representatives for the Sixty-sixth Congress Mr. FREDERICK HUNTINGTON GILLETT, of Massachusetts. [Applause.]

The CLERK. Are there any further nominations?

Mr. RUCKER. Mr. Clerk, I have always been frank with the House, and I am going to be frank with it now. If it were possible, I would like to postpone the election of Speaker for about two years, to give time and opportunity to some of our boys who have remained at home to get here. [Applause and laughter.] I see many new faces over there on the Republican side, and I fear they, like the lean and hungry Cassius, are dangerous to Democratic success in this contest.

Mr. Clerk, this is an important function we are called upon to perform—the election of a Speaker for the Sixty-sixth Congress. The office of Speaker is a high, important, and responsible position. I have inquired diligently among the gentlemen sitting on this side of the aisle, and I learn that the distinguished gentleman whose name was just presented by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. TOWNER] is a man of unimpeachable character, of great learning, long experience, a man who has proven good and true in every capacity in which he has been tried. The CONGRESSIONAL RECORD which I have read recites his splendid achievements and fully justifies the high esteem in which his friends on this side of the House hold him. [Applause on Republican side.] I am very glad to hear that applause. The CONGRESSIONAL RECORD also shows that the distinguished gentleman whose name I shall present has time and time again received the unqualified approval of every man upon the Republican side. [Applause.] You have said that he is a brave man, a learned man, an impartial man, just such a man as should preside over this House in this day of harmony and good will, and now I am going to put to the test my good friends on that side, and, notwithstanding the unavoidable absence for two years of many gentlemen who sincerely desired to be here, I am going to ask this House to reelect to the office which he has so well filled so long, and in which he has served his country with such distinguished ability, that great American citizen, CHAMP CLARK, of Missouri. [Applause.]

The CLERK. Are there any further nominations? If not, the nominations will be closed. The Clerk will appoint as tellers to count the votes the gentleman from New York [Mr. SANFORD], the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DENISON], the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. GANDY], and the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. VINSON], who will please take their places at the desk. The Clerk will call the roll and the Members will designate by name whom they desire to elect as Speaker.

The tellers having taken their places, the House proceeded to vote viva voce for Speaker. The following is the vote in detail:

At the conclusion of the roll,

The CLERK said: The result of the ballot as agreed to by the tellers is as follows:

Total number of votes cast, 400. Mr. GILLETT received 228 and Mr. CLARK of Missouri received 172. Mr. GILLETT, having received a majority of all the votes cast, a quorum being present and voting, is declared duly elected Speaker of the Sixty-sixth Congress. [Applause.] The Clerk appoints as a committee to notify Mr. GILLETT of his election and to escort him to the chair Mr. CLARK of Missouri, Mr. MANN, of Illinois, and Mr. MONDELL, of Wyoming.

The committee appointed to conduct the Speaker elect to the chair having returned with him,

Mr. CLARK of Missouri said:

Gentlemen of the House of Representatives, out of 37 Speakers Massachusetts has had 5. This is the first time that the fatherhood of the House and the Speakership of the House have merged in one man. The gentleman you have elected has served 26 years. He has scholarship, experience, high character, and I hope that he will write his name among the very scanty list of great Speakers. [Applause and laughter.]

I have the pleasure and the honor of introducing to you the next Speaker of the House, Hon. FREDERICK H. GILLETT. [Applause.]

ADDRESS OF THE SPEAKER.

The SPEAKER elect, on taking the chair, said:

Gentlemen of the House of Representatives, I thank you for this cordial demonstration. I wish I could hope that this gavel will never be needed to check any less friendly and good-tempered disturbance. But I recognize this momentous session must bring periods of stress and excitement when it will be hard for us all to preserve that moderation and decorum befitting the dignity of this body.

I hope that the good feeling and mutual respect which exists to-day, although it may at times be clouded and dimmed, will, at the end of this Congress, be no less general and genuine. [Applause.]

To you who have conferred upon me this high office I feel the deepest gratitude. Both my training and my taste have made it attractive to me. There is no other in the world for which I would exchange it. Perhaps I ought to throw a ring into the sea to propitiate the gods. I have served under five Speakers, Crisp, Reed, Henderson, Cannon, and Clark, all men of high character and great ability, some of them men of extraordinary ability, and I have now no ambition except by an honorable and acceptable performance of my duty to prove myself not unworthy of that exalted company and of your partiality. To achieve that I ask your aid and cooperation. [Applause.]

There are facing this Congress problems so grave and so difficult as to demand our most industrious application and combined wisdom. Upon our success in solving them hangs the immediate prosperity and the future development of the Nation. They are so momentous that they may well sober partisanship and disarm prejudice. I am sure you will enter upon your task with high purpose, and I pledge you it will be my aim to exercise the power you have conferred upon me fairly, impartially, judicially, and with scrupulous regard for the rights and for the feelings of every Member of the House. [Applause.]

I am now ready to take the oath of office, and I ask that it be administered by Mr. CANNON, of Illinois. [Applause.]

The oath of office was administered by Mr. CANNON.

SWEARING IN OF CERTAIN MEMBERS ELECT.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to send to the Clerk's desk a list of Members elect whose certificates have not been received but with regard to whose election there is no question. After the list has been read I shall ask unanimous consent that they may be allowed to take the oath.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the Clerk will read the list.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. McDuffie, first Alabama.
Mr. Lea, first California.
Mr. Hersman, eighth California.
Mr. Kettner, eleventh California.
Mr. Wilson, third Illinois.
Mr. Fuller, twelfth Illinois.
Mr. Rainey, twentieth Illinois.
Mr. Rodenberg, twenty-second Illinois.
Mr. Bland, second Indiana.
Mr. Towner, eighth Iowa.
Mr. Hersey, fourth Maine.
Mr. Nichols, thirteenth Michigan.
Mr. Reavis, first Nebraska.
Mr. McClintic, seventh Oklahoma.
Mr. Bee, fourteenth Texas.
Mr. Welling, first Utah.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Members whose names have been read who are now present and with regard to whose election there is no question be allowed to take the oath.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the unanimous consent? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The Clerk will call the list of Members by States, to take the oath of office, and Members will come forward as called.

The Members presented themselves as their States were called and took the oath of office provided by law.

Mr. GRIEST, Mr. HICKS, and Mr. BUTLER affirmed.

During the swearing in of Members, when the State of Wisconsin was called, the following occurred:

Mr. DALLINGER. Mr. Speaker, I object to the swearing in at this time of VICTOR BERGER, a Representative elect from the State of Wisconsin [applause], for the reason that he is now under conviction and sentence by a United States court for a violation of the law of the United States. I wish to state for the information of the House that at the proper time I shall offer a resolution providing that the question of the eligibility of Mr. BERGER to a seat in this House be referred to a special committee in accordance with the precedents established by the House of Representatives in similar cases. [Applause.]

Mr. BERGER. Mr. Speaker, I understand this is a question of the highest personal privilege.

The SPEAKER. This is not the time to recognize the gentleman for that. Until the swearing in of the Members is completed the Chair can not recognize the gentleman.

The swearing in of the Members was completed.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS OF THE HOUSE.

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to offer a resolution which I will send to the Clerk's desk, ask that it be read, and move its adoption.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. TOWNER] offers a resolution, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That William Tyler Page, of the State of Maryland, be, and he is hereby, chosen Clerk of the House of Representatives;

That Joseph G. Rodgers, of the State of Pennsylvania, be, and he is hereby, chosen Sergeant at Arms of the House of Representatives;

That Bert W. Kennedy, of the State of Michigan, be, and he is hereby, chosen Doorkeeper of the House of Representatives;

That Frank W. Collier, of the State of Wisconsin, be, and he is hereby, chosen Postmaster of the House of Representatives; and

That Rev. Henry N. Couden, of the State of Michigan, be, and he is hereby, chosen Chaplain of the House of Representatives.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I would like to submit a unanimous-consent request that the gentleman who is nominated for Chaplain be elected by acclamation, and then, as to the balance of the names included in the resolution offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. TOWNER] I wish to offer a substitute.

Mr. TOWNER. I think there will be no objection to that on this side.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SAUNDERS]? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The question is on the election of Chaplain.

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Speaker, I understood the gentleman to suggest offering a substitute resolution.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. As soon as disposition is made of the election of Chaplain.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the election of Chaplain.

The question was taken, and Mr. Couden was unanimously elected.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I now send to the desk a resolution in the nature of a substitute.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That South Trimble, of the State of Kentucky, be, and he is hereby, chosen Clerk of the House of Representatives;

That Robert B. Gordon, of the State of Ohio, be, and he is hereby, chosen Sergeant at Arms of the House of Representatives;

That Joseph J. Sinnott, of the State of Virginia, be, and he is hereby, chosen Doorkeeper of the House of Representatives; and

That William M. Dunbar, of the State of Georgia, be, and he is hereby, chosen Postmaster of the House of Representatives.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the adoption of the substitute.

The question was taken, and the substitute was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the adoption of the resolution offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. TOWNER].

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. DALLINGER. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts will be recognized. First the officers who have just been elected will come forward and be sworn.

Messrs. Page, Rodgers, Kennedy, Collier, and Couden appeared at the bar of the House, and the Speaker administered to them the oath of office.

MINORITY EMPLOYEES.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I desire to offer a resolution, which it will take but a minute to dispose of. I ask for its immediate consideration.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri offers a resolution, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That until otherwise ordered, Joseph J. Sinnott be authorized to act as special employee of the House of Representatives and receive compensation at the rate of $1,800 per annum; that H. W. Hetron be authorized to act as special chief page and pair clerk and receive compensation at the rate of $1,800 per annum; that Kenneth Romney be authorized to act as special messenger and assistant pair clerk and receive compensation at the rate of $1,800 per annum; that John O. Snyder and Lawrence Overstreet be authorized to act as special messengers and receive compensation at the rate of $1,800 per annum; and that J. J. Kenah be authorized to act as minority telephone messenger and receive compensation at the rate of $1,800 per annum; such employees to be at all times under the control of the Speaker of the House and subject to change at any time by the House as provided by law.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The question was taken, and the resolution was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Waldorf, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Secretary inform the House of Representatives that a quorum of the Senate is assembled and that the Senate is ready to proceed to business.

Also:

Resolved, That a committee consisting of two Senators be appointed to join such committee as may be appointed by the House of Representatives to notify the President of the United States that a quorum of each House is assembled and that Congress is ready to receive any communication he may be pleased to make.

Also:

Resolved, That the President of the United States and the House of Representatives be notified of the election of Hon. ALBERT B. CUMMINS, of Iowa, as President of the Senate pro tempore, and George A. Sanderson as Secretary of the Senate.

Also:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with deep sensibility the announcement of the death of Hon. JOHN LAWSON BURNETT, late a Representative from the State of Alabama.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives.

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased the Senate do now adjourn.

NOTIFICATION TO THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa offers a resolution, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Clerk be instructed to inform the President of the United States that the House of Representatives has elected FREDERICK H. GILLETT, a Representative from the State of Massachusetts, as Speaker, and William Tyler Page, a citizen of the State of Maryland, as Clerk of the House of Representatives of the Sixty-sixth Congress.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

The question was taken, and the resolution was agreed to.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan offers a resolution, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

NOTIFICATION TO THE SENATE.

Resolved, That a message be sent to the Senate to inform that body that a quorum of the House of Representatives is assembled; that FREDERICK H. GILLETT, a Representative from the State of Massachusetts, has been elected Speaker; that William Tyler Page, a citizen of the State of Maryland, has been elected Clerk; and that the House is ready for business.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

REPRESENTATIVE ELECT BERGER.

Mr. DALLINGER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to offer a resolution, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts offers a resolution, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Whereas it is charged that VICTOR BERGER, a Representative elect to the Sixty-sixth Congress from the State of Wisconsin, is ineligible to a seat in the House of Representatives; and

Whereas such charge is made through a Member of the House, and on his responsibility as such Member, and on the basis, as he asserts, of public records and papers evidencing such an ineligibility:

Resolved, That the question of the prima facie right of VICTOR BERGER to be sworn in as a Representative of the State of Wisconsin of the Sixty-sixth Congress, as well as of his final right to a seat therein as such Representative, be referred to a special committee of nine Members of the House, to be appointed by the Speaker; and until such committee shall report upon and the House decide such question and right, the said VICTOR BERGER shall not be sworn in nor be permitted to occupy a seat in this House; and said committee shall have power to send for persons and papers and examine witnesses on oath relative to the subject matter of this resolution.

Mr. DALLINGER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to state, for the information of the House, that this resolution follows the precedent established by the House in the first session of the Fifty-sixth Congress, in the case of Mr. Roberts, a Representative elect from the State of Utah. Inasmuch as the only question now before the House is the adoption of this resolution for the appointment of a committee to consider the question of eligibility, and inasmuch as Mr. BERGER will have full opportunity to appear and present his case before that committee, and also at a later date before the House, in case the House so decides, when the report of the committee comes up for discussion and action, in order to expedite the public business I move the previous question.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts moves the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. BERGER rose.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. BERGER. I rise to a question of the highest privilege.

Mr. MONDELL rose.

The SPEAKER. The Chair did not hear the gentleman.

Mr. BERGER. I say I would like to make a short statement at this time.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL] has the floor at present.

COMMITTEE TO NOTIFY THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, out of due and proper deference to the action of the Senate, I submit the following resolution.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wyoming offers a resolution, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That a committee of three Members be appointed by the Speaker on the part of the House of Representatives to join with the committee on the part of the Senate to notify the President of the United States that a quorum of each House is assembled and that Congress is ready to receive any communication he may be pleased to make.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Chair appoints Messrs. MONDELL, MANN, and CLARK of Missouri as members of the committee.

THE RULES.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas is recognized.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I send a resolution to the Clerk's desk and ask for its adoption.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas offers a resolution, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the rules of the House of Representatives of the Sixty-fifth Congress, with an amendment increasing the membership of the Committee on Ways and Means to 25, be adopted as the rules of the House of Representatives of the Sixty-sixth Congress.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

COMMITTEES OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wyoming offers a resolution, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the following-named Members be, and they are hereby, elected members of the standing committees of the House and the joint standing committees, as follows——

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the list of members of committees be dispensed with, and that the list be printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wyoming asks unanimous consent that the reading of the list of members of the committees be dispensed with, and that the list be printed in the RECORD. Is there objection?

Mr. GARRETT. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, is this just a list of the majority Members?

Mr. MONDELL. Yes. It is a list of the majority Members.

Mr. GARRETT. There are no minority Members on the list?

Mr. MONDELL. No.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

Following is the list referred to:

SENATE.

TUESDAY, May 20, 1919.

The Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, day unto day uttereth speech and night unto night showeth knowledge. So with the return of every day we come and stand before Thee to catch the inspiration of the new light that falls on all our duties and see with clearer vision that ever-increasing purpose which runs through all Thy creation. Endue us plenteously this day with Thy grace that we may follow the divine commandments, know the will of God, and gladly do that which is pleasing in Thy sight. For Christ's sake. Amen.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of yesterday's proceedings, when, on request of Mr. LODGE and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with and the Journal was approved.

REPORT OF SECRETARY OF THE SENATE (S. DOC. NO. 3).

"Also, that a committee of three members were appointed by the Speaker on the part of the House to join the committee on the part of the Senate to notify the President of the United States that a quorum of the two Houses has assembled, and that Congress is ready to receive any communication he may be pleased to make, and that Mr. MONDELL, Mr. MANN, and Mr. CLARK of Missouri were appointed as a committee on the part of the House.

"Also, that a quorum of the House of Representatives has assembled; that FREDERICK H. GILLETT, a Representative from the State of Massachusetts, had been elected Speaker; and that William Tyler Page, a citizen of the State Maryland, had been elected Clerk.

"Also, that the House communicates to the Senate the intelligence of the death of Hon. JOHN LAWSON BURNETT, late a Representative from the State of Alabama, and transmits resolutions of the House thereon.

"Also, that the House communicates to the Senate the intelligence of the death of Hon. CHARLES AUGUST SULZER, late a Delegate from the Territory of Alaska, and transmits resolutions of the House thereon."

SENATOR FROM MICHIGAN.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair presents the petition of Henry Ford contesting the election of Senator TRUMAN H. NEW-

BERRY, which will be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

The petition is as follows:

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES OF THE SIXTY-SIXTH CONGRESS.

Petition of Mr. Henry Ford, contesting the election of Mr. Truman H. Newberry as Senator from Michigan, for the term beginning March 4, 1919, for a recount of ballots for the office of United States Senator cast at the election held in Michigan November 5, 1918, and for other relief.

DETROIT, MICH., May 17, 1919.

To Mr. TRUMAN H. NEWBERRY:

You are hereby notified that I intend to contest, and hereby do contest, your election as Senator from Michigan in the Congress of the United States for the term beginning March 4, 1919, to succeed the Honorable William Alden Smith, and that I shall ask a recount of the ballots cast at the election for such office held in Michigan November 5, 1918, and also for an investigation of the unlawful uses by you and your supporters, agents, and representatives of large sums of money to influence the primaries therefor and the said election, and also of the alleged intimidation of voters by your supporters and agents.

I beg to advise you that the grounds for such contest are, among others, those which were specifically enumerated by me in my previous notice to you thereof dated December 31, 1918, and as are also enumerated in subdivision six of the enclosed petition to the Senate of the United States of America of the Sixty-sixth Congress.

Respectfully, HENRY FORD.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
District of Columbia, ss:

Howell Van Auken, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he resides in the city of Detroit, State of Michigan, and that he is upwards of twenty-one years of age; that on, to wit, May 17th, 1919, he endeavored to serve personally upon Mr. Truman H. Newberry a notice of the contest of his election as Senator from Michigan for the term beginning March 4, 1919, by Henry Ford, etc., and likewise the petition for a contest and recount of the votes cast at said election in Michigan, referred to in said notice, of which the attached notice is a duplicate original copy; that upon investigation and inquiry deponent, on said date, ascertained that the said Truman H. Newberry was not then present in Detroit, in said county and State nor the vicinity thereof, but that he was then in the city of Washingon, District of Columbia, where he then received his mail at the Senate Office Building of the United States Senate, in said last-named city; that deponent thereupon mailed to said Truman H. Newberry the said notice of contest so served and the petition therein mentioned, being a duplicate original petition of Henry Ford to the United States Senate of the Sixty-sixth Congress for contest of the election of Truman H. Newberry as Senator from Michigan, the other duplicate original of which petition is filed herewith, by enclosing said notice and petition in an envelope securely sealed addressed to said Truman H. Newberry, Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C., his present address, with postage thereon, including the usual registration fee prepaid in full, and handing said envelope and contents for registration and mailing to the registry clerk of the United States post office at Detroit, Michigan, and at the same time demanding a return registry receipt.

HOWELL VAN AUKEN.

PETITION OF MR. HENRY FORD CONTESTING THE ELECTION OF MR. TRUMAN H. NEWBERRY AS SENATOR FROM MICHIGAN FOR THE TERM BEGINNING MARCH 4, 1919, FOR A RECOUNT OF THE BALLOTS FOR THE OFFICE OF UNITED STATES SENATOR CAST AT THE ELECTION IN MICHIGAN HELD NOVEMBER 5, 1918, AND FOR OTHER RELIEF.

To the Senate of the United States of America of the Sixty-sixth Congress:

I, Henry Ford, of Dearborn, Michigan, the petitioner, do hereby give notice of my intention to contest and do hereby enter and file a contest of the election of Mr. Truman H. Newberry as Senator from Michigan to succeed the Honorable William Alden Smith; and I request and petition for a recount of the ballots cast at the election held in Michigan November 5, 1918, and an investigation of the unlawful uses by said Truman H. Newberry, and in his behalf by his agents and representatives, of large sums of money to influence the primary and election, and also of cases of undue influence and intimidation of voters at the election.

I beg to represent to your honorable body:

(1) That an election was held by the voters of Michigan on the 5th day of November, 1918, to elect a United States Senator from Michigan for the term beginning March 4, 1919. That Truman H. Newberry was the candidate on the Republican ticket, Henry Ford on the Democratic ticket, Edward O. Foss on the Socialist ticket, and William J. Faull on the Prohibition ticket.

(2) That the official canvass made by the State canvassing board showed 220,054 votes cast for said Newberry, 212,487 votes cast for said Henry Ford, 4,763 votes cast for said Foss, and 1,133 votes cast for said Faull, and that in pursuance of such canvass said board announced the result of the election to be that the above-mentioned number of votes were cast for each of the said candidates as stated above.

(3) That a certificate of election as such Senator has heretofore been issued to said Truman H. Newberry and he claims to have been duly elected such Senator, and he has heretofore caused his credentials as such to be offered to the United States Senate, namely, on or about the 14th day of December, 1918.

(4) That the primary election to select candidates by the respective parties for the office of such United States Senator was held on August 27, 1918; that in the primaries Mr. Truman H. Newberry was a candidate for the Republican nomination, your petitioner was candidate for the Republican nomination, also for the Democratic nomination, and he was nominated on the Democratic ticket, and said Truman H. Newberry was nominated on the Republican ticket. That large sums of money were unlawfully used and expended by and on behalf of said Newberry at said primary election and previous thereto to effect such election and to bring about his nomination and to purchase and procure the support and efforts of divers large numbers of persons and newspapers and periodicals. It was admitted by the committee, composed of a large number of men who acted in behalf of the nomination of Mr. Newberry, that said committee expended $176,568.08 and a sworn report to that effect was made under the State law by Mr. Frank W. Blair, the treasurer of said committee, and said report was filed with the county clerk of Wayne County, Michigan, where said Blair resided. And petitioner states upon information and belief that it can and will be proved that said Truman H. Newberry procured the appointment and selection of said committee and its members and was directly responsible for all its acts and that he was in constant communication with said committee and its members and knew of and approved its large expenditures of moneys and participated in its work. Upon information and belief petitioner says that large sums of money, aggregating many thousands of dollars, were expended by or on behalf of said Newberry's nomination, entirely outside of said $176,568.08 above mentioned as having been admitted, in the hiring of workers and other legitimate expenses and contrary to the laws of the United States and the State of Michigan in that behalf. That a memorial with respect to the above matters was filed with the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections in the month of November last by Mr. Elbert H. Fowler, a lawyer and reputable citizen of the city of Detroit, Michigan, who had acted as secretary of the nonpartisan Ford-for-Senator Club, in connection with the election, a copy of which memorial or statement is hereto attached and made a part hereof, and upon information and belief petitioner avers the statements thereof to be true.

(5) He further shows that the large sums of money expended by and in behalf of the nomination of Mr. Truman H. Newberry as hereinbefore stated, unlawfully enlisted the aid and support of large numbers of persons, papers, and periodicals throughout the State, and the results and influence of which extended down to and affected the election materially in favor of the said Truman H. Newberry, and that said great sums of money were expended in violation of the statutes of the United States and of the State of Michigan in such cases provided.

(6) The petitioner shows on information and belief that said Truman H. Newberry was not truly or lawfully elected to said office of the United States Senator and is not entitled to said office, and that your petitioner was elected and is entitled to said seat, and he specifies:

(a) That there are about 2,200 election precincts or districts in Michigan, and that nearly all of the election boards were composed wholly of Republicans, and great numbers of them were wholly composed of intense partisans of Mr. Newberry, and that only in a comparatively few of them were there at the said election any challengers or others acting in behalf of the Democratic candidates, and that every opportunity existed for election officials who were so inclined to miscount the ballots in favor of Mr. Newberry.

(b) That a large number of ballots were unlawfully counted for said Newberry, which, in fact and in truth, were cast for Henry Ford, namely, at least ten thousand.

(c) That large numbers of ballots lawfully cast for petitioner were not counted for him, but were unlawfully rejected by the various precinct election boards when making the counts, and they were not returned for petitioner as in truth they ought to have been, namely, at least ten thousand.

(d) That in many election precincts or districts the count by the election officers and boards was illegal, in favor of Newberry, false and fraudulent, and in violation of the election laws governing the count.

(e) Many of the ballots marked and cast for petitioner were counted and returned for the said Truman H. Newberry.

(f) In many precincts (particularly in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan) the provisions of law enacted to protect the sanctity and secrecy of the ballots and to promote a true and honest vote and count were flagrantly violated and many important and vital irregularities and departures from such provision occurred, thus vitiating under the law the vote of such precincts. As, for instance, the marking of ballots for voters by unauthorized third person, the exposure of ballots by the voters, the overseeing of the voting by mine bosses and superintendents and the like; all of which were conducted in the interests of said Truman H. Newberry, and the votes of such precincts should be rejected and thrown out.

(g) That many ballots in many precincts duly marked and cast for petitioner were rejected by the respective election boards and not counted at all.

(h) That many ballots bearing unlawful distinguishing marks were illegally and unlawfully counted for the said Truman H. Newberry.

(i) Many ballots duly marked and cast for your petitioner were wholly rejected and thrown out by many election boards on the unlawful and fraudulent pretext that they were not duly and properly marked for the petitioner, whereas in fact they were so marked and cast.

(j) Many ballots duly and properly marked and cast for the petitioner were rejected and thrown out by many election boards on the unlawful and fraudulent pretext that they bore distinguishing marks, whereas in fact they did not bear any unlawful distinguishing marks and ought to have been counted for your petitioner.

(k) Many ballots duly and lawfully marked and cast for petitioner were erroneously thrown out and not counted for petitioner by many of the said election boards under erroneous interpretations of their duties.

(l) Many ballots for said Truman H. Newberry were corruptly and unlawfully procured to be cast and counted for him by the unlawful use of money on his behalf.

(m) Large sums of money were unlawfully expended by and in behalf of said Truman H. Newberry to influence said election and cause votes to be cast for him that otherwise would not have been so cast.

(n) Large numbers of lawful voters were intimidated and prevented from voting at the said election by partisans and supporters of said Newberry who otherwise would have voted at the election and cast their votes for the petitioner, to wit, five thousand of such votes.

(o) Large numbers of lawful voters, employees of certain large corporations, were intimidated and unlawfully coerced by employers and their representatives into voting for said Newberry against their wills and preferences who otherwise would have cast their ballots for the petitioner.

(p) In a number of the counties the respective boards of county canvassers made and reported their canvasses without having or examining the poll books and tally sheets nor in any way verifying the number of original votes as cast or the number of voters voting at the respective precincts.

(q) That careful investigation by petitioner's directions have been made by reliable men since the election to ascertain as far as may be the detailed facts pertaining to the above statements and as to the conduct of counting in said election and from such investigations and from other information reaching the petitioner and his representatives he avers the foregoing statements to be true and he particularly specifies the following counties and election districts therein as the counties and districts where such irregularities, miscounting, and frauds were more flagrantly committed, namely: Kent, Bay, Kalamazoo, Wayne, Saginaw, Allegan, Antrim, Baraga, Barry, Benzie, Berrien, Calhoun, Cass, Charlevoix, Chippewa, Clare, Dickinson, Eaton, Emmet, Genesee, Gladwin, Gogebic, Gratiot, Hillsdale, Houghton, Huron, Ingham, Ionia, Iosco, Iron, Isabella, Jackson, Kalkaska, Keweenaw, Lapeer, Lenawee, Macomb, Marquette, Mason, Mecosta, Midland, Monroe, Montcalm, Montmorency, Muskegon, Newaygo, Oakland, Oceana, Osceola, Ottawa, Sanilac, St. Clair, St. Joseph, Tuscola, Van Buren, Washtenaw, Wexford; and that such irregularities and miscounts occurred in a more modified degree in nearly all the other counties of the State and that mistakes unfavorable to petitioner and in favor of the said Truman H. Newberry occurred in all of the counties.

(r) That upon a fair and lawful recount of the ballots cast at said election your petitioner would be decided to be duly and lawfully elected Senator from Michigan.

(s) That upon such a fair and lawful recount, and due allowances being made for such frauds, intimidations, and prevention of votes, petitioner would be decided and declared by your honorable body to have been duly and lawfully elected Senator from Michigan.

(7) Your petitioner shows that the ballots cast for the said office of United States Senator at said election have generally been preserved intact, with the exception of those cast in the cities of Saginaw, Marquette, and possibly one or two smaller localities, together with the poll books and tally sheets relating thereto, under the provisions of the several orders of court in that behalf in the two suits in equity brought by your petitioner for that purpose in the United States district court for each the eastern and western districts of Michigan, comprising the whole of said State; that as your petitioner is advised the ballots, poll books, and tally sheets, with the exceptions mentioned, are now generally held in the custody and possession of the officers designated by the law of the State of Michigan for such purposes awaiting action hereon by this Senate.

(8) And the petitioner further shows that he is advised that under the laws of Michigan there is no body or tribunal which has control of a recount except the United States Senate, and that his only adequate relief to preserve and recount the ballots lies in suitable action to that end by your honorable body.

(9) That petitioner has caused notice of his intention to contest the alleged election of said Truman H. Newberry to the United States Senate to be duly served upon the said Truman H. Newberry, viz, on the 2d day of January, 1919, and May 17, 1919.

(10) The petitioner hereby prays and requests the Senate to entertain his said contest; to provide for a recount of the said ballots and the due preservation of said ballots for the purpose of the recount and of evidence in the contest; and for a prompt investigation of said election and primary and of the matters hereinbefore set forth, and that said Truman H. Newberry be declared not elected, and also disqualified and not entitled to a seat because of the aforesaid violations of law; and that petitioner may be declared elected and entitled to said seat, and that he may have such further action of the Senate and its duly appointed committees and agents and such other relief as shall be conformable to justice, and as the premises shall warrant; and he will ever petition, etc.

HENRY FORD.

STATE OF MICHIGAN,
County of Wayne, ss:

Henry Ford being duly sworn, deposes and says that he has read the foregoing petition and notice, and that the same is true to the best of his knowledge, information, and belief.

STATE OF MICHIGAN,
County of Wayne, ss:

Robert E. Walter, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is a citizen of Michigan and a resident of the county of Wayne, Michigan; that he has read the foregoing petition and notice of contest and knows the contents thereof, and that paragraphs one, two, three, five, seven, eight, and ten are true; and deponent further says that he was a member of the Legislature of Michigan, viz, a senator for three successive terms, namely, from 1911 to 1917, and that he was one of a committee of three members of the legislature who conducted a recount of the votes cast in the 22nd senatorial district, comprising the whole of the county of Saginaw (which is one of the three or four largest counties in Michigan) in the year 1913. He further says that since the election of November 5, 1918, he has devoted considerable time to the investigation of the said election in the various parts of the State, and that he has traveled personally to various parts of the State in that work, and has received reports from a considerable number of other careful and reliable men who have devoted their time to the said work of investigation, and that every precaution has been taken to make such investigation thorough, reliable, and strictly according to the truth. And he further says that from such experiences above described and from his said investigations and the said reports he states that he has good reasons to believe, and does believe, that the allegations of the fourth, sixth, and ninth paragraphs of said petition and notice of contest are true. And he further says that the representatives of Mr. Ford have now a great abundance of evidence to establish Mr. Truman H. Newberry's personal connection with his said campaign committee described in the foregoing petition and notice and with the activities of said committee in his behalf, and that said campaign was conducted with his full knowledge, consent, and active cooperation. And he further says that said Ford's representatives have reliable proofs of large numbers of unlawful expenditures of money in said Truman H. Newberry's campaign involving large amounts in a great many portions of the State not set out or included in said report of Frank W. Blair, treasurer of said committee; and the said contestant's representatives are ready to produce such proofs and the witnesses to sustain the charges in the petition, but deponent deems it advisable and safest not to give the names of said additional witnesses for very obvious reasons.

He further says that contestant's representatives have reliable evidence of great activities on the part of the supporters of Mr. Newberry and his committee to suppress the evidence of said unlawful expenditures and of attempts to prevent disclosures by those having knowledge of the facts; and these proofs contestant's representatives are prepared to present to any committee authorized by the Senate to investigate the election.

NOVEMBER 15, 1918.

Hon. ATLEE POMERENE,
Chairman Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections,
Washington, D. C.

HONORABLE SIR: I am a Republican who was inclined to support Mr. Truman Newberry for Senator in the Michigan primary election until I personally saw evidence of the extravagant use of large sums of money, in which I felt to be unlawful amounts, to advance his candidacy. I then decided I could not support him in the primaries. Some weeks after the primaries I joined the Nonpartisan Ford-for-Senator Club, an organization composed largely of prominent Republicans who looked with disfavor upon the method used by Mr. Newberry and his committee to obtain the Republican nomination. I acted as secretary of this organization. Our membership was over 20,000 before the election of Nov. 5th.

As secretary of this organization I was in constant communication with prominent Republicans throughout the State of Michigan who saw the lavish expenditures of the Newberry committee and protested against them. From them and in other ways I have collected a large amount of information and reports, sufficient, I think, to convince your committee that an investigation of the campaign is necessary and ample, I hope, to form the basis for a complete investigation of the campaign.

It would seem that an investigation is absolutely necessary. In the words of Senator KENYON (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, 1918, page 11275): "If this enormous expenditure of money in senatorial campaigns is to go on without any challenge by Congress, then the poor man has no chance ever to secure a seat in this body and simply the rich can purchase a seat here."

There should be no objection to an investigation at this time. I feel that Senator TOWNSEND expressed the sentiment admirably when he said (CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, 1918, page 11274): "I would be glad to have a full and complete investigation, and if Mr. Newberry shall receive a certificate of election in November and charges are preferred against his title, I will not only vote to investigate, but I will vote to unseat him if corruption which secured his nomination is proven."

The information to form the basis of an investigation is sent you under separate cover.

Yours, very truly,

EHF ELBERT H. FOWLER.

In the matter of Michigan primary senatorial election of 1918.

DETROIT, MICHIGAN.

To the COMMITTEE ON PRIVILEGES AND ELECTIONS,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

HONORABLE SIRS: The following statement of evidence pertaining to the Newberry senatorial campaign is sent you in compliance with my telegram of November 14th and letter of November 15, 1918, and it is hoped that it will be of assistance to you as a basis for the proposed investigation.

The United States statute governing the matter is contained in First United States Compiled Statutes of 1916, pages 65 to 72, section 198, page 72, providing: "Every person wilfully violating any of the foregoing provisions shall upon conviction be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisonment not more than one year or both." Section 195 defines who shall be considered a candidate, which clearly includes a candidate for the nomination or election to the office of United States Senator. Subdivision 3 of section 195, which is printed on page 69, states that the candidate shall file with the Secretary of the Senate "a full, correct, and itemized statement of all moneys and things of value received by him or by anyone for him with his knowledge and consent from any source in aid or support of his candidacy, together with the names of all those who have furnished the same in whole or in part, and such statement shall contain a true and itemized account of all moneys and things of value given, contributed, expended, used, or promised by such candidate or by his agent, representative, or other person for and in his behalf with his knowledge and consent, together with the names of all those to whom money and all such gifts, contributions, payments, or promises were made for the purpose of procuring his nomination or election."

Subdivision 4 also contains the requirement for a similar statement to be filed within fifteen days after the primary. Subdivision 7, printed on pages 70 and 71, provides: "No candidate for Senator shall give, contribute, expend, use, or promise or cause to be given, contributed, expended, used, or promised, in procuring his nomination and election any sum in the aggregate in excess of the amount which he may lawfully give, contribute, expend, or promise under the laws of the State in which he resides: Provided, That no candidate for Senator of the United States shall give, contribute, expend, use, or promise any sum in the aggregate exceeding ten thousand dollars in any campaign for his nomination and election," etc.

The Michigan State statute is act No. 109 of the laws of 1913 on pages 189 et seq. entitled "An act to regulate and limit nomination expenses." Section 1 provides: "No sums of money shall be paid and no expenses authorized or incurred by or on behalf of any candidate to be paid by him, in order to secure or aid in securing his nomination to any public office in excess of 25 per cent of one year's compensation of the office." Further down in the same section it provides that no sum for election shall be expended beyond 25 per cent of one year's salary, etc. Section 2 provides that "every political committee should appoint a treasurer and that no money shall be expended except through him. Section 3 defines what are lawful expenditures. Section 4 provides that every candidate and every treasurer shall file full and complete statements within ten days after primary or election. Section 11 provides that no person shall pay any expenses or make any payments except to a candidate or a political committee, and section 12 provides that there shall be no receipts except in the true name of the donor. Section 13 provides that no moneys shall be expended from any anonymous source. Section 18 provides for fine and imprisonment for any wilful violation of the act.

From the various advertisements appearing in the Detroit and Michigan newspapers generally and from other sources it appears that a committee known as the Newberry-for-Senator committee ostensibly had charge of the management and conduct of Mr. Newberry's campaign. This committee for a period of several months, commencing in March of 1918 and continuing until after the primaries in August, maintained elaborate offices at rooms 308-310 Ford Building, Detroit.

Mr. A. A. Templeton, president of the Detroit Seamless Steel Tubes Company, acted as general chairman; Mr. Newberry is a large stockholder of this company, having originally financed Templeton in its organization; Mr. Paul H. King, an attorney and former receiver of the Pere Marquette Railroad, acted as executive chairman; Mr. Frank W. Blair, president of the Union Trust Company of Detroit, as treasurer; Charles A. Floyd as secretary; B. F. Emery, Harry O. Turner, James R. Davis, Terry T. Corliss, James F. McGregor, A. K. Moore, E. V. Chilson, James B. Haskins, B. F. Reed, assistant secretaries; director of publicity, H. A. Hopkins; publicity representatives,

Thomas Phillips, B. C. Wilson, H. W. Rose, A. G. MacEachron, E. E. Smith, and F. O. McLean; attorney, Paul R. Dailey.

The report just mentioned was filed by the committee in the office of Milton Oakman, county clerk of Wayne County, where Mr. Newberry resides, on September 6, 1918, in compliance with act 109 of the Michigan Public Acts of 1913. It is signed and verified by Mr. Frank W. Blair, treasurer, and appears set forth in full in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, issue of September 17, 1918, on pages 11267 and following. Mr. Newberry did not personally make any report under this act. Instead there appears in the miscellaneous files of the county clerk's office, attached to the committee report, a letter from Mr. Fred P. Smith, on the stationery of the executors of the Newberry estate, wherein the writer advises the county clerk that Mr. Truman H. Newberry states that he did not receive or disburse any money in connection with his campaign and that the writer, Mr. Smith, therefore assumes that no personal report is required of Mr. Newberry. In this letter it is also said that should Mr. Oakman, the county clerk, place a different interpretation on the act, upon information accordingly to the writer, Mr. Newberry will report the facts as theretofore reported to the Secretary of the United States Senate.

I am informed that Mr. Newberry, in compliance with the Federal act, made personal reports of his campaign expenditures both before and after the primary. The prior statement is contained on one of the regular blank forms prepared for the purpose by the Secretary of the Senate. On page two (2) thereof Mr. Newberry states: "The campaign for my nomination for United States Senator has been voluntarily conducted by friends in Michigan. I have taken no part in it whatever and no contributions or expenditures have been made with my knowledge or consent." On the third page he states "no promise or pledge has been made by me or by anyone on my behalf with my knowledge or consent relative to the appointment of any person to a position of trust, honor, or profit either in the county, State, or Nation, or in any political subdivision thereof, or in any private or corporate employment for the purpose of procuring the support of such person or of any person in my candidacy." Mr. Newberry signs the statement "Truman H. Newberry, 123 Lake Shore Road, Grosse Pointe Farms, Michigan." It was sworn to in the State of New York, county of New York, before Charles C. Schneider, notary public, August 14, 1918.

The primary was held on the 27th day of August. After the primaries Mr. Newberry filed another statement with the Secretary of the Senate, sworn to on the 29th day of August, 1918, in New York, before Louis B. Wolf, notary, etc. This was on the regular blank furnished by the Secretary of the Senate for statements to be made after the primary. In the blank space on the second page relative to contributions there is written in ink the following: "None with my knowledge and consent." With reference to expenditures, in the blank space therefor, is written the following: "None with my knowledge and consent. I have read a general public statement of Paul H. King concerning expenditures made by a voluntary committee of my friends, but these were made without my knowledge or consent."

The first public outcry against the unlawful use of money, as stated, in Mr. Newberry's campaign was made by the Honorable Luren D. Dickinson, a prominent candidate for governor, reelected lieutenant governor of Michigan on the Republican ticket in the recent election. His public protest was published in all the prominent newspapers in Michigan on or about August 22, 1918, and is as follows:

AUGUST 22nd, 1918.
Detroit News.

[Lieut. Gov. Dickinson's letter.]

Hon. TRUMAN H. NEWBERRY,
Brooklyn Navy Yard, New York.

DEAR SIR: Men of all walks of life who have the best interest of our State at heart believe the men who are conducting your campaign for United States Senator are conducting one that will bring one of the greatest scandals on our State that Michigan politics ever saw, and have asked me to take the lead in attempting to rid our State of this blight.

I note by your statement that you say you do not know of these things.

In giving you the information, I will give you the terms that I hear everywhere in the 62 counties in which I have been recently. I have always had the highest regard for you and must believe you will relieve the Republican Party and the State of a campaign that is now being likened to the notorious Lorimer campaign of Illinois a few years ago. The terms "boodle" and "rotten" seem to be general terms that I hear.

Every section of the State shows evidence of an expensive newspaper campaign, costing thousands and thousands of dollars. Thousands of men are liberally paid for work at many more thousands of dollars, an expensive suite of offices with a large force sending out hundreds of thousands of letters to influential voters at more thousands of dollars, thousands of autos already engaged for use on primary day at many more thousands, that practically every opponent of the primary system is backing your campaign, and that hundreds of the experts who have figured in or conducted for money the wet campaigns of the past are among the most active of your supporters.

Conservative estimates say everywhere from $250,000 to $500,000 is being used. The good people of the State are apparently powerless to give the voters these matters on short notice. In case you get the most votes you must expect to have the placing of your name on the election ballot contested. If by technical reasons you succeed, then you must expect every church and moral organization to work until election night to keep our fair State from the baneful influence that success following such methods would leave for years to come.

Should you be successful at the polls, you must expect a legislative investigation that would be demanded by an indignant populace. And if by technicalities you could overcome this you will probably have to face a Democratic Senate, which will unseat you, as it justly unseated Wm. Lorimer, jr., because of flagrant disregard in your behalf of Michigan's primary laws. The effect on the Republican Party with the people demanding cleaner things can not be estimated. Already we hear the Democrats will make the corrupting use of money in your campaign one of their great campaign arguments.

I can not believe you understand the situation, and if you did you would come to the rescue. I am, therefore, asking you, in behalf of the old Republican Party, clean politics, preservation of the primaries, social and business interest, to withdraw from this campaign and save the everlasting disgrace to the party and the State from a pollution that would stay for years. Hoping you may act favorably and retain the high esteem in which you have been held in the State, I am, sincerely, yours,

L. D. DICKINSON,
Lieutenant Governor of Michigan.

The other candidates on the Republican ticket in the late primary for the office of United States Senator from Michigan were: Honorable Chase S. Osborn, of Sault Ste. Marie, who had been twice governor of Michigan, Mr. Henry Ford, and Mr. William G. Simpson.

Representative Merlin Wiley, of Sault Ste. Marie, a member of the State Legislature of Michigan and Mr. Osborn's manager in the senatorial campaign, also made a public protest on the subject, which was published in the Detroit News on August 22, 1918, and probably in several other newspapers. It read as follows:

[Rep. Merlin Wiley's letter, of Sault Ste. Marie (Detroit News, Aug. 22nd, 1918).]

To the EDITOR: The campaign conducted on behalf of Mr. Newberry's candidacy for the United States Senate is a disgrace to the State of Michigan. Some one or some persons are incurring bills of tremendous size. They are incurred in behalf of Mr. Newberry's candidacy, and they must be paid by some one. Facts that can not be denied, because the knowledge of them is common property, attest the following:

First. A large and pretentious headquarters has been conducted for months in the Ford Building in Detroit with a clerical force of from 30 to 40. Office rent and competent clerks cost money in Detroit.

Second. A force of Newberry workers of the class who seldom work without pay have been scouring the State for months doing organization work for Mr. Newberry's candidacy. They cost money.

Third. Banquets in county after county have been held, sometimes under the guise of patriotic meetings and sometimes plainly and boldly for Newberry organization work, as was the case of the banquet at Lansing, when the local Newberry organization was perfected, and the banquet of the Newberry workers of St. Clair at Marine City last Friday night. These things cost money, and these are war times and not time for political banquets.

Fourth. A superexpensive advertising campaign is being carried on, handled by a Detroit advertising company and carrying almost continuous advertising in nearly every one of the 700 papers in the State, both secular and religious. This costs money and lots of it.

Fifth. It has been stated that a letter enclosing a return postal card, together with printed matter, has been sent to every voter in the State. This costs money.

Sixth. It is stated that the Newberry organization plans to have autos in every voting precinct to bring out the Newberry vote on election day. This will cost still more money.

Seventh. The old-time politicians, the opponents of the primary systems, and the "wets" are almost to a man supporting Mr. Newberry.

Eighth. Not a word, not a statement, not a single announcement of what he stands for has Mr. Newberry made. Even his campaign expense statement states that his campaign is being conducted by his friends without his knowledge or participation, and that no expenses have been incurred with his consent or authority.

These items cost money; more money than has ever been spent in a Michigan campaign; certainly in this generation. They are, in the amount expended, in plain and open violation of the letter and spirit of both the State and Federal laws. If Mr. Newberry should be elected, Michigan will have an election scandal worse than the Lorimer scandal in Illinois or the Stephenson scandal in Wisconsin. If this is to be the policy permitted in Michigan, then none but millionaires or men with millionaire friends who will pay the bills need apply for the office of governor or United States Senator, for only they can pay the price.

It is variously estimated that the entire cost of the Newberry organization and the conduct of Mr. Newberry's candidacy will have cost from one hundred thousand to one-half million of dollars. Certainly it will cost enough to down the fair name of Michigan for a generation to come, and if Mr. Newberry should be nominated he can never hope to take his seat. A United States Senate that, as Republican, would not permit William Lorimer to retain his seat, and would seriously challenge the right of Senator Stephenson to a seat therein, will never, when Democratic, permit Mr. Newberry, if elected, to be seated after such campaign expenditures.

It is time for Michigan to wake up and shield her honor by administering a defeat that will forever make impossible the repetition of such methods.

MERLIN WILEY.

LANSING, MICH., Aug. 20th, 1918.

Mr. Simpson, one of the Republican candidates for Senator, mentioned above, likewise made public charges directed against the expenditures of the Newberry committee. One of his statements published October 6, 1918, is as follows:

MR. SIMPSON ON THE SITUATION.

[From the Detroit News, Oct. 6, 1918.]

TO THE EDITOR: Now that the Michigan Republican and Democratic conventions have been held, the stage seems to be all set for November when the people can come forth and select their public servants. (?)

The army of 50,000 Republican joperatics in Michigan will be on the job as usual to do the bidding of the leaders who employ them, as will also as many of the Democrats who are equally fortunate in holding a political job.

And the plain citizen voter—the man with whom lies the balance of power for good or evil—the man who is interested in politics only as a means of self-government, what will he do?

The main contests, of course, will be the senatorship and the governorship.

At present mud is flying in all directions without apparently any desire for sensible reasoning, and the situation takes the phase of being grotesquely funny were it not a serious menace to our form of government.

Ford says he is obeying the commands of the President.

Newberry swears that he didn't know—that not even his wife told him that she spent $25,000 of his money to nominate him.

Osborn charges Newberry with being an ass, but says that he will support him to show he's a good sport, even though he lost and Newberry flagrantly violated the law.

Paul King—a lawyer, mind you—says he did it all for nothing, just as if he expected people to believe him.

Gov. Sleeper (and his name seems quite appropriate in view of the facts) says he is neutral.

The governor is doing the State a real service without cost by removing himself from office in the coming election. The people will do the rest.

And Attorney General Groesbeck—

On the 24th of June I saw Mr. Groesbeck in his office, where I had called to protest the large expenditure of money by the Newberry people.

"You are familiar with the corrupt-practices act, are you not?" I asked.

"Well," replied Mr. Groesbeck, "I ought to be; I am the attorney general of the State."

"I am well aware of that fact, Mr. Groesbeck," I replied. "As this effort is for a Federal office, I'm quite sure that if you won't act Mr. Kinnane will." He replied:

"Oh! You get me the facts, Simpson, and I'll act."

Mr. Groesbeck has had the facts for some time in the admission of Paul King, but has he acted?

On July 20 I wrote regarding the matter to Mr. Kinnane and Secretary Lansing at Washington.

Did they act? Not yet.

After the primary and on September 7 I again wrote to the governor and Secretary of State Vaughan, asking them to withhold Newberry's nomination certificate. Did they do so? The substance of the law which Newberry violated has been repeated so frequently in these columns it is unnecessary to do so again.

I think that every voter who has any conscience at all will admit that Newberry has violated the law, in spirit if not in fact, although it pleases the interests with which he is connected to provide all manner of excuses, among which they say it was to save the country from Ford.

The facts will show that they laid their expensive plans to deliberately violate the law long before Ford announced his candidacy, and there is no doubt in my mind but what they intended with premeditation to violate the law.

Only a few days ago the State board of canvassers met to determine the ballot, and said, as reported, that I should have gone to Prosecutor Jasnowski.

Always "passing the buck" to others. This seems to be the feature of joperatic's job when he is called upon to earn his salary—at least in Michigan.

Anyone who knows conditions, and who has gone to see Jasnowski on matters of this kind, knows what a fat chance I'd stand of having him do anything against the "combine," even if I could find the prosecutor.

Here is a letter from Will Hays, which contains nothing that he could object to having printed:

"MY DEAR MR. SIMPSON: Returning to-day after an absence, etc.

"The unlawful use of money in an election can not be too strongly condemned. There is no penalty too severe or excoriation too vigorous for anyone guilty of such practices.

"However, I am quite sure that there must be some mistake in the information which you have received regarding the unlawful use of money by Mr. Newberry. While I have known Mr. Newberry only a short time, I have known him by reputation a great many years, and, while, as I understand, he is quite 'well to do,' as you say, I am very sure he would not, under any circumstances indulge or condone nor permit the unlawful use of money in connection with his candidacy for the nomination or election to any office.

"I am glad, etc.

"Sincerely, yours, WILL H. HAYS."

As to Mr. Hays's complacent belief in the virtue of others, I have nothing to say.

How satisfying out of this mess of recriminations, senseless explanations and excuses stand forth, like living words of fire, that every youth in Michigan would do well to remember, these words of our lieutenant governor, the man who knew, felt in his heart his duty, and dared:

"I did what my conscience dictated; I have made enemies; but if I have opened the way for the correction of one of our greatest evils, I am abundantly repaid."

Personally, I refuse to believe other than in the old-fashioned goodness and honesty of the common people of Michigan.

If the evils of which Newberry and his friends are charged are allowed to continue it means that we, the common people, must submit to rule by a class, and that class the rich class. We therefore lose our much-vaunted democracy.

We read every day of current political difference, where matters of the war are brought into argument, which are not appeals to reason but appeals to prejudice and self-interest.

This line of argument gets us nowhere. Prominent business men are interviewed regarding Newberry and their replies printed. The major part of them, being of his class of self and social interest, say, in effect: "To hell with the law; we want Newberry elected." Those too cowardly to voice an opinion say nothing.

The attitude of Thursday's conventions shows that the reactionary element of the Republican Party is still in the saddle.

After two sad presidential defeats under their rule they have yet to learn their lesson, and the idea does not seem to percolate through their thick craniums that the voting Republican citizens will not have that type of politics.

It is not a question of loyalty between parties. It is a question of common honesty, decency, and principles among men.

If we can look ahead to the sure defeat of Newberry, we can see the just release of impending dishonor to the State—a dishonor invited by the leaders in power, and, as much as I would like to support Republican national principles, I can't vote a member of that party into an important office who has "hit below the belt" to get there.

Nor can I assist, by my vote, in the humiliation of the State which I love. If Newberry is selected, this will surely be forced upon us by the body of men whose privilege it is to refuse to accept questionable associates.

I hope to see every cowardly official connected with this disgraceful affair defeated at the coming election, and I shall vote for Bailey for governor, Dickinson for lieutenant governor, Masselink for secretary of state, and Baker for attorney general, and I know a few thousand others who will do the same.

As for the Senatorship, I won't vote for Newberry, and I can't vote for Ford. I opine, however, that Ford will be elected by at least 20,000 majority.

I'd rather be a prophet with a good vision than a forgetful historian that I might, perhaps, install a ray of hope in the minds and hearts of the common people of Michigan.

WM. G. SIMPSON.

I am informed that Mr. Simpson, as he states in his communication, did in fact file specific charges as to the unlawful use of money by Mr. Newberry, both with the attorney general of Michigan and the United States attorney for the eastern district of Michigan.

After the primaries, at which Mr. Newberry received the Republican nomination, Mr. Newberry wrote Mr. Osborn, in answer to a telegram, as follows:

NEWBERRY'S LETTER.

NEW YORK CITY,
Sunday, September 1, 1918.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR: Your cordial telegram assuring me of your earnest support is all that was needed to insure the defeat of Ford in November. I fully realize that my personality is submerged in the issues that confront our party in our State. Many times in the past few months I have envied your ability and privilege to talk, and when your voice rang clear and strong throughout State and Nation on the menace of Ford I wanted to wire you godspeed in your patriotic work.

Your deeply appreciated telegram of support helps me to visualize the statesman, the sportsman (hunter), and gentleman that I have always known you to be.

Cordially, yours, TRUMAN H. NEWBERRY.

In reply to this Mr. Osborn wrote him an open letter which was published generally throughout Michigan, and which reads as follows:

SEPTEMBER 17, 1918.

MY DEAR COMMANDER: I have read your letter. Thank you for your sentiments. I shall support you. Already I have straightened out entanglements that would have been hurtful to your success. I am not interested in you personally a particle. The entire matter is so far beyond personal consideration and transcends individual proportions to an extent that only public welfare may be thought of. You can be elected; no doubt you will be. My idea is that the thing for you to do is to honestly confess that you broke the law and that you knew all about the campaign, but that you did not realize the enormity of your offense. In such a position you would be intrenched in honesty, I fully believe. And an indulgent people would forgive you, and fight for you, because of the past services they think you have given and what they have been told you are giving now. In addition this action would make for your name an honorable place in the history of Michigan. Otherwise the future will curse you.

The plea can not be honestly made that you spent money in excess because you were fighting Ford, because you had begun your reckless campaign long before Ford was mentioned and had already transgressed the law. Nor can you plead "you did not know." That would prove you to be both an ass and a liar, which I choose to think you are not. I am for you only to save the Nation and the State from the curse of Fordism. A vote for Ford is a vote for the Kaiser right now, as I view the case.

Yours, truly, CHAS. S. OSBORN.

Coming now to the facts as to Mr. Newberry's connection with the work of the committee, I am informed and believe that he was personally active in organizing his own campaign, and that he conducted the same through the Newberry committee. This connection is shown by many facts and witnesses, as I am informed and believe, and among other evidence of witnesses, as follows:

Chief manager and intimate friend of Mr. Newberry was Mr. Fred Cody, who has an office in the down-town section of New York, and who ostensibly is an insurance man, but who is principally a lobbyist for the American Telegraph and Telephone Company, the American Book Company, Standard Oil Company, and other large and important Wall Street interests.

Mr. Cody was active, as I am informed and believe, from before the beginning of the organizing until after the election, and was constantly in communication with and in the office of the committee and in and out the apartment and office of Mr. Newberry, conferring and giving directions with respect to the campaign.

Mr. Cody at the outset of the campaign went to Washington and, at the direction of Mr. Newberry, tendered the appointment of manager of the campaign to Mr. Jay G. Hayden, Washington correspondent of the Detroit News. Mr. Cody took Mr. Hayden to New York to see Mr. Newberry, where the appointment was tendered to Mr. Hayden by Mr. Newberry personally. The whole subject was gone into at great length between Mr. Newberry, Mr. Hayden, and Mr. Cody, with prospect of his making a success of the campaign. Mr. Hayden finally declined the position.

Subsequently, in February of 1918, Mr. Cody, as I am informed and believe, arranged an interview between Mr. Milton Oakman, Mr. Robert Oakman, and others of Detroit with Mr. Newberry at the Biltmore. The parties all met there and discussed fully the prospects for a successful campaign of Mr. Newberry, the amounts of money that would be required, and the place of manager was tendered to Milton Oakman, as I am informed and believe.

Mr. Milton Oakman acted as manager for a time, as I am informed, but subsequently a more elaborate organization was organized and conducted under Mr. Templeton and Mr. Paul King. Mr. Milton Oakman continued to act for Mr. Newberry in Wayne County (Detroit) until after the primary election. Mr. Oakman had been sheriff of Wayne County twice, and also then, and is still, clerk of Wayne County, and the leader of the dominant Republican faction in Wayne County. Very scandalous stories have been in circulation as to the large amounts of money expended by Mr. Oakman on behalf of Mr. Newberry. If such were expended, they are not set forth in the accounts of the committee.

Mrs. Louisa Delamater, a stenographer, now employed at 316 Moffat Block, Detroit, Michigan, states she was employed in the Newberry campaign headquarters at the Ford Building from about the 5th of March until April 20, 1918; that during her employment therein Mr. Newberry at least twice to her personal knowledge was in the Detroit campaign office, and that on the first visit she saw Mr. Emery show Mr. Newberry through the entire suite of about eight offices, pointing out to him things of interest as Mr. Newberry was shown through. She also says that she knows that railroad reservations to New York and hotel accommodations were made for persons in the Detroit office who went to New York for the purpose of consulting Newberry about campaign methods.

Mrs. Delamater also states that Miss Margaret Nevin was the private secretary at campaign headquarters for Paul King, and that she must also have seen Newberry in that office. After Mrs. Delamater ceased working for the campaign committee a Miss Chappell was employed there. When Mrs. Delamater was there Mr. Emery was the office manager. She believes he had something to do with one of the Detroit draft boards. Another of the stenographers who was there while Mrs. Delamater was employed is Ruth Goldstein, of 111 Edmund Street, Detroit, Michigan; also a Florence Shepiro.

According to Mrs. Delamater, Miss Nevin wrote letters on Mr. Newberry's private stationery, which she sent by parcel post to New York, for Mr. Newberry's signature. Mrs. Delamater herself wrote letters to railroads to make reservations to New York for Mr. Templeton and Mr. King; also letters to New York making appointments for Mr. King with Mr. Newberry.

I am informed that Thomas G. Smythe, of Detroit, Michigan, before the primaries saw Mr. Newberry in the offices of the committee from a window in the Moffat Block, which is directly opposite the office of the committee in the Ford Building and not over thirty feet therefrom.

I am also informed and believe that Mr. Thomas Phillips, who was formerly employed on the staff of the Detroit News, was induced to take a position with the Newberry committee at a salary that is nearly twice the sum that he received from the Detroit News; that he went to New York and consulted with Mr. Newberry with reference to the preparation of advertisements to appear in Michigan newspapers; that he was in constant communication with Mr. Newberry while writing these intimate advertisements, and that Mr. Newberry cooperated with him in their preparation.

Mr. Clarence L. Sibbens, 1224 Ford Building, Detroit, Michigan, was Paul King's personal secretary during the campaign; he traveled all over the State with King before the primaries, and also went with him to New York at different times. He is a stenographer and is now employed in the office of Mr. Fred P. Smith, in charge of the offices of the executors of the Newberry estate. Sibbens has probably been taken into the regular employ of the Newberry family. These offices were used for private dictation of King, Emery, and others of the committee, I am informed and believe.

It can be shown without question that Mr. Newberry was in constant touch with the committee almost daily by telephone, telegraph, and written communications, receiving practically continuous reports of the work of the committee and communicating with its various members both in Detroit and at New York, entertaining them at the Biltmore in New York, and communicating with them verbally, by writing and by telegraph, and also through Mr. Frederick Cody. This can be shown by examination of the following witnesses, as I am informed and believe: Templeton, King, Blair, and the various assistant secretaries above mentioned.

I have been apprised through the press that a Federal grand jury investigation on this subject was held in New York City preceding the Michigan primary. In this connection it was stated in the dispatches that the following persons most closely and directly associated with Mr. Newberry in the campaign refused to testify, and were thereafter ordered to testify by two different Federal judges; that they persisted in their refusal; namely: A. A. Templeton, general chairman; Frank W. Blair, treasurer; and Thomas P. Phillips, publicity agent. It was also stated in the newspapers that the following persons, called as witnesses before the same grand jury, indicated that they would likewise refuse to testify, following the course of the three witnesses mentioned. These others, who were not committed, include the following: John S. Newberry, a brother of the candidate, who furnished upwards of ninety-nine thousand dollars ($99,000.00) of the committee moneys; Paul H. King, the Michigan manager of the campaign; Milton Oakman, campaign manager for Wayne County; and H. A. Hopkins, director of publicity.

Besides the upwards of one hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars ($175,000.00) expended and admitted by the committee to have been expended, I have been informed through a number of persons throughout Michigan that other large amounts of money were expended, which moneys are not shown or accounted for by the committee, and I am informed and believe that these facts can be substantiated by a large number of witnesses, among whom are the following:

William Moore, of Wayne, Michigan.
Mr. Jameson, attorney, Wayne, Michigan.
Mr. Harrison (whose full name can be obtained), Wayne, Mich.
Frank Schumaker, Ann Arbor, Michigan.
Frank Newton (late candidate for Congress from the 2nd district), Ypsilanti, Mich.
Mr. Owen, ex-postmaster, Ypsilanti, Michigan.
Thomas M. Ward, 1202 Houseman Building, Grand Rapids, Mich.
George Welsh, Grand Rapids, Michigan.
G. A. (Tennie) Daniels, George Rodgers, James Quinlan, Oscar Kilstron (of the Bolo Club), William J. Mickels, Robert G. Bell (county clerk), George Reed (clerk of police court), Dan Kennedy, William Grove, James Healy, all of Grand Rapids, Michigan.
Neal McMillan, of Rockford, Kent County, Michigan.
Chas. H. Bender, Grand Rapids, Michigan.
S. F. Bernard, Battle Creek, Michigan.
Charles Biggers, Marshall, Mich.
John La Rue, of Lakeview, Montcalm County, Mich.
Mr. Kennedy, postmaster at Lakeview, Mich.
F. M. Lothrop, probably of Lakeview, but whose exact address can be obtained.
E. J. Bowman, Greenville, Mich.
J. W. Hoskins, of Howard City, Mich.
William T. Hosner, of Romeo, Mich.
Judge James G. Tucker, of Mount Clemens.
Thomas Barkworth and John Miner, both of Jackson, Mich.
C. J. De Land, Jackson, Mich.
Emery Mills, Monroe, Mich.
Lee Wilbur, Ypsilanti, Mich.
Mr. Hawthorn, Wayne, Mich.
Ira Wilson, Plymouth, Mich.
Phillip Cottrell, Jackson, Mich.
Ivan George English, publisher of Daily Mirror, Escanaba, Mich.
Albert J. Young, Escanaba, Mich.
Judd Yelland, Escanaba, Mich.
Sherman Olmstead, Midland, Mich.
Rogers Andrews, Menominee, Mich.
Mr. Rice, attorney, Battle Creek, Mich.
Ike Bloom, Kalamazoo, Mich.
Bill Yearnb, Cadillac, Mich.

Many other names of men can be obtained if an investigation finds it necessary.

I have reason to believe that witnesses may be obtained in nearly every county of the State showing that large sums of money were expended in them before the primaries which are not set forth or included in the committee report.

I am forwarding to the committee a copy of the Saginaw Valley Farmer, a prominent farm newspaper, for August, 1918. In it you will see a sample of the lavish expenditures of money on behalf of Mr. Newberry. You will find advertisements and reading articles on ten pages of this issue, which contains only twenty-four pages in all.

Newberry's campaign was advertised in practically all of the newspapers of the State of Michigan in the most lavish manner.

I am also informed and believe that several speakers were engaged for the primary campaign whose names do not appear in the committee report under their list of expenditures. One of these speakers, whom I have been informed was engaged to travel in the western part of the State of Michigan, was Mr. Horatio Earle, of Detroit. I have been unable to find his name in the committee report.

A great deal of evidence in addition to the suggestions above made could be obtained by a more thorough investigation.

Respectfully submitted.

ELBERT H. FOWLER.

The following is taken from the inaugural address of Lieut. Governor Dickinson, of Michigan, which was delivered in the senate of Michigan on Wednesday, January 1, 1919. The senate of Michigan is composed entirely of Republicans, and Lieut. Governor Dickinson is himself a Republican, who announced in the public press just before election that he would vote for Mr. Newberry. The following clipping contains all that Lieut. Governor Dickinson said in his inaugural upon the subject.

Lieut. Gov. Dickinson in his inaugural covers a number of subjects with a few words each. With reference to the Newberry campaign he said:

PRIMARY CHANGES ASKED.

Primary elections will call for action on your part. From what has occurred during the past political campaign it would afford me relief if I could pass by this question, but experience teaches that the disagreeable acts of an office are the ones people demand the most strenuously. More communications on this line asking for legislative action have come to me by far than all others combined, and almost without exception Republicans not only from all parts of Michigan but from other States.

This you know is the outgrowth of a candidacy that doubtless cost more money than ever before was paid for a nomination for office in all the world's history.

CLAIMS G. O. P. NEAR DEFEAT.

You also know this candidacy from one of the best known families of the State, of a man of high standing, unquestioned integrity, and acknowledged ability, in the face of an abnormally large party majority, came near an ignominious defeat through the resentment from nearly every voting precinct in the State, of the farmer, the laborer, the business and professional voter, because of the enormous amount of money acknowledged to have been used in his behalf and generally believed to have been used contrary to laws, several sections of which were enacted for the stipulated purpose of restricting the use of large sums of money in campaigns.

The case is now agitating Congress, the Federal and Michigan courts, with a strong suspicion by many that for political purposes it will be there suspended as long as possible before the country at large as an unsavory act of Republican primary in Michigan, hoping by such course to produce an effect that will deprive the party of the majority secured at the November elections.

SHOULD AMEND PRIMARY ACT.

If the courts had given a decision as to who is to blame for this undesirable condition, it would have cleared the way for your action. If, however, there is any question as to violation of the primary statute, it should be so amended that the interpretation relative to restrictions in the use of money and who to blame for violation shall be made plain and simple.

In legislative action I believe the utmost caution should be used to eliminate the name of any candidate and avoid all appearance of politics in considering this subject. The individual or even party interests are of but little note when the sanctity of the ballot and safety of democracy are at stake.

REPORTS MANY COMPLAINTS.

From almost every part of the State have come to me pleas that this legislature make it impossible in the future to witness the sale of a public office on the auction block, but rather that the laborer, the farmer, the business or professional voter, however humble, but able and respectable, may have a chance with the man of millions.

The war's end has been termed a victory for safe democracy. No democracy is safe with a polluted primary or election, made so by money or otherwise. And no great amount of money will be used except for the purpose of making votes, and to make votes by the use of money is polluting, corrupting, and the user should be treated as a baser criminal than the laborer who steals a sack of flour for his family.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
District of Columbia, ss:

Howell Van Auken, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is of full age; that on, to wit, Tuesday, May 20, 1919, at, to wit, office number 411, Senate Office Building, city of Washington, said District of Columbia, he served upon Mr. Truman H. Newberry a true copy of each the following papers: (1) Notice of Mr. Henry Ford, dated May 17, 1919, as to the contest of the election of Mr. Truman H. Newberry as Senator from Michigan, and (2) petition of Mr. Henry Ford, dated May 17, 1919, to the Senate of the United States, for a contest of said election of Mr. Newberry, for a recount of the ballots for such election cast in Michigan at the election of November 5, 1918, and for other relief, the originals of which said notice and petition were filed in the Senate of the United States on, to wit, May 20, 1919, by handing said true copies so served to the aforesaid Mr. Newberry personally.

Deponent further says that upon said occasion Mr. Newberry acknowledged to deponent that he, Mr. Newberry, had received the duplicate originals of said notice and petition, being those sent to him by registered mail from Detroit, Michigan, as set forth in the proof of mailing filed in the Senate of the United States along with the other original of said notice and petition filed in said Senate, as first aforesaid.

HOWELL VAN AUKEN.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 20th day of May, A. D. 1919.

[SEAL.] F. GWYNN GARDINER,
Notary Public, District of Columbia.

My commission expires March 15, 1923.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, out of order, I ask leave to introduce a joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States providing for woman suffrage.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 1) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States conferring upon women the right of suffrage was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Woman Suffrage.

MESSAGE OF THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. Sharkey, one of the secretaries of the President of the United States, appeared and said:

Mr. President, the President of the United States directs me to deliver to the Senate a message in writing.

The message was received by the Secretary of the Senate and handed to the Vice President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States.

The Assistant Secretary (Henry M. Rose) read the message, as follows:

GENTLEMEN OF THE CONGRESS: I deeply regret my inability to be present at the opening of the extraordinary session of the Congress. It still seems to be my duty to take part in the counsels of the peace conference and contribute what I can to the solution of the innumerable questions to whose settlement it has had to address itself: for they are questions which affect the peace of the whole world and from them, therefore, the United States can not stand apart. I deemed it my duty to call the Congress together at this time because it was not wise to postpone longer the provisions which must be made for the support of the Government. Many of the appropriations which are absolutely necessary for the maintenance of the Government and the fulfillment of its varied obligations for the fiscal year 1919–20 have not yet been made; the end of the present fiscal year is at hand; and action upon these appropriations can no longer be prudently delayed. It is necessary, therefore, that I should immediately call your attention to this critical need. It is hardly necessary for me to urge that it may receive your prompt attention.

I shall take the liberty of addressing you on my return on the subjects which have most engrossed our attention and the attention of the world during these last anxious months, since the armistice of last November was signed, the international settlements which must form the subject matter of the present treaties of peace and of our national action in the immediate future. It would be premature to discuss them or to express a judgment about them before they are brought to their complete formulation by the agreements which are now being sought at the table of the conference. I shall hope to lay them before you in their many aspects so soon as arrangements have been reached.

I hesitate to venture any opinion or press any recommendation with regard to domestic legislation while absent from the United States and out of daily touch with intimate sources of information and counsel. I am conscious that I need, after so long an absence from Washington, to seek the advice of those who have remained in constant contact with domestic problems and who have known them close at hand from day to day; and I trust that it will very soon be possible for me to do so. But there are several questions pressing for consideration to which I feel that I may, and indeed must, even now direct your attention, if only in general terms. In speaking of them I shall, I dare say, be doing little more than speak your own thoughts. I hope that I shall speak your own judgment also.

The question which stands at the front of all others in every country amidst the present great awakening is the question of labour; and perhaps I can speak of it with as great advantage while engrossed in the consideration of interests which affect all countries alike as I could at home and amidst the interests which naturally most affect my thought, because they are the interests of our own people.

By the question of labour I do not mean the question of efficient industrial production, the question of how labour is to be obtained and made effective in the great process of sustaining populations and winning success amidst commercial and industrial rivalries. I mean that much greater and more vital question, how are the men and women who do the daily labour of the world to obtain progressive improvement in the conditions of their labour, to be made happier, and to be served better by the communities and the industries which their labour sustains and advances? How are they to be given their right advantage as citizens and human beings?

We cannot go any further in our present direction. We have already gone too far. We cannot live our right life as a nation or achieve our proper success as an industrial community if capital and labour are to continue to be antagonistic instead of being partners. If they are to continue to distrust one another and contrive how they can get the better of one another. Or, what perhaps amounts to the same thing, calculate by what form and degree of coercion they can manage to extort on the one hand work enough to make enterprise profitable, on the other justice and fair treatment enough to make life tolerable. That bad road has turned out a blind alley. It is no thoroughfare to real prosperity. We must find another, leading in another direction and to a very different destination. It must lead not merely to accommodation but also to a genuine cooperation and partnership based upon a real community of interest and participation in control.

There is now in fact a real community of interest between capital and labour, but it has never been made evident in action. It can be made operative and manifest only in a new organization of industry. The genius of our business men and the sound practical sense of our workers can certainly work such a partnership out when once they realize exactly what it is that they seek and sincerely adopt a common purpose with regard to it.

Labour legislation lies, of course, chiefly with the states; but the new spirit and method of organization which must be effected are not to be brought about by legislation so much as by the common counsel and voluntary cooperation of capitalist, manager, and workman. Legislation can go only a very little way in commanding what shall be done. The organization of industry is a matter of corporate and individual initiative and of practical business arrangement. Those who really desire a new relationship between capital and labour can readily find a way to bring it about; and perhaps Federal legislation can help more than state legislation could.

The object of all reform in this essential matter must be the genuine democratization of industry, based upon a full recognition of the right of those who work, in whatever rank, to participate in some organic way in every decision which directly affects their welfare or the part they are to play in industry. Some positive legislation is practicable. The Congress has already shown the way to one reform which should be worldwide, by establishing the eight-hour day as the standard day in every field of labour over which it can exercise control. It has sought to find the way to prevent child labour, and will, I hope and believe, presently find it. It has served the whole country by leading the way in developing the means of preserving and safeguarding life and health in dangerous industries. It can now help in the difficult task of giving a new form and spirit to industrial organization by coordinating the several agencies of conciliation and adjustment which have been brought into existence by the difficulties and mistaken policies of the present management of industry, and by setting up and developing new Federal agencies of advice and information which may serve as a clearing house for the best experiments and the best thought on this great matter, upon which every thinking man must be aware that the future development of society directly depends. Agencies of international counsel and suggestion are presently to be created in connection with the league of nations in this very field; but it is national action and the lightened policy of individuals, corporations, and societies within each nation that must bring about the actual reforms. The members of the committees on labour in the two houses will hardly need suggestions from me as to what means they shall seek to make the Federal Government the agent of the whole nation in pointing out and, if need be, guiding the process of reorganization and reform.

I am sure that it is not necessary for me to remind you that there is one immediate and very practical question of labour that we should meet in the most liberal spirit. We must see to it that our returning soldiers are assisted in every practicable way to find the places for which they are fitted in the daily work of the country. This can be done by developing and maintaining upon an adequate scale the admirable organization created by the Department of Labor for placing men seeking work; and it can also be done, in at least one very great field, by creating new opportunities for individual enterprise. The Secretary of the Interior has pointed out the way by which returning soldiers may be helped to find and take up land in the hitherto undeveloped regions of the country which the Federal Government has already prepared or can readily prepare for cultivation and also on many of the cutover or neglected areas which lie within the limits of the older states; and I once more take the liberty of recommending very urgently that his plans shall receive the immediate and substantial support of the Congress.

Peculiar and very stimulating conditions await our commerce and industrial enterprise in the immediate future. Unusual opportunities will presently present themselves to our merchants and producers in foreign markets, and large fields for profitable investment will be opened to our free capital. But it is not only of that that I am thinking; it is not chiefly of that that I am thinking. Many great industries prostrated by the war wait to be rehabilitated, in many parts of the world where what will be lacking is not brains or willing hands or organizing capacity or experienced skill, but machinery and raw materials and capital. I believe that our business men, our merchants, our manufacturers, and our capitalists, will have the vision to see that prosperity in one part of the world ministers to prosperity everywhere: that there is in a very true sense a solidarity of interest throughout the world of enterprise, and that our dealings with the countries that have need of our products and our money will teach them to deem us more than ever friends whose necessities we seek in the right way to serve.

Our new merchant ships, which have in some quarters been feared as destructive rivals, may prove helpful rivals, rather, and common servants, very much needed and very welcome. Our great shipyards, new and old, will be so opened to the use of the world that they will prove immensely serviceable to every maritime people in restoring, much more rapidly than would otherwise have been possible, the tonnage wantonly destroyed in the war. I have only to suggest that there are many points at which we can facilitate American enterprise in foreign trade by opportune legislation and make it easy for American merchants to go where they will be welcomed as friends rather than as dreaded antagonists. America has a great and honorable service to perform in bringing the commercial and industrial undertakings of the world back to their old scope and swing again, and putting a solid structure of credit under them. All our legislation should be friendly to such plans and purposes.

And credit and enterprise alike will be quickened by timely and helpful legislation with regard to taxation. I hope that the Congress will find it possible to undertake an early reconsideration of Federal taxes, in order to make our system of taxation more simple and easy of administration and the taxes themselves as little burdensome as they can be made and yet suffice to support the Government and meet all its obligations. The figures to which those obligations have arisen are very great indeed, but they are not so great as to make it difficult for the nation to meet them, and meet them, perhaps, in a single generation, by taxes which will neither crush nor discourage. These are not so great as they seem, not so great as the immense sums we have had to borrow, added to the immense sums we have had to raise by taxation, would seem to indicate; for a very large proportion of those sums were raised in order that they might be loaned to the governments with which we were associated in the war, and those loans will, of course, constitute assets, not liabilities, and will not have to be taken care of by our taxpayers.

The main thing we shall have to care for is that our taxation shall rest as lightly as possible on the productive resources of the country, that its rates shall be stable, and that it shall be constant in its revenue-yielding power. We have found the main sources from which it must be drawn. I take it for granted that its mainstays will henceforth be the income tax, the excess-profits tax, and the estate tax. All these can so be adjusted to yield constant and adequate returns and yet not constitute a too grievous burden on the taxpayer. A revision of the income tax has already been provided for by the act of 1918, but I think you will find that further changes can be made to advantage both in the rates of the tax and in the method of its collection. The excess-profits tax need not long be maintained at the rates which were necessary while the enormous expenses of the war had to be borne, but it should be made the basis of a permanent system which will reach undue profits without discouraging the enterprise and activity of our business men. The tax on inheritances ought, no doubt, to be reconsidered in its relation to the fiscal systems of the several States, but it certainly ought to remain a permanent part of the fiscal system of the Federal Government also.

Many of the minor taxes provided for in the revenue legislation of 1917 and 1918, though no doubt made necessary by the pressing necessities of the war time, can hardly find sufficient justification under the easier circumstances of peace and can now happily be got rid of. Among these, I hope you will agree, are the excises upon various manufacturers and the taxes upon retail sales. They are unequal in the incidence on different industries and on different individuals. Their collection is difficult and expensive. Those which are levied upon articles sold at retail are largely evaded by the readjustment of retail prices. On the other hand, I should assume that it is expedient to maintain a considerable range of indirect taxes, and the fact that alcoholic liquors will presently no longer afford a source of revenue by taxation makes it the more necessary that the field should be carefully restudied in order that equivalent sources of revenue may be found which it will be legitimate and not burdensome to draw upon. But you have at hand in the Treasury Department many experts who can advise you upon the matters much better than I can. I can only suggest the lines of a permanent and workable system, and the placing of the taxes where they will least hamper the life of the people.

There is, fortunately, no occasion for undertaking in the immediate future any general revision of our system of import duties. No serious danger of foreign competition now threatens American industries. Our country has emerged from the war less disturbed and less weakened than any of the European countries which are our competitors in manufacture. Their industrial establishments have been subjected to greater strain than ours, their labour force to a more serious disorganization, and this is clearly not the time to seek an organized advantage. The work of mere reconstruction will, I am afraid, tax the capacity and the resources of their people for years to come. So far from there being any danger or need of accentuated foreign competition, it is likely that the conditions of the next few years will greatly facilitate the marketing of American manufactures abroad. Least of all should we depart from the policy adopted in the Tariff Act of 1913, of permitting the free entry into the United States of the raw materials needed to supplement and enrich our own abundant supplies.

Nevertheless, there are parts of our tariff system which need prompt attention. The experiences of the war have made it plain that in some cases too great reliance on foreign supply is dangerous, and that in determining certain parts of our tariff policy domestic considerations must be borne in mind which are political as well as economic. Among the industries to which special consideration should be given is that of the manufacture of dyestuffs and related chemicals. Our complete dependence upon German supplies before the war made the interruption of trade a cause of exceptional economic disturbance. The close relation between the manufacturer of dyestuffs, on the one hand, and of explosives and poisonous gases, on the other, moreover, has given the industry an exceptional significance and value. Although the United States will gladly and unhesitatingly join in the programme of international disarmament, it will, nevertheless, be a policy of obvious prudence to make certain of the successful maintenance of many strong and well-equipped chemical plants. The German chemical industry, with which we will be brought into competition, was and may well be again, a thoroughly knit monopoly capable of exercising a competition of a peculiarly insidious and dangerous kind.

The United States should, moreover, have the means of properly protecting itself whenever our trade is discriminated against by foreign nations, in order that we may be assured of that equality of treatment which we hope to accord and to promote the world over. Our tariff laws as they now stand provide no weapon of retaliation in case other governments should enact legislation unequal in its bearing on our products as compared with the products of other countries. Though we are as far as possible from desiring to enter upon any course of retaliation, we must frankly face the fact that hostile legislation by other nations is not beyond the range of possibility, and that it may have to be met by counter legislation. This subject has, fortunately, been exhaustively investigated by the United States Tariff Commission. A recent report of that commission has shown very clearly that we lack and that we ought to have the instruments necessary for the assurance of equal and equitable treatment. The attention of the Congress has been called to this matter on past occasions, and the past measures which are now recommended by the Tariff Commission are substantially the same that have been suggested by previous administrations. I recommend that this phase of the tariff question receive the early attention of the Congress.

Will you not permit me, turning from these matters, to speak once more and very earnestly of the proposed amendment to the Constitution which would extend the suffrage to women and which passed the House of Representatives at the last session of the Congress? It seems to me that every consideration of justice and of public advantage calls for the immediate adoption of that amendment and its submission forthwith to the legislatures of the several States. Throughout all the world this long delayed extension of the suffrage is looked for; in the United States, longer, I believe, than anywhere else, the necessity for it, and the immense advantage of it to the national life, has been urged and debated, by women and men who saw the need for it and urged the policy of it when it required steadfast courage to be so much beforehand with the common conviction; and I, for one, covet for our country the distinction of being among the first to act in a great reform.

The telegraph and telephone lines will of course be returned to their owners so soon as the retransfer can be effected without administrative confusion, so soon, that is, as the change can be made with least possible inconvenience to the public and to the owners themselves. The railroads will be handed over to their owners at the end of the calendar year; if I were in immediate contact with the administrative questions which must govern the retransfer of the telegraph and telephone lines, I could name the exact date for their return also. Until I am in direct contact with the practical questions involved I can only suggest that in the case of the telegraphs and telephones, as in the case of the railways, it is clearly desirable in the public interest that some legislation should be considered which may tend to make of these indispensable instrumentalities of our modern life a uniform and coordinated system which will afford those who use them as complete and certain means of communication with all parts of the country as has so long been afforded by the postal system of the Government, and at rates as uniform and intelligible. Expert advice is, of course, available in this very practical matter, and the public interest is manifest. Neither the telegraph nor the telephone service of the country can be said to be in any sense a national system. There are many confusions and inconsistencies of rates. The scientific means by which communication by such instrumentalities could be rendered more thorough and satisfactory has not been made full use of. An exhaustive study of the whole question of electrical communication and of the means by which the central authority of the nation can be used to unify and improve it, if undertaken, by the appropriate committees of the Congress, would certainly result, indirectly even if not directly, in a great public benefit.

The demobilization of the military forces of the country has progressed to such a point that it seems to me entirely safe now to remove the ban upon the manufacture and sale of wines and beers, but I am advised that without further legislation I have not the legal authority to remove the present restrictions. I therefore recommend that the act approved November 21, 1918, entitled, "An act to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to carry out, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919, the purposes of the act entitled 'An act to provide further for the national security and defense by stimulating agriculture and facilitating the distribution of agricultural products,' and for other purposes," be amended or repealed in so far as it applies to wines and beers.

I sincerely trust that I shall very soon be at my post in Washington again to report upon the matters which made my presence at the peace table apparently imperative, and to put myself at the service of the Congress in every matter of administration or counsel that may seem to demand executive action or advice.

WOODROW WILSON.

20 MAY, 1919.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a petition of the Private Soldiers and Sailors' Legion of the United States of America, praying for the enactment of legislation to provide for the employment on public works of all soldiers, sailors, marines, and war workers who are unable to secure employment in private business, etc., which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. MYERS presented a memorial of the Legislature of Montana, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint memorial 2.

To his excellency the President of the United States and to the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Whereas the successful termination of the present World War was largely brought about by the timely participation in the struggle of the land and naval forces of the United States; and

Whereas the United States, in taking up arms against the Central Powers, sought no selfish dominion or indemnities, but waged war in defense of the smaller nationalities, and to further the abolition of future international wars; and

Whereas the President of the United States, in conducting the negotiations leading to an armistice and consequent cessation of bloodshed, laid down certain 14 propositions, some of particular and others of general application, which 14 propositions, having been accepted by the Allied Governments and the Central Powers, constituted, and do still constitute, a solemn and binding contract and agreement between the former belligerents and by reason of their general acceptance have now risen to the dignity of international law; and

Whereas one of the 14 propositions of general application acquiesced in and agreed to as a condition of averting further carnage, and now generally accepted by all enlightened and liberty-loving nations, is the right of self-determination of subject peoples involving the vindication of the American principle that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed: Be it therefore

Resolved by the Sixteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana (the Senate and House concurring), That the President of the United States and the Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled be, and by these presents are, memorialized and requested to instruct America's delegates to the peace conference to advocate at said conference the application of the principle of self-determination and self-government to Ireland and the Irish people, according to the liberal rules applied to other nationalities and national aspirations. In our judgment nothing will be more conducive to the continuance of cordial relations between ourselves and our international neighbors than a settlement of the centuries-old Irish question according to the principles now dominant everywhere in the civilized world and in keeping with the natural rights of man; be it further

Resolved, That the chief clerk of the house be instructed to forward forthwith a copy of this memorial to the President of the United States and to Montana's Representatives in the lower House at Washington, and that the secretary of the senate be likewise instructed to forward a copy of the same to Montana's representatives in the United States Senate.

Mr. MYERS presented a memorial of the Legislature of Montana, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate joint memorial 6.

To the honorable Secretary of Agriculture of the United States, Washington, D. C.:

Whereas the Department of Agriculture of the Government of the United States had adopted and promulgated various specifications for the grading and inspection of grain under the authority of an act of Congress known as the Federal grain standards act; and

Whereas under the specifications of the grain-grading inspection as provided the amount of moisture allowance and deduction is greater than is warranted from the facts, and thus results in the deduction of greater value being taken from the grower of grain than is equitable and just; and

Whereas the variation of moisture allowed in the specification of grain inspection is such that it results in an unjust discrimination against the growers of winter wheat; and

Whereas the test weight of No. 1 spring wheat, compared with No. 1 hard winter wheat per bushel, is so arranged that it permits of an unfair and unjust discrimination being made by the purchaser of grain against the grain growers; and

Whereas the test weight of No. 1 spring wheat is set at 58 pounds and of No. 1 hard winter wheat is set at 60 pounds, and that the difference in test weight is unfair and unreasonable and works an injustice to the growers of No. 1 hard winter wheat, the test weight of No. 1 hard winter wheat should be reduced to the same test weight as No. 1 northern spring wheat; and

Whereas under the said grain-inspection act the vitreous contents of No. 1 hard winter wheat is set at a higher percentage than for No. 1 northern spring wheat, and thereby results in discrimination against the grower of No. 1 hard winter wheat; and

Whereas that by reason of these standards of grading and testing which result in unjust discrimination against the growers of wheat in the State of Montana to their loss and detriment of about 7 cents a bushel, which sum aggregates approximately $2,000,000 per year: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House concurring) of the Sixteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, That we petition the Department of Agriculture of the Government of the United States that, after due investigation, it make such changes in the rules and regulations of the grading and testing of wheat under the grain standards act, so that the same may be more just and equitable to the growers of grain of the State of Montana; and be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of state of Montana be directed to prepare and forward copies of the above resolution to the Secretary of the Department of Agriculture of the United States and to the Senators and Representatives of the State of Montana in Washington, D. C.

Mr. MYERS presented a memorial of the Legislature of Montana, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint memorial 3, introduced by Roberts.

A memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives praying for the passage of such legislation as may be necessary for the continuance of the United States Employment Service.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives in Congress of the United States assembled:

Whereas the United States Government has established offices of the United States Employment Service throughout the State of Montana, serving the people of the entire State; and

Whereas the United States Employment Service, which was created and extended as a solution to the labor employment problems growing out of war-time conditions, has proven its worth to the people of the State of Montana, and has been and is of material value and assistance both to employers in securing labor when workers are wanted and to labor when employment is sought; and

Whereas the people of Montana believe that the usefulness of the United States Employment Service will not cease with the termination of the war, but rather that its fields of service will constantly become broader and more beneficial to the public: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Sixteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana that we do hereby petition and earnestly pray the honorable Congress of the United States for the passage of such legislation as may be necessary for the continuance of the United States Employment Service; and be it further

Mr. MYERS presented a memorial of the Legislature of Montana, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint memorial 7, introduced by Gullidge.

A memorial to the honorable Senate and House of Representatives praying for the passage of the educational bill known as Senate bill No. 4987.

Whereas this bill (S. 4987) is designed to remedy in a constructive way existing defects in our public school system, defects which have existed for years but of which our participation in the world war has made us keenly conscious; and

Whereas this bill, by its provisions for the removal of illiteracy, the Americanization of immigrants, the equalization of educational opportunities, the establishment of physical and health education, and the preparation of teachers, recognizes the cooperative responsibility, and provides for the cooperative system of communities, States, and the Nation in carrying on with greater effectiveness than ever before those types of education that are fundamental for individual, community, State, and national welfare; and

Whereas this bill also provides for the creation of an executive department of Government to be known as the Department of Education, with a Secretary who is to be a member of the President's Cabinet, thus furnishing a proper national agency for carrying out the provisions of the bill and for the unifying of all the education activities, which the Nation is now carrying on, and thus giving the education a new sanction, a sanction which it ought to have because of its service to our Nation; and

Whereas, and finally, the bill will translate into social reality and thus assure to the future the idealism with which and for which our country went in war: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Sixteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, That we do hereby petition and earnestly pray the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States for the passage of Senate bill No. 4987, now pending before it; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this memorial be forwarded by the secretary of the State of Montana to the Senate of the United States, and that copies of this memorial be forwarded by the secretary of state of the State of Montana to the House of Representatives of the United States, and that copies thereof be transmitted by the secretary of state of the State of Montana to the Senators and Representatives in Congress of the State of Montana with the request that they use every effort within their power to bring about the passage of Senate bill No. 4987.

House joint memorial 14, introduced by Hathaway.

Memoralizing Congress of the United States to pass the Smith-Bankhead Americanization bill.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Whereas there are 8,000,000 of illiterates and non-English-speaking people in the United States; and

Whereas the war has demonstrated some of our dangers from the large numbers of our foreign-born citizens who have not been definitely assimilated or Americanized, and has brought forth thousands upon thousands of men, native-born Americans for many generations, who can not read or write; and

Whereas these 8,000,000 people must be educated at least sufficiently to read an American newspaper and to know something of what it means to be an American; and

Whereas there is now pending in Congress the Smith-Bankhead Americanization bill, which directs the Bureau of Education to cooperate with the several States in the education of the above-mentioned peoples and in the preparation of teachers for the work: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the house of representatives (the senate concurring), That the Sixteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana do earnestly petition the Congress of the United States to pass Senate bill No. 5464 and House bill 15402; be it further House joint memorial 10, introduced by Rasmusson.

A resolution memorializing Congress for the passage of necessary legislation providing for the deportation of undesirable foreigners who claimed exemption from military service on the ground of being a citizen or subject of a neutral country.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Whereas during the recent World War many registrants under the selective service regulations of the United States Government claimed deferred classification upon the ground that they were citizens or subjects of a neutral country, and in many instances such registrants became relieved from liability to military service by withdrawing their intention to become citizens of the United States; and

Whereas practically all of such aliens came to this country for the purpose of securing the protection of the American flag and enjoying the fruits of liberty and the benefits of a constitutional government, and by their conduct have shown that they are unworthy of becoming citizens of the United States of America; and

Whereas many of such aliens are now conspiring or are members of organizations whose underlying, if not their ostensible, purpose is to overthrow our present form of government and to destroy every tradition and right that is sacred to the American people, either peaceably or by bloodshed if necessary, and to substitute for a government of law and order, with individual rights of citizens guaranteed by the Constitution and by the courts, a condition of anarchy and revolution; and

Whereas all of such aliens are dangerous and undesirable residents in this country and are totally unfit to associate with law-abiding persons or to live in a peace-loving nation: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, That we do hereby petition the Congress of the United States for the passage of necessary legislation prohibiting all such dangerous and undesirable aliens from ever becoming citizens of the United States of America and authorizing their immediate deportation to the country of which they are citizens or subjects; and be it further

To the honorable the Senators and Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Whereas it has been brought to the attention of the Sixteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana that there has heretofore been introduced in Congress a measure providing, among other things, that all discharged soldiers shall receive a bonus of pay from the date of discharge, and which said measure is styled the Shafter bill; and

Whereas Congressman GANDY, of South Dakota, has introduced a bill in Congress providing for the transfer of the Battle Mountain Home, at Hot Springs, S. Dak., to the War Department for use as a hospital for the soldiers of the present war; and also providing for the transfer of the veterans of the Civil and Spanish-American Wars to other homes, principally to the home at Danville, Ill.; and

Whereas the sanitarium at Battle Mountain is for the treatment of all diseases to which the old soldiers are subject, and if they were removed to Danville, Ill., or any of the other homes, the old soldiers would be deprived of this treatment: Now, therefore, be it

Mr. MYERS presented a memorial of the Legislature of Montana, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Substitute for Senate joint memorial 5, introduced by Donlan.

A memorial petitioning Congress to make restoration of railroads to their owners.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Whereas during the period of the recent European war it was deemed by the Government of the United States necessary and expedient that the several railroad systems and telegraph lines of the United States be operated under and by the direct control of the Federal Government, to the end that means of transportation of troops and munitions of war, and the conveyance of information by the telegraph lines, be brought to a state of control necessary to carry and conduct the war to a successful conclusion; and

Whereas the several systems of railroads and telegraph lines of the United States were taken over by the United States Government under the authority of laws passed by the Congress of the United States providing that said railroads and telegraph lines should be returned to the owners of said railroad systems and telegraph lines within a period of 22 months after the conclusion of the war; and

Whereas during the period within which the Government has been in control of the railroad systems and telegraph lines freight and passenger rates of the railroad systems were increased and the rates charged by telegraph lines increased; and

Whereas it is a matter of common repute that during the time said railroad systems and telegraph lines have been under the control and operation of the Federal Government the service rendered by said public utilities has become less efficient, notwithstanding the fact that the public has been charged increased rates for the use of said public utilities; and

Whereas during said period of operation the cost of operation has increased to such an extent that the Federal Government is now and has been during the course of operation paying large sums of money in excess of revenues received; and

Whereas the people of the United States, whether individually or in communities, who must of necessity use the several railroad systems and telegraph lines, have suffered inconveniences by reason of less efficient service; and

Whereas it is apparent that the continued operation of the railroad systems and telegraph lines in the United States by the Federal Government will result in a continued drain upon the people of the United States without any corresponding benefit; and

Whereas it is apparent that longer delay in returning railroad property and telegraph property to its owners will carry with it financial burdens of so great a character as to be almost beyond conception, and that a continuation of the present system of Government control will add to and increase the burden already imposed: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, your memorialists, the Sixteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, do earnestly petition the Congress of the United States to enact with all possible dispatch and expedition suitable laws and legislation making provision for the early restoration of railroad and telegraph lines of the country to their legitimate owners and that the present Government control of railroad and telegraph lines be terminated at as early a date as possible; and be it further

Resolved, That we, your memorialists, the Sixteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, do petition the Congress of the United States that said railroads and railroad property and telegraph property be returned to its rightful and legitimate owners, to be operated under the direct supervision of the Federal Government; and be it further

Senate joint memorial 3, introduced by Craig and Heren.

A memorial to the Congress of the United States and to the Director General of Railroads of the United States.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States and to the Director General of the Railroads of the United States:

Your memorialists, the members of the Sixteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, the senate and house concurring, respectfully represent:

Whereas the county of Carter, of the State of Montana, at the present time has no railroad facilities by reason of there being no railroad constructed in, across, or through said county; and

Whereas a large portion of the county of Custer, of the State of Montana, adjoining the county of Carter on the western side thereof, is similarly situated; and

Whereas there have settled in the county of Carter and the south half of the county of Custer in the last several years a large number of actual bona fide settlers, who are at the present time cultivating the lands of said district; and

Whereas the said territory embraced in the county of Carter and the south half of the county of Custer contains approximately 10,000 square miles in area; and

Whereas the settlers of said extensive area are growing, cultivating, and producing a large amount of grain, which said grain, at the nearest point, is more than 50 miles distant from any railroad point, and some of the settlers being over 100 miles from the nearest point on any railroad; and

Whereas the settlers within said area are unable to continue to raise grain and have a market therefor at a reasonable profit, and that unless relief is granted to the settlers of this area they will be compelled to abandon the producing and growing of grain; and

Whereas if adequate facilities were accorded to the peoples living within this area the amount of land which would come under cultivation and become productive and produce a large amount of grain would increase at least one hundredfold: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the senate of the sixteenth legislative assembly (the house concurring), That we, the members of the Sixteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, hereby petition and earnestly pray the Senate and House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States and the Director General of Railroads of the United States that they do cause inquiry to be made into the advisability and practicability of the authorization of the construction of a line of railroads across the aforesaid area, and that such relief be granted as speedily as possible to the settlers of said area as may be necessary, to the end that they may continue their farming operations with profit to themselves and benefit to the entire State of Montana.

Resolved further, That a copy of this memorial be forwarded to the Secretary of the Senate and House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States and to the Director General of Railroads of the United States, and that copies thereof be transmitted by the secretary of state of the State of Montana to the Senators and Representatives in the Congress of the United States.

Mr. MYERS presented a memorial of the Legislature of Montana, which was referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate joint memorial 8, introduced by Burlingame.

A resolution memorializing Congress for passage of legislation recognizing governmental obligations to producers of essential war minerals.

Whereas upon the entry of the United States Government in the European war certain minerals essential to the manufacture of war material became vital to the successful prosecution of the war; and

Whereas such essential war minerals were in times of peace obtainable from foreign sources and our domestic sources of supply were undeveloped and unknown; and

Whereas when the entry of the United States into the world conflict created conditions which prevented the importation of ores of chrome, tungsten, and manganese, vital to munition requirements, this Government, through various governmental agencies, appealed to American miners to produce such ores from domestic sources, representing the dire distress to follow the shortage of those minerals necessary in the manufacture of war material; and

Whereas Montana's loyal response to this appeal materially increased the national resources in vital war minerals at a time of urgent need; and

Whereas the production of such vital war minerals in this State was due to the individual energy and efforts of Montana prospectors and miners in a field of endeavor involving such uncertain financial reward as to be unattractive to capital as an investment; and

Whereas repeated urgent requests by governmental agencies for increased production in essential war minerals, and particularly for an increase of manganese ore, induced many small operators to undertake more extensive development of such ores, in the belief that the manner in which requests for greater production were made by governmental officials guaranteed a market for the ore; and

Whereas summary refusal by governmental agencies to purchase the ore developed at their request has deprived the producers of manganese ore in this State of a market and of means of retrieving outlays made in developing such ore: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate of the Sixteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana (the House of Representatives concurring), That in the sense of this assembly a moral obligation exists between the United States Government and the producers of manganese ore in this State, who through governmental action are facing serious financial loss, as herein recited; and be it further

Resolved, That we hereby petition the Congress of the United States to enact such legislation as will result in reimbursing those who have in good faith made outlays to develop war minerals in time of need; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy hereof be transmitted by the secretary of state of the State of Montana to the Senators and Representatives of the State of Montana in Congress, with the request for their utmost efforts in obtaining the congressional action herein indicated.

Mr. MYERS presented a memorial of the Legislature of Montanan which was referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate joint memorial 4, introduced by Page.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Whereas upon the declaration of war between the United States of America and Germany and Austria, an increased production of manganese and other minerals in the United States became, and was, vitally essential to the prosecution of said war upon the part of the United States and associated nations; and

Whereas prior to the European war, on account of the heavy production of manganese, especially, by Brazil, Russia, and other countries of the world, by means of cheap and underpaid labor, the producers of manganese in the United States could not produce the same with profit, and little development and exploration for said metal had been undertaken or accomplished; and

Whereas upon the outbreak of said war, and upon the most urgent solicitation upon the part of the United States of America, through its properly constituted and organized boards and officers, and actuated thereunto by patriotic motives, many people in the United States, and particularly in the State of Montana, invested very large sums of money in the acquisition of properties producing manganese and in the exploration and development of said properties; and

Whereas immediately upon the signing of the articles of armistice between the United States, and its associated nations, and said Germany and Austria, all market for manganese in the United States was suspended and cut off, and the same has not been since ther, neither can the same now be, produced with any profit whatever, and only at great loss, and for these reasons many investors in manganese properties have suffered, and are suffering, great loss on account of said investments, and on account of stocks of manganese on hand which can not be sold or disposed of, and unless relief is granted many of said investors will suffer irreparable loss and financial ruin; and

Whereas the situation of said manganese producers and other producers of metals for the prosecution of the war has been considered by the American Mining Congress, when the same convened in the city of Washington on December 16 and 17, 1918, and an appeal to Congress, through and by said American Mining Congress, has heretofore been made for relief in this behalf; and

Whereas there has been introduced in the Senate of the United States, by Senator HENDERSON of the State of Nevada, Senate bill No. 5234, entitled "A bill to supplement an act of Congress approved October 5, 1918 (public, No. 220), and to authorize the Secretary of the Interior, from the funds appropriated by said act, to determine, adjust, and pay losses sustained by investments preparatory to production of war minerals mentioned in said act" (manganese being one of the war minerals mentioned in said act), and said bill is now pending before the Congress of the United States for consideration: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, your memorialists, the Sixteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, do earnestly petition the Congress of the United States to enact said bill into law, to the end that relief may be granted to the manganese miners and producers of the State of Montana and the United States; and we do further earnestly petition the Congress of the United States to enact such further laws and regulations, either by the levying of import duties upon manganese produced in and by the cheap labor of other countries, or otherwise, as will enable the people of the United States to produce and market manganese ores at a reasonable profit, and give suitable and proper encouragement to the manganese industry in the mineral-producing States of the Union; and, be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of state be, and he is hereby, instructed to transmit copies of this memorial, properly authenticated, to the Senators and Representatives from the State of Montana in the Congress of the United States.

Mr. MYERS presented a memorial of the Legislature of Montana, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint memorial 15, introduced by Gibson.

A memorial to Congress asking Congress to appropriate a sum of money for the building of a hard-surfaced road through the northern portion of the Yellowstone Park, leading from Gardiner, Mont., to Cooke City, Mont., or to dedicate a strip of ground through the Yellowstone Park for such road.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled:

Whereas Congress did set aside and reserve land from the Territories of Montana and Wyoming, in the year 1872 for the purpose of preserving to the people of the United States the wonderful scenic and unusual natural phenomena therein contained, which said reservation of land constitutes the Yellowstone National Park; and

Whereas the act dedicating this land as the said park was so worded as to prevent the use of said park for commercial use or purpose of private gain, it being under the direction of the Interior Department of our Government, and maintained in large part by annual appropriations for the Yellowstone National Park, made by the Congress of the United States, which said appropriations are never in excess of the minimum needs of the administration of said park as at present operated for the enjoyment of tourists visiting the locations of greatest interest and scenic beauty; and

Whereas there was discovered in 1871 a mineral area situated a few miles northeast of the northeast corner of said park, of most promising prospect, which said mineral area is known as the New World Unorganized Mining District, Park County, Mont., and is approximately an area 10 miles east and west by 15 miles north and south and situated entirely within the boundary of the said county of Park, of the State of Montana; and

Whereas since the year of this discovery there have been great labor and money expenditures in said district in prospecting and developing the same, there having been made as many as 6,000 mineral locations in said district, and there having been expended in attempts to develop the same approximately $3,000,000; and as a result of said attempts to develop said district there has been proved the existence of valuable deposits of gold, silver, lead, copper, and many other minerals of slightly greater value than the average of such minerals as are mined and exported at a profit from other mining districts closer to transportation; and

Whereas it has been impossible for the owners of said claims to make a profit from their mining operations in said district, owing to the bad road conditions existing between the said mining district and its nearest shipping point, viz, Gardiner, Mont., a distance of 56 miles, of which distance 50 miles lies within the boundaries of the Yellowstone National Park, and therefore all traffic over said portion of said route being under the rules of the Department of the Interior, and half of said road being the tourist route, with many long and heavy grades thereon, rendering its use by ore trucks, during the tourist season in particular, very difficult; and

Whereas after a careful investigation and inspection by competent mining men and engineers from all over the United States of the said mining district and of the means and directions of ingress and egress from said district, it is the unanimous opinion that said district will become a large and prosperous one if afforded adequate transportation facilities which would enable it to more cheaply develop the many promising mining prospects situated within the said district, and known to contain large deposits of most valuable minerals; and further, that the most feasible, practical, and only present method of improving said transportation facilities is the building of a hard-surface motor road on water grade through the Yellowstone National Park from Gardiner, Mont., to the commercial center of the said New World Mining District, Cooke, Mont., which said water-grade road should follow in general the north bank of the Yellowstone River from Gardiner, Mont., to a point opposite the Tower Falls Station in the Yellowstone National Park, a distance of about 20 miles; from which point it would proceed up the Lamar River on its north bank, a distance of 16 miles to the mouth of Soda Butte Creek; from which point it would proceed up the Soda Butte Creek to the northeast boundaries of the said Yellowstone National Park, a distance of 14 miles and approximately 3 miles from Cooke, Mont., from which point it would proceed up the Soda Butte Creek to Cooke, a distance of approximately 3 miles, which said 3 miles lies wholly within the boundaries of Park County, Mont.; and

Whereas it further appears that the portion of this route lying within the boundary of the Yellowstone National Park can be cheaply and quickly built at a moderate cost per mile, and laid on a grade not exceeding 3 per cent in any place; and that motor trucks operated on such a hard surface road could haul supplies and ore to and from the said mining district at such a reasonable cost as would enable the said mining district to quickly and economically develop its vast resources, adding the same to the mineral wealth of our great State; and

Whereas it further appears that this district is so situated as to make the only practical route by which adequate transportation facilities can be afforded at this time, that through the Yellowstone National Park hereinbefore mentioned and described; that all other possible routes, two in number, one being from Columbus, Mont., up the Stillwater River, a distance of 98 miles, the upper 20 miles being over 8,500 feet above sea level; the other being from Belfry, Mont., up the Clarks Fork River to Cooke, a distance of 115 miles, through extremely mountainous country on its upper 50 miles, have been most carefully investigated, and that construction costs on same are so enormous as to render the same prohibitive at this time, and prohibitive at any time until there shall have been developed and proven within this district such vast reserves of ore as would cost many years of work and millions of dollars to develop, all of which would of necessity be done at a tremendous loss, unless more adequate transportation facilities were afforded the district while the same was being done; and

Whereas in the past many thousands of dollars have been expended by the property owners of the district in endeavoring to secure from Congress rights to build railroads, etc., to the said district through the Yellowstone National Park, along the route heretofore described in this memorial, all of which said efforts have served only to prove that it is impossible for private individuals to so obtain the relief prayed for, and to further convince those owning property in the district that it would be impossible to finance the building of such a road through the boundaries of the Yellowstone National Park on any permit which is now within the authority of the Secretary of the Interior to grant, owing to the fact that such permit must of necessity, under the laws of Congress dedicating this park, be subject to revocation by the said Secretary of the Interior at his will and pleasure, making it a matter of such extreme jeopardy, to anyone who might invest his money in such an enterprise, as to make it impossible to obtain sufficient funds for such purpose from the investing public or from any business person or corporation; and

Whereas it further appears that the building and operation of such motor route as hereinbefore described in the memorial would in no way or sense interfere with or destroy any of the scenic beauties of the said Yellowstone National Park, or do any damage to the said park, or to the many species of wild game, which so abundantly live and flourish within its boundaries, but would, on the contrary, make the administration of the said park and its enjoyment by the visitors touring the same more pleasurable and profitable; and that the Government of the United States, in the building and maintaining of such a road and charging a reasonable toll per ton for the transportation of ore and supplies thereon, would in a few years have such a large income from the road alone as would probably make the Yellowstone National Park self-sustaining: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Montana, That Congress be requested to appropriate as soon as possible a sufficient sum not in excess of $1,500,000 with which to build that part of this road which lies within the boundaries of the said Yellowstone National Park, as hereinbefore described; that the road be built with a hard surface, adapted to withstand the destruction of heavy motor trucks operating thereon, and that it be built with such surface at least 20 feet wide;

Or, that Congress dedicate a strip of ground 200 feet wide along the route hereinbefore described, within the boundaries of the Yellowstone National Park, which said strip shall be available for the permanent use of the New World Unorganized Mining District, for the purpose of building a motor road thereon, subject to such rules for the use of the same as shall be equitably suited to its needs and established by the Secretary of the Interior, but not subject to revocation for such permanent use by the Secretary of the Interior; and it is further

Resolved, That the secretary of state be, and is hereby, instructed to transmit copies of this memorial, properly authenticated, to the honorable Secretary of the Interior and to our Senators and Representatives in Congress from the State of Montana.

House joint memorial 6, introduced by Brandjord.

Praying that the House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, enact into law Senate bill No. 940, now pending in that honorable body.

To the honorable House of Representatives in the Congress of the United States assembled:

Whereas there is now pending before you Senate bill No. 940, introduced by the Hon. H. L. MYERS, Senator from Montana, providing for the payment for certain lands within the former Flathead Indian Reservation, in the State of Montana; and

Whereas this bill provides a just and fair solution of the controversy over the appraisal of more than 1,100 acres of land on the former Flathead Indian Reservation in the State of Montana, now occupied by approximately 200 actual and bona fide settlers and home builders, which land has been appraised at approximately $65,000 more than the settlers and home builders had good and sufficient reason to believe would be the appraisal of these lands; and

Whereas the settlement embodied in the said Senate bill No. 940 would be entirely just and fair not only to the settlers on the lands in question, but also to the Indians whose funds and rights are affected; and

Whereas the bill is recommended by the Hon. Franklin K. Lane, Secretary of the Interior, and by the Hon. William H. Ketcham, member of the Board of Indian Commissioners, which board made a special investigation of the appraisal sought to be corrected by the said Senate bill No. 940, and the approvals of these high officials have been set forth in the report of the Senate Committee on Public Lands dated March 20, 1916, and accompanying Senate bill No. 1059; and

Whereas we, the Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, feel satisfied that the settlers on the former Flathead Indian Reservation are fairly and justly entitled to relief afforded by Senate bill No. 940, now before you: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Sixteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, That we do hereby petition and earnestly pray you, the honorable House of Representatives of the United States, to enact into law the said Senate bill No. 940, to the end that justice may prevail; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this memorial be forwarded by the secretary of state of the State of Montana to the House of Representatives of the United States and to our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

Mr. MYERS presented a memorial of the Legislature of Montana, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint memorial 11, introduced by Brandjord.

Petition to the Congress of the United States, asking for a $3,000,000 appropriation for the Flathead irrigation project, in the State of Montana, for the years 1919 and 1920, to the end that the said project may be speedily completed and that a considerable amount of work may be provided for returning soldiers and sailors.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives in the Congress of the United States assembled:

SECTION 1. We, the Sixteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, the house and the senate concurring, do hereby most respectfully set forth:

That the Flathead irrigation project, in the State of Montana, has made slow progress on account of the uncertainty and insufficiency of the congressional appropriations, and that this slowness of progress has brought about a heavy increase in the construction cost and has resulted in financial loss, hardships, and suffering to numerous settlers and home makers waiting for the water to become available; that

This project is in the hands of highly efficient management, capable of conducting the prosecution of this work on a large scale, both economically and scientifically; that

The problem of furnishing useful employment for returning soldiers and sailors is both National and a State problem, highly patriotic in character, and stupendous in its magnitude and importance, and that the vigorous prosecution of this irrigation project would furnish a considerable amount of work for our returning soldiers and sailors:

SEC. 2. In consideration of the fact set forth in section 1 hereof, We, the Sixteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, the house and the senate concurring, do hereby respectfully petition the Congress of the United States to appropriate the sum of $3,000,000 for the prosecution of the Flathead irrigation project during the years 1919 and 1920.

SEC. 3. It is hereby directed that the secretary of state of the State of Montana transmit copies of this memorial to the President of the Senate and to the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States and to our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

Mr. MYERS presented a memorial of the Legislature of Montana, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate joint memorial 2, introduced by Slayton.

A resolution memorializing Congress to pass legislation for the purpose of issuing patents to all homesteaders who have served in any branch of the Army or Navy in the present world war, providing settlement and certain improvements were made prior to enlistment.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Whereas under the present laws of the United States it is necessary that anyone taking up a homestead on public lands live thereon a certain minimum prescribed time and conform to certain laws relative to improvements thereon and pay certain fees in connection therewith before patent to the same can be issued, irrespective of whether or not such homesteader has served his country in any of the numerous branches of the Army or Navy in the present world war; and

Whereas there have been thousands of cases throughout the western part of the United States where bona fide homesteaders were forced to sell their stock and ranching equipment at a great sacrifice, in some instances practically giving it away, when called upon to enter our country's service; and

Whereas in such cases, by reason of the fact that such homesteaders were compelled to sell their property at such a low price they will be unable on their return from the service to resume their ranching or farming operations by reason of the fact that they are without sufficient funds to do so, and they will be unable to borrow money without difficulty, or have any credit extended to them, by reason of the fact that they do not have title to the land they were living on prior to their enlistment: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate of the Sixteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana and House of Representatives concurring therein, That we do hereby petition Congress of the United States for the passage of legislation relieving all bona fide homesteaders who were engaged in some branch of the Army or Navy in the present war, and who had made some improvements of a substantial nature on their land and established their residence thereon prior to their enlistment from any further residence or the making of any additional improvements thereon before patent can be issued to them, and that patent be issued to them on their request upon proof being made that such residence was established and improvements made prior to their enlistment, and without the payment of any fees whatsoever; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this memorial be transmitted by the secretary of the State of Montana to the honorable Members of the United States Senate and House of Representatives from the State of Montana, requesting them to exert every possible effort within their power to enact such legislation.

Mr. LODGE presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Massachusetts, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS, 1919.

Resolutions in favor of Armenian independence.

Resolved, That it is the opinion of the General Court of Massachusetts that the people of Armenia, by their resolute and faithful maintenance of Christianity and civilization through long centuries of unspeakable oppression by the barbarous Turk; by their capacity for business and administration, well proven and demonstrated in their own land and in many other lands; and by their heroic conduct and great sacrifices in the present war have shown that they are worthy to be restored as an independent nation; and that we do therefore earnestly request and urge that prompt and favorable action be taken on the resolution introduced in the Senate of the United States by Senator HENRY CABOT LODGE on December 10, 1918, and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, declaring that in the opinion of the Senate of the United States Armenia ought to be independent, and expressing the hope of the Senate that the peace conference will make arrangements for helping Armenia to establish an independent republic; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be sent by the secretary of the commonwealth to the President and to the Vice President of the United States and to the Senators in Congress from Massachusetts.

In senate, adopted March 4, 1919.

In house of representatives, adopted, in concurrence, March 7, 1919.

Mr. LODGE presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Massachusetts, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS, 1919.

Resolutions in favor of Irish independence.

Whereas the General Court of Massachusetts reaffirms as the fundamental doctrine of our institutions that all governments "derive their just powers from the consent of the governed," a great truth which, expressed under the designation of the "self-determination of peoples," the President of the United States and the other great leaders of progressive ideas among the allied nations are proposing to put into practical execution in the interest of oppressed nationalities, like Belgium, Servia, Montenegro, and other States whose interests and aspirations have been set at naught because of the dominance of the opposing principle that might makes right; and

Whereas no people better deserves the blessings of the right of self-determination than the people of Ireland, the service of whose sons in the colonization of America, in the winning of its independence, in the founding of its institutions and the creation of its wealth and prosperity, has placed America and democratic government everywhere in its everlasting debt: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the General Court of Massachusetts urges upon the President of the United States and his associates in framing the final terms of peace, as a matter of simple justice and as one of the guaranties of the continuance of peace and contentment in Ireland, the granting of complete independence to the Irish people; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be sent by the secretary of the commonwealth to the President of the United States, to the representatives of the United States at the peace conference, to the Presiding Officer of the United States Senate, and to the Senators in Congress from this Commonwealth.

Mr. LODGE presented resolutions adopted by the Legislature of the State of Massachusetts, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS, 1919.

Resolutions favoring an early consummation of peace and the subsequent establishment of a league of nations.

Whereas on the 11th day of November, 1918, an armistice was signed by the representatives of the allied powers and of Germany; and

Whereas in consequence of the victory of the Allies and of the United States a peace conference convened and is now holding sessions in Paris for the purpose of settling the terms of peace; and

Whereas a conference committee thereof has proposed a constitution for a league of nations: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the opinion of the General Court of Massachusetts the nations of the world should do everything in their power to bring about a prompt peace and general disarmament; and

Whereas the constitution of the league of nations, as reported in the peace conference, is not wholly acceptable to the citizens of Massachusetts: Therefore be it further

Resolved, That it is also the opinion of the General Court of Massachusetts that the negotiations on the part of the United States should immediately be directed to the business of formulating peace terms with Germany satisfactory to the nations at war with her, and that any proposal for a league of nations or any agreement intended to insure the permanent peace of the whole world should then be considered by the peace conference without further delay.

Resolved, That certified copies of these resolutions be sent by the secretary of the commonwealth to the President of the United States, to the Vice President, as presiding officer of the United States Senate, to the Speaker of the National House of Representatives, and to each of the Senators and Representatives from Massachusetts.

In senate, adopted March 28, 1919.

In house of representatives, adopted in concurrence April 8, 1919.

Mr. LODGE presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Massachusetts, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS, 1919.

Resolutions favoring an early discharge from the United States Army of all soldiers, except those in the Regular Army, who desire to be discharged.

Whereas the present state of affairs in Europe permits of a great reduction in the size of the Army now maintained by the United States; and

Whereas the number of men who are willing and able to serve for the duration of the war or longer is adequate for any probable need, and a much larger number are anxious to return to their homes and to positions where they are urgently needed; and

Whereas the retention of such men in the service means in many cases a loss of positions now awaiting them, and serious hardship to themselves and their families: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the General Court of Massachusetts urges upon Congress the passage of House bill No. 13443, now pending therein, or some similar legislation, to provide for the prompt and honorable discharge from the Army, with adequate pay and mileage allowance to convey them home, of all enlisted men in the military service not included in the Regular Army, who shall file with their commanding officer a statement in writing that such is their desire; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be sent by the secretary of the commonwealth to the Members of Congress from Massachusetts and to the presiding officers of both branches of Congress.

In house of representatives, adopted February 14, 1919.

In senate, adopted, in concurrence, February 19, 1919.

Mr. LODGE presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Massachusetts, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS, 1919.

Resolutions urging Congress to pass certain legislation relative to aliens who avoided military service in the present war.

Whereas certain aliens, not being alien enemies, resident in this country, claimed exemption from military service in the Army of the United States during the present war by reason of alienage, or failed to respond to the call for military or naval service from their respective countries: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the General Court of Massachusetts urges upon the Congress of the United States the passage of such legislation as will prevent the aliens aforesaid from hereafter becoming citizens, and also the passage of legislation to prevent the return to this country of any such aliens who hereafter leave the United States; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be sent by the secretary of the commonwealth to the President of the United States Senate, to the Speaker of the National House of Representatives, and to the Senators and Representatives in Congress from this Commonwealth.

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS, 1919.

Resolutions in favor of an amendment to the Constitution of the United States empowering Congress to regulate the hours of labor.

Resolved, That the General Court of Massachusetts hereby records its belief that the public interest will be better served and the hardships of human life ameliorated by national regulation of the hours of labor, and respectfully petitions the Congress of the United States to propose an amendment to the Constitution giving to Congress power to regulate the hours of labor and to make the same uniform throughout the United States; and

Resolved, That certified copies of these resolutions be sent by the secretary of the commonwealth to the presiding officers of both branches of Congress and to each of the Senators and Representatives in Congress from Massachusetts.

Mr. LODGE presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Massachusetts, which was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS, 1919.

Resolutions relative to Federal taxation of the income of manufacturers employing women or minors for excessive working hours.

Whereas the diversity of the labor laws of the several States is the cause of unfair and unequal industrial competition, and an obstacle to the passage by this Commonwealth of further humane legislation affecting hours and conditions of labor, especially in respect to women and minors; and

Whereas the only agency that can effectively overcome this diversity and insure uniformity in the hours and conditions of labor affecting women and minors is the Congress of the United States under its comprehensive powers of taxation: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the General Court of Massachusetts urges upon Congress the wisdom and necessity of levying upon all manufacturers who employ minors under 16 years of age more than 8 hours daily or women more than 9 hours daily, or either more than 48 hours weekly, an income tax large enough to prohibit such employment; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be sent by the secretary of the commonwealth to the President of the United States, the presiding officers of both branches of Congress, and to the Senators and Representatives in Congress from this Commonwealth.

To all to whom these presents shall come:

I, Thomas Hall, secretary of state for the State of North Dakota, do hereby set forth and certify that the following is the full text and the whole thereof of a certain concurrent resolution adopted by the sixteenth legislative assembly of the State of North Dakota.

Dated at the capitol in Bismarck, N. Dak., this 3d day of March, 1919.

[SEAL.] THOMAS HALL,
Secretary of State.

Concurrent resolution favoring the establishment of a league of nations to enforce peace, and aim at promoting the liberty, progress, and orderly development of the world.

Whereas the war now brought to a victorious close by the associated power of the free nations of the world was above all else a war to end war and protect human rights: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate of the State of North Dakota (the House of Representatives concurring), That we favor the establishment of a league of nations of which the United States shall be a member. We believe that such a league should aim at promoting the liberty, progress, and orderly development of the world; that it should clinch the victory won at such terrible sacrifice by having the united potential force of all its members as a standing menace against any nation that seeks to upset the peace of the world; be it further

Resolved, That certified copies of this resolution be sent by the secretary of state to the President and to the presiding officers of both branches of Congress and to each of the United States Senators and Representatives from the State of North Dakota.

Mr. GRONNA presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of North Dakota, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

I, Thomas Hall, secretary of state for the State of North Dakota, do hereby set forth and certify that the following is the full text and the whole thereof of a certain concurrent resolution adopted by the Sixteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of North Dakota.

Dated at the capitol in Bismarck, N. Dak., this 3d day of March, 1919.

THOMAS HALL,
Secretary of State.

Concurrent resolution favoring direct rail routes.

Whereas the Federal Government of the United States is presumably operating all railroads as a unit for the benefit of the entire people of the United States, irrespective of selfish interests of the former management of several individual lines of railroad; and

Whereas we believe the shortest and best possible routes between all points on existing lines should be utilized and reasonable train service established thereon and reasonable rates be charged for service rendered; and

Whereas there are no through passenger or through freight trains operating via Linton, N. Dak. (the northern terminal of the branch line of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad), between points on said railroad in South Dakota and Bismarck, the capital of North Dakota; and

Whereas the past and present policy of the management of the Northern Pacific Railroad Co. has been to obstruct and prevent the establishment of through freight and passenger service via Linton on the shortest line between western North Dakota and central South Dakota; and

Whereas the people of both North and South Dakota are entitled to much better, shorter, cheaper passenger and freight service than that now offered between these sections; and

Whereas at Bismarck, N. Dak., there are ample terminal facilities, roundhouses, machine shops, stock yards, side tracks, and division superintendent's headquarters on the Soo Railway and lines for the North and West, as well as for the East, diverge at Bismarck, N. Dak., where connection may be made with Missouri River boats; and

Whereas through train service may profitably be established by utilizing a short mileage on each of the three railroads; and

Whereas an emergency exists in that the immense lignite fields of North Dakota remain undeveloped and the live-stock industry of western North Dakota would be greatly stimulated were it not for the excessive rates of freight and inadequate train service provided between North Dakota and South Dakota: Therefore be it

Resolved, That our Senators and Representatives in Congress be urged to present to the Hon. Walker D. Hines, Director General of Railroads, the protest of the State of North Dakota against the prevailing railroad passenger and freight service between west North Dakota and South Dakota, and the excessive rates now charged for inadequate service established by the former management of the Northern Pacific Co. to the exclusion of the railroads from the capital of North Dakota; and further be it

Resolved, That the Director General of Railroads be urged to direct the immediate establishment of through passenger train service and through freight train service, using the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul tracks from South Dakota points to Linton, N. Dak., and the Northern Pacific Railway tracks from Linton, N. Dak., to Moffit, N. Dak., and the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie Railway tracks from Moffit, N. Dak., to Bismarck, where he may utilize the terminals of the Soo Line at Bismarck; and that the Director General of Railroads be urged to prepare reasonable joint through rates for the service to be rendered based upon the mileage of each line used.

Mr. GRONNA presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of North Dakota, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
STATE OF NORTH DAKOTA.

To all to whom these presents shall come:

I, Thomas Hall, secretary of state for the State of North Dakota, do hereby set forth and certify that the following is the full text and the whole thereof of a certain concurrent resolution adopted by the Sixteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of North Dakota.

Dated at the capitol in Bismarck, N. Dak, this 18th day of March, 1919.

THOMAS HALL,
Secretary of State.

Concurrent resolution urging Congress to pass such legislation as is necessary to authorize Government control of all the railroads in the United States for a period of five years from and after the 1st of January, 1919.

Whereas the Government of the United States has taken control of all the railroads in the United States during the great World War; and

Whereas the Government of the United States has not had control of the railroads for a sufficient period of time to fairly test the desirability of permanent Government control of railroads; and

Whereas Director General McAdoo has recommended to Congress that the railroads of the United States be under Government control for a period of five years from and after the 1st of January, 1919; and

Whereas it is the sense of this legislature that the Government should try out thoroughly the feasibility of Government control and ownership of railroads; and

Whereas five years appears to be no more than a reasonable time to give such a question a fair and thorough trial: Therefore be it

Resolved by the senate (the house of representatives concurring), That they urge Congress to pass such legislation as is necessary to authorize Government control of all the railroads in the United States for a period of five years from and after the 1st of January, 1919; be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of state send a copy of this resolution, one to each Senator and Member of Congress for North Dakota and to the chairman of the Committee on Railroads of the National Senate and House of Representatives.

Mr. WARREN presented a resolution adopted by the Delta Meta Delphian Chapter, of Rock Springs, Wyo., and a resolution adopted at a community welfare meeting at Bosler, Wyo., favoring the ratification of the league of nations treaty, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a petition of Local Union No. 2700, United Mine Workers of America, of Crosby, Wyo., and a petition of Local Union No. 1074, United Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees and Railway Shop Laborers, of Sheridan, Wyo., praying for the continuance of Federal control of railroads, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Joint resolution 56, A.

Joint resolution memoralizing Congress to continue appropriations for United States employment service.

Whereas for some time the United States employment service has been rendering very great aid in securing positions for the unemployed; and

Whereas the Committee on Appropriations in the House of Representatives has seen fit to strike from the appropriation bill all appropriations made for the continuation of such employment service, against the protest of a strong minority of said committee; and

Whereas if the action of said committee is not reversed, all the Federal employment offices in the United States will be closed on April 1, 1919, for lack of funds; and

Whereas the need of such employment service is required now as never before, due to the fact that we are demobilizing hundreds of thousands of men from military into industrial life: Therefore be it

Resolved by the assembly (the senate concurring), That Congress be respectfully requested to appropriate such sums of money for the United States employment service as will enable the Department of Labor to continue this very efficient work; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions, properly attested, be forwarded to the Senators and Representatives from the State of Wisconsin.

RILEY S. YOUNG,
Speaker of the Assembly.
C. E. SHAFFER,
Chief Clerk of the Assembly.
EDWARD F. DITTMAR,
President of the Senate.
O. G. MUNSON,
Chief Clerk of the Senate.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Joint resolution 68, A.

Joint resolution relating to the labor controversy in the city of Madison.

Whereas the National War Labor Board, after careful and thorough consideration made, on February 18, 1919, certain awards and determinations in the labor disputes between the machinists and other employees of nine different companies and corporations in the city of Madison and their employers; and

Whereas an agreement of submission to the arbitration of the National War Labor Board was signed by these nine corporations and companies; and

Whereas all but one of these employers have refused and now, after nearly two months, still do persistently refuse to abide by the determination and awards of the National War Labor Board: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the assembly (the senate concurring), That the National War Labor Board is hereby urgently requested to take such steps as may be possible, necessary, and effective to bring about a prompt and complete enforcement of the awards and determinations of the National War Labor Board duly made in its case, docket No. 195, entitled Machinists et al. v. Employers of Madison, Wis.

Resolved further, That if legislation seems necessary to bring about such a prompt and effective enforcement of such awards, that the National War Labor Board is urged to present such facts to Congress with a recommendation for such necessary legislation.

Resolved further, That a copy of this resolution, duly attested, be sent to the National War Labor Board, and as soon as Congress shall be in session that duly attested copies be sent to the presiding officers and to all the Members from this State in both Houses of the Congress of the United States.

RILEY S. YOUNG,
Speaker of the Assembly.
C. E. SHAFFER,
Chief Clerk of the Assembly.
EDWARD F. DITTMAR,
President of the Senate.
O. G. MUNSON,
Chief Clerk of the Senate.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Joint resolution 52, S.

Joint resolution memorializing Congress in behalf of the farmers to repeal the law advancing the time one hour.

Whereas the conditions imposed by turning the clocks one hour ahead are a source of great inconvenience and annoyance to, and in many cases work a hardship on the majority of our citizens, including practically all of the farmers, and many of the other laboring men, their wives, and families, working special hardships on those women who rise early to prepare the worker's morning meal and noon lunch, who are deprived of the summer morning daylight, and have it added at the evening to keep their small children awake and deprive these mothers of much of their evening freedom, and widespread dissatisfaction prevails among them because the law, which they supposed was only a war-time measure, is still in force: Be it

Resolved by the senate (the assembly concurring), That Congress be memorialized to repeal the law by which the time of day was advanced one hour, so that the farmers and others may continue their avocation, so necessary and vital to the Nation, unhampered by such unnatural interference and secure from their labors the largest possible returns not only for themselves but also for the country and world at large; be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution, signed by the presiding officers of each house, be forwarded to the Senators and Congressmen from this State.

EDWARD F. DITTMAR,
President of the Senate.
O. G. MUNSON,
Chief Clerk of the Senate.
RILEY S. YOUNG,
Speaker of the Assembly.
C. E. SHAFFER,
Chief Clerk of the Assembly.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Joint resolution 76, A.

Joint resolution memorializing Congress for the speedy withdrawal of the American forces from Russia.

Whereas in the prosecution of the great war our Government has seen fit to send American forces, including Wisconsin troops, into Russia; and

Whereas by virtue of the signing of the armistice on November 11, 1918, the same reasons which pertained to the maintenance of American troops in Russia were obliterated; and

Whereas Congress has never declared war against Russia; and

Whereas in the best interest of our country's welfare it seems unnecessary under existing circumstances to imperil the lives of our troops to the desolation, dangerous and rigorous climatic conditions, and perils existing in far-distant Russia; and

Whereas the best interests of our troops demand that they be removed from the intolerable conditions to which they are now subject: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the assembly (the senate concurring), That Congress be memorialized to pass such laws and take such action therefor as it shall deem necessary for the speedy return of all American troops from Russia.

Resolved further, That a copy of these resolutions, properly attested by the presiding officer of each house, be forwarded to the President of the United States, the representatives of the United States at the peace conference, the Secretary of War, and to each of the Senators and Representatives from the State of Wisconsin in the Congress of the United States. That as soon as the Congress of the United States shall be in session duly attested copies of this joint resolution shall be transmitted to the presiding officers of each House.

RILEY S. YOUNG,
Speaker of the Assembly.
C. E. SHAFFER,
Chief Clerk of the Assembly.
EDWARD F. DITTMAR,
President of the Senate.
O. G. MUNSON,
Chief Clerk of the Senate.

Mr. FA FOLLETTE presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Joint resolution 50, A.

Joint resolution relating to the league of nations.

Resolved, That the Legislature of Wisconsin is profoundly impressed by the momentous character of the constitution of the proposed league of nations recently cabled from Paris, by its supremely just and exalted purpose, by its sound generalities and elastic quality, and desires promptly to go on record as favoring its spirit and design, relatively as presented, and as urging the Senators in Congress from Wisconsin to give to it, in treaty form, friendly consideration to the utmost degree consistent with the safeguarding and preservation of our national sovereignty, which sovereignty, we believe, can not be threatened by it in any possible measure comparable with the beneficent possibilites affecting humanity and civilization that it embraces.

Resolved further, That copies of this resolution be transmitted to the President of the United States and to our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

RILEY S. YOUNG,
Speaker of the Assembly.
C. E. SHAFFER,
Chief Clerk of the Assembly.
EDWARD F. DITTMAR,
President of the Senate.
O. G. MUNSON,
Chief Clerk of the Senate.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, which was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Joint resolution 39, A.

Joint resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States to refund insurance premiums paid by soldiers, sailors, and marines under the soldiers' and sailors' insurance act during the war, and to permit such soldiers, sailors, and marines to continue such insurance after discharge.

Whereas Congress has provided a plan of insurance for soldiers, sailors, and marines under "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to authorize the establishment of a Bureau of War Risk Insurance in the Treasury Department,'" approved October 6, 1917; and

Whereas such insurance was planned to care for the dependents of soldiers, sailors, and marines by insurance in place of by pensions; and

Whereas the cost of such insurance except the expense of administration and excess mortality and disability is borne by the enlisted men themselves; and

Whereas the entire financial burdens of every activity connected with the war, including the obligations resulting from casualities, should be borne by all the people, rather than by the soldiers, sailors, and marines alone who have already done their great share of carrying such burdens; and

Whereas such insurance was provided to take the place of pensions to care for the soldiers, sailors, and marines and their dependents, policies of insurance issued thereunder should be continued at the option of such soldiers, sailors, and marines: Therefore, be it

Resolved by the assembly (the senate concurring), That the Congress of the United States be, and is hereby, respectfully memorialized to provide for the refunding to soldiers, sailors, and marines all amounts paid by them as premiums for such war-risk insurance prior to their being mustered out and to provide or continue the policy of maintaining such insurance after being mustered out as term insurance, with the option of converting the same into any of the usual forms to be carried by the soldier, sailor, or marine; be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be transmitted by the chief clerk of the assembly to the President of the Senate and to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and also to the Representatives from this State in the Congress of the United States.

RILEY S. YOUNG,
Speaker of the Assembly.
C. E. SHAFFER,
Chief Clerk of the Assembly.
EDWARD F. DITTMAR,
President of the Senate.
O. G. MUNSON,
Chief Clerk of the Senate.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, which was referred to the Committee on Fisheries and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Joint resolution 28, A.

Joint resolution urging the Congress of the United States to enact legislation relating to the conservation of fish and clams in the Mississippi River and its branches in the States of Minnesota, Iowa, and Wisconsin.

Whereas the fishing and clamming industry in the Mississippi River and its branches in the States of Minnesota, Iowa, and Wisconsin has become of vital importance in the production of food; and

Whereas this industry in the States mentioned has been greatly retarded in its proper development because of the lack of uniform laws providing definite and uniform regulations governing the industry; and

Whereas, the Legislatures of Minnesota, Iowa, and Wisconsin heretofore have been unable to agree upon laws which would provide such uniform and definite regulations: Therefore, be it

Resolved by the assembly (the senate concurring), That this legislature respectfully memorialize and urge the Congress of the United States to enact legislation governing and regulating fishing and clamming in the Mississippi River and its tributaries in the States of Minnesota, Iowa, and Wisconsin; and be it further

Resolved, That a suitable copy of this resolution, properly attested by the presiding officers and chief clerks of both houses, be forwarded to the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and to each United States Senator and Congressman from this State.

RILEY S. YOUNG,
Speaker of the Assembly.
C. E. SHAFFER,
Chief Clerk of the Assembly.
EDWARD F. DITTMAR,
President of the Senate.
O. G. MUNSON,
Chief Clerk of the Senate.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Joint resolution 42.

Joint resolution relating to a deep waterway from Oshkosh to Green Bay.

Whereas the failure of the transportation companies to keep pace with the commercial requirements of the country, and especially the great Northwest, has become a question of national importance; and

Whereas the building of ship canals and the digging of deeper waterways under proper restrictions would furnish work for the unemployed and be of lasting benefit to the people of this country; and
Whereas on the Fox River, between Oshkosh and Green Bay, smaller boats now travel and the largest boats could travel if the river was widened and deepened or if a suitable ship canal was built; and
Whereas the enlarging of this river, permitting travel and transportation from this part of the State, and thence directly into Lake Michigan, would be of the greatest possible benefit to the people of the northeastern part of this State: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the senate (the assembly concurring), That our Representatives in Congress are hereby requested to use their best endeavor to secure such an appropriation as will permit either the making of a deep waterway or a ship canal between the points herein suggested; and that copies of this resolution, signed by the presiding officers of both houses and attested by the chief clerks, be transmitted to each such Representative.

EDWARD F. DITTMAR,
President of the Senate.
O. G. MUNSON,
Chief Clerk of the Senate.
F. N. GRAAN,
Speaker pro tempore of the Assembly.
C. E. SHAFFER,
Chief Clerk of the Assembly.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Joint resolution 41, A.

Joint resolution relating to the cheese, butter, and feed industry, and to the supply of and prices for cheese, butter, and feed at the present time.

Whereas the price of American full-cream cheese was up to a rate ranging from 35 cents to 38 cents per pound during the fall of 1918 and until some recent date in January, 1919, although the central powers and most of the neutral powers were not being supplied; and
Whereas after the cessation of hostilities the price of these commodities showed a tendency to drop, and has recently dropped to about 27 cents or 28 cents per pound; and
Whereas despite the need of food in Europe it is commonly reported that the large storage warehouses are filled to their utmost capacity with this food product; and
Whereas our farmers are being charged such high prices for wheat bran, gluten, oil meal, and similar feeding stuffs that these abnormal conditions will mean a great loss of money to the farmers of this State: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the assembly (the senate concurring), That the Federal Trade Commission is hereby respectfully requested and urged to investigate, as soon as may be, the conditions of supply of cheese and butter in storage warehouses and in other places of commercial storage, and the conditions of supply of the various mill feeding stuffs, and to report the result of such investigation to this legislature with all convenient speed in such a form as to fully advise the farmers of the true causes of the present condition of the market for cheese and butter and the prices charged for mill feeds.

That copies of this resolution duly engrossed and properly attested be transmitted to the chairman of the Federal Trade Commission and to each of the Senators and Representatives from this State in the Congress of the United States.

Speaker of the Assembly.
C. E. SHAFFER,
Chief Clerk of the Assembly.
EDWARD F. DITTMAR,
President of the Senate.
O. G. MUNSON,
Chief Clerk of the Senate.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Joint resolution 73, A.

Joint resolution memorializing Congress to prohibit the purchase of liberty bonds by scalpers, and providing a penalty therefor.

Whereas in the best interests of our country's welfare our Government has found it necessary and desirable to issue, promote, and sell liberty bonds as a provision towards the cost of the great war and has found it desirable that the sale of liberty bonds should be widely distributed throughout the country, thereby insuring both the popularity of the loan and giving all persons equal opportunity to secure its benefits; and
Whereas the great success of the sale of the liberty bonds and its wide distribution among all classes of people and nationalities in this country has made it possible for swindlers and scalpers to take advantage of the times and conditions of the small investors, especially by obtaining the liberty bonds on false representations and at prices below the par value of the same, thereby enabling the scalper to obtain unfair profit, especially at the expense of the holders of the bonds of small denomination; and
Whereas such practices are contrary to the welfare of the people and the public policy of this State: Therefore be it

Resolved by the assembly (the senate concurring), That Congress be memorialized to pass such laws and make appropriations therefor as it shall deem necessary for the protection of all holders of liberty bonds and provide a penalty for the punishment of all bond scalpers or persons who obtain bonds below the par value thereof without the full knowledge of the seller of the bond of his rights therein.

Resolved, That as soon as the Congress of the United States shall be in session duly attested copies of this joint resolution shall be transmitted to the presiding officers of each House and to each of the Senators and Representatives from the State of Wisconsin in the Congress of the United States.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Arizona, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE OF ARIZONA,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
State of Arizona, ss:

I, Mit Simms, secretary of state, do hereby certify that the within is a true, complete, and correct transcript of house concurrent resolution No. 1, Fourth Legislature of the State of Arizona, 1919, "favoring the establishment of a league of nations of which the United States will be a member," all of which is shown by the original on file in this department.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed my official seal. Done at Phoenix, the capital, this 4th day of February, A. D. 1919.

[SEAL.]

MIT SIMMS,
Secretary of State.

House concurrent resolution 1, introduced by Mr. Vyne, of Yavapai.

Whereas the war, now brought to a victorious close by the associated power of the free nations of the world, was above all else a war to end war and protect human rights: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Legislature of the State of Arizona (both houses concurring), That we favor the establishment of a league of nations, of which the United States shall be a member. We believe that such a league should aim at promoting the liberty, progress, and orderly development of the world and clinch the victory won at such terrible sacrifice; be it further

Resolved, That certified copies of this resolution be sent to the Secretary of State, to the President, and to the presiding officers of both branches of Congress, and to each of the Senators and Representatives from Arizona.

Passed the House January 25, 1919, by the following vote: 34 ayes, no noes, no absent, 1 excused.

Assistant Secretary.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Arizona, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint resolution 5.

Whereas it has been recommended by the Hon. Franklin K. Lane, Secretary of the Interior of the United States, that Congress immediately appropriate the sum of $100,000,000 for placing the returning soldiers of the United States upon farms, thereby inaugurating a plan whereby at least 100,000 men will be immediately employed in the creation of at least 25,000 farms within the territory of the United States; and
Whereas the plan as outlined by the honorable Secretary of the Interior proposes the reclamation of approximately 215,000,000 acres of arid and swamp land within the United States, at present unfit for cultivation because of the lack of water in the one case and drainage in the other; and
Whereas the plan suggested is not a "charity scheme," and under appropriate management will be self-funding, and will offer alluring opportunities to settlers as compared with the old land-settlement systems, inasmuch as 40 years' time is to be given the settlers within which to reimburse the United States for the money and credit loaned to them: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Legislature of the State of Arizona at its fourth regular session, That the plan as outlined by Secretary of the Interior Lane meets with its heartiest and utmost approval, and that this legislature urges upon the Congress of the United States the early enactment into law of the plan proposed and the appropriation of the money needed to carry out the provisions thereof; and be it further

Resolved, That this resolution be signed by the presiding officers of each branch of the legislature and the governor of the State, and that the secretary of state of the State of Arizona be, and he is hereby, directed to forward copies of these resolutions to the Hon. Franklin K. Lane, Secretary of the Interior, to the President of the Senate of the United States, to the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, and to each of Arizona's Representatives in Congress.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona presented a resolution adopted by the Arizona Cattle Growers' Association favoring the continuance of Federal control of railroads, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented a petition of the Arizona Cattle Growers' Association praying for the enactment of legislation requiring the fencing of rights of way of railroads and the early settlement of claims for damages for the killing of live stock, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented a petition of the Arizona Cattle Growers' Association praying for the enactment of legislation restricting the importation of agricultural products into the United States in competition with such products of our own people, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the Arizona Cattle Growers' Association favoring the modification of the rules relative to the exportation of cattle to the State of Sonora, Mexico, for grazing purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of the Arizona Cattle Growers' Association praying for the enactment of legislation providing for the granting to the State of Arizona of 5,000,000 acres of the unappropriated vacant lands upon the public domain within the State of Arizona, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the Arizona Cattle Growers' Association favoring the regulation and control by the Federal Government of the unappropriated and unreserved lands lying on the public domain, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the Arizona Cattle Growers' Association favoring the plans proposed by the Secretary of the Interior for the reclamation of large areas of land in the State of Arizona for the settlement by returned soldiers, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

He also presented a petition adopted by the Arizona Cattle Growers' Association praying that the State Department modify the passport rules and regulations as to permit cattle growers to take advantage of the grazing opportunities afforded in the State of Sonora, Mexico, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a petition of the Arizona Cattle Growers' Association praying for the appropriation of $50,000 for the destruction and extermination of predatory wild animals and range-destroying rodents, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the Arizona Cattle Growers' Association favoring the prompt enactment of the Kendrick bill, with necessary amendments, for the control of the marketing of live stock, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also presented a petition of the Arizona Cattle Growers' Association praying for the enactment of legislation to provide adequate compensation to retain capable men for the Forest Service, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also presented a petition of the Arizona Cattle Growers' Association praying for the enactment of legislation authorizing the Federal farm-loan banks to make loans upon live-stock securities, which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Secretary of State.

Concurrent resolution introduced by the house committee of agriculture.

Whereas the practice in gambling in grain options has grown to such an extent in this country that it unsettles market conditions and is detrimental to the interest of the producers and persons engaged in the legitimate grain business; and

Whereas it has become common practice for persons to sell and buy in the market on margin large quantities of grain without regard to the supply or the existence of the commodity so bought or sold: Therefore be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the Legislature of the State of South Dakota (the Senate concurring), That the Congress of the United States be, and the same hereby is, respectfully memorialized to forthwith enact suitable legislation forbidding the trading on margins or selling or offering for sale of any grain or farm products not in existence at the time of the trading, selling, or offering for sale of such commodities, to the end that gambling and market manipulation by the sale or offer for sale of products not owned or nonexistent in competition with actual existing products may be prevented, and compelling all persons selling or offering for sale such products to furnish bills of lading, warehouse receipts, or other evidence of ownership and existence of such commodities where the actual product is not produced for delivery on sale.

That a copy of this resolution be sent to the Senators and Representatives in Congress from this State.

OFFICE OF SECRETARY OF STATE,
Pierre, S. Dak.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
State of South Dakota, Secretary's Office.

I, C. A. Burkhart, secretary of state, do hereby certify that the annexed bill, to wit, house concurrent resolution, was duly passed by the sixteenth session of the Legislature of the State of South Dakota, and that the same is now in full force and effect.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of South Dakota, at the city of Pierre, January 4, 1919.

[SEAL.] C. A. BURKHART,
Secretary of State.

Hon. C. A. BURKHART, Secretary of State:

The following concurrent resolution has been adopted by the house of representatives and concurred in by the senate:

Concurrent resolution.

Be it resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of South Dakota (the Senate concurring):

Whereas Congress has at various times appropriated funds for the purpose of sinking four flowing artesian wells on the border of a certain meandered lake known as Lake Andes, and located in the county of Charles Mix and State of South Dakota, for the purpose of furnishing water and fish for the Indians; and

Whereas the level of said lake has been raised several feet by the continuous flow of water discharged from the above-mentioned wells, causing the water to inundate large areas of valuable surveyed and patented agricultural land adjacent to the said lake, and that the lands so submerged are rendered worthless thereby to the owners thereof for either agricultural or grazing purposes, and that there are at least 1,500 acres of such land so submerged, and that the damage to these lands by said inundation or overflow is not less than $100 per acre, and that the owners of said lands are justly entitled to full compensation for such damage from the Government of the United States, by whose authority the said wells were sunk which caused the submerging or overflow of said lands: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate of the State of South Dakota (the House of Representatives concurring), That we earnestly, though respectfully, request the Congress of the United States at its next session to appropriate a sufficient sum to reimburse said overflowed-land owners.

For the house:

LEWIS BENSON, Speaker.
WRIGHT TARBELL, Chief Clerk.

For the senate:

C. S. AMSDEN,
President pro tempore.
A. B. BLAKE, Secretary.

Dated at Pierre, S. Dak., this 22d day of January, A. D. 1919.

Mr. STERLING presented petitions of sundry citizens of the State of South Dakota, praying for the repeal of the daylight-saving law, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. WADSWORTH presented petitions of sundry citizens of Plattsburgh, N. Y., praying for the ratification of the league of nations treaty, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented petitions of sundry citizens of the State of New York, praying for Government ownership of railroads, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

STATE OF CONNECTICUT,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
General Assembly, January Session, A. D. 1919.

Senate joint resolution 61.

Resolution in relation to the establishment of a Federal department of education.

Resolved by this assembly:

Whereas the future security and prosperity of the United States as a democracy depends upon the trained intelligence and skill of those present and future citizens, for which purpose a constructive national system and Federal support of education are necessary: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Senators and Representatives of Connecticut be memorialized and urged to use all honorable means to secure the enactment of the educational bill S. 4987 or H. R. 15400, which provide for the removal of illiteracy, the Americanization of aliens, the improvement of the facilities for the preparation of teachers, the promotion of the health of all school children, and the establishment of a Federal department of education.

Senate, April 16, 1919: Passed.

House of representatives, April 22, 1919: Passed.

STATE OF CONNECTICUT,
Office of the Secretary, ss:

I, F. L. Perry, secretary of the State of Connecticut and keeper of the seal thereof and of the original record of the acts and resolutions of the general assembly of said State, do hereby certify that I have compared the annexed copy of the resolution in relation to the establishment of a Federal department of education, with the original record of the same now remaining in this office, and have found the said copy to be a correct and complete transcript thereof.

And I further certify that the said original record is a public record of the said State of Connecticut now remaining in this office.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of said State at Hartford this 29th day of April, 1919.

[SEAL.] F. L. PERRY, Secretary.

Mr. MCLEAN presented petitions of sundry citizens of the State of Connecticut, praying for the ratification of the league of nations treaty, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a petition of the Young Men's Christian Association of Bridgeport, Conn., praying for the disposal of Government machinery not now in use to trade and technical schools and universities, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. HARDING. I present a joint resolution adopted by the general assembly of the State of Ohio, relative to the rights of the Jewish people. I ask that the joint resolution be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The joint resolution was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint resolution 45.

Joint resolution relative to the rights of the Jewish people.

Whereas the future prosperity and peace of the world depends upon a just and equitable settlement of the European war whereby each and every nationality, however small, shall be granted the liberty to determine its own destiny and the opportunity of living its own life; and

Whereas the Government of the United States of America is recognized as an ardent exponent of the rights of small nations: Therefore be it

Resolved by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, That in its opinion the national aspirations and historic claims of the Jewish people with regard to Palestine should be recognized at the peace conference in accordance with the British Government's declaration of November 2, 1917, that there be established such political, administrative, and economic conditions in Palestine as will assure the development of Palestine into a Jewish commonwealth, and that the American representatives at the peace conference should use their best endeavors to facilitate the achievement of this object: Be it further

Resolved, That it is the opinion of the General Assembly of the State of Ohio that express provisions be made at the peace conference for the purpose of granting the Jewish people in every land the complete enjoyment of life, liberty, and the opportunities for national development to the end that justice may be done to one of the most suffering people on earth, the Jewish people; and be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of state be, and he is hereby, directed to send duly certified copies of this resolution to each of the Representatives of this State in the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States and to each of the representatives of the United States in attendance as members of the peace conference assembled at Paris.

CARL R. KIMBALL,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
CLARENCE J. BROWN,
President of the Senate.

Adopted April 15, 1919.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
State of Ohio, ss:

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

I, Harvey C. Smith, secretary of state of the State of Ohio, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a copy of house joint resolution 45 as adopted by the General Assembly of Ohio, the same being a resolution relative to the rights of the Jewish people; that the same has been carefully compared by me with the original joint resolution filed in this office May 7, 1919, and now in my official custody as secretary of state; and that the same is found to be a true and correct copy.

Witness my hand and official seal, at Columbus, this 8th day of May, A. D. 1919.

[SEAL.] HARVEY C. SMITH,
Secretary of State.

AMENDMENT TO SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. JONES of Washington submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $50,000,000 to resume and prosecute work on projects and units thereof, under the reclamation act, stopped during the war, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation of Arid Lands and ordered to be printed.

SENATOR FROM MICHIGAN.

Mr. POMERENE. I offer a resolution which I ask to have read for the information of the Senate, and referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

The resolution (S. Res. 11) was read and referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections, as follows:

Whereas charges and countercharges of excessive and illegal expenditures of money and of unlawful practices have been made in connection with the election of a Senator from the State of Michigan, which election was held on the 5th day of November, 1918: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Committee on Privileges and Elections, or any subcommittee thereof, be, and it is hereby, authorized and directed to investigate the said charges and countercharges or excessive and illegal expenditures of money and of unlawful practices in connection with the said election of a Senator from the State of Michigan and to take possession of the ballots, poll books, tally sheets, and all other documents and records relating to the said election; and the Sergeant at Arms of the Senate and his deputies and assistants be, and they are hereby, instructed to carry out the directions of the said Committee on Privileges and Elections, or any subcommittee thereof, in that behalf; and that the said Committee on Privileges and Elections, or any subcommittee thereof, be, and it is hereby, directed to proceed with all convenient speed to take all necessary steps for the preservation of the said ballots, poll books, tally sheets, and other documents, and to recount the said ballot, and to take and preserve all evidence as to the various matters alleged in the said charges and countercharges and of any alleged fraud, irregularity, and excessive and illegal expenditures of money and of any unlawful practices in the said election and primary and as to the intimidation of voters or other facts affecting the result of said election; and be it

Resolved further, That the Committee on Privileges and Elections, or any subcommittee thereof, be authorized to sit during the sessions of the Senate and during any recess of the Senate or of the Congress and to hold its sessions at such place or places as it shall deem most convenient for the purposes of the investigation, and to have full power to subpœna parties and witnesses and to require the production of all papers, books, and documents and other evidence relating to the said investigation, and to employ clerks and stenographers at a cost not to exceed $1 per printed page to take and make a record of all evidence taken and received by the committee and to keep a record of its proceedings, and to have such evidence, records, and others matter required by the committee printed; and be it

Resolved further, That the Sergeant at Arms of the Senate, and his deputies and assistants are hereby required to attend the said Committee on Privileges and Election, or any subcommittee thereof, and to execute its directions; that the chairman or any member of the committee be, and is hereby, empowered to administer oaths; that each of the parties to the said contest be entitled to representatives and attorneys at the recount and the taking of evidence; that all disputed ballots and records be preserved so that final action may be had thereon by the full committee and the Senate; that the committee may appoint subcommittees of one or more members to represent the committee at the various places in the making of the recount and the taking of evidence, and the committee may appoint such supervisors of the recount as it may deem best; and that the committee may adopt and enforce such rules and regulations for the conduct of the recount and the taking of evidence as it may deem wise, not inconsistent with this resolution; and that the committee shall report to the Senate as early as may be and, from time to time, if it deems best, submit all the testimony and the result of the recount and of the investigation; and be it

Resolved further, That the expenses incurred in the carrying out of these resolutions shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate upon vouchers ordered by the committee, or any subcommittee thereof, and approved by the chairman of the committee.

TREATY OF PEACE.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I offer a resolution and ask for its immediate hearing.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Let the resolution be read first.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the resolution.

The resolution (S. Res. 12) was read, as follows:

Whereas the peace treaty has been completed and has been delivered to the representatives of Germany; and

Whereas a synopsis only of the treaty has been given publicity in the United States and our people are entitled to know its full contents and to what, if any, engagements they may have been committed; and

Whereas it is reported in the press that the entire treaty has been cabled to the State Department and is now in the possession of the State Department: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Secretary of State be, and he is hereby, requested forthwith to transmit to the Senate the full text of the treaty of peace completed at the Paris conference and delivered to the representatives of Germany.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there any objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I ask the Senator from California if he will not withhold his request for the consideration of this resolution until Senators may be allowed to introduce certain bills?

Mr. ROBINSON. I object to the present consideration of the resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will go over under the rule and be printed.

UNITED STATES SOLDIERS IN SIBERIA.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President, I offer another resolution and ask unanimous consent for its adoption immediately.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the resolution.

The resolution (S. Res. 13) was read, as follows:

Whereas it is reported in the public press that 8,000 United States soldiers are to be sent to Siberia; and

Whereas the purposes for which the said soldiers are dispatched to Siberia are undisclosed and unknown: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Secretary of State and the Secretary of War be, and they are hereby, requested immediately to inform the Senate of the reasons for sending 8,000 United States soldiers to Siberia, what duties are there to be performed by these soldiers, how long they are to remain, and generally to advise the Senate of the policy of the United States Government in respect to Siberia and the maintenance of United States soldiers therein.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there any objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. ROBINSON. I object, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will go over under the rule and be printed.

PROPOSED COMMITTEE ON AERONAUTICS.

Mr. NEW. I offer a resolution and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the resolution.

The resolution (S. Res. 14) was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Rules is hereby authorized and directed to report a committee of the Senate to be known as the committee on aeronautics, the general purpose and functions of which shall be to consider all matters appertaining to aircraft and aviation.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there any objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, I do not think the rules, under their express terms, can be amended in that way. The rules require their amendment by formal notice of a purpose to submit an amendment to them; and I make the point of order against the resolution.

Mr. LODGE. It is simply a request to refer a resolution to a committee.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Oh, no; it is a direction to the committee to bring in a particular character of rule.

Mr. LODGE. The resolution of the Senator from Indiana, as I understood it when I heard it read, proposes to give instructions to a committee of the Senate to consider a certain matter. The committee has the right to bring in a rule. The day's notice comes before the rule is brought in.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. But I do not think the committee could be directed to report a rule. I suggest, Mr. President, that the resolution be read again.

Mr. LODGE. The resolution can be perfectly well changed to meet the objection of the Senator from Georgia. All that the Senator from Indiana has to do is to state the rule which he wishes to change.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I make the point of order against its immediate consideration, at any rate. I ask that the resolution may go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will go over under objection, and in the meantime the Chair will endeavor to find out whether or not it is subject to a point of order.

TREATY OF PEACE.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. I submit a resolution and ask that it be read.

The resolution (S. Res. 15) was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Foreign Relations be, and hereby is, requested to secure for the Senate of the United States a copy of the proposed treaty of peace delivered to the German plenipotentiaries on May 7, 1919.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the resolution.

Mr. ASHURST. I object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution goes over under the rule.

PENINSULA OF LOWER CALIFORNIA.

Mr. ASHURST. I offer a Senate resolution which I ask may be read and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The resolution (S. Res. 16) was read and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, as follows:

Resolved, That the President of the United States is hereby respectfully requested to open negotiations with the Republic of Mexico for the purchase of the peninsula of Lower California and for the purchase of that tract of land in the State of Sonora, Republic of Mexico, approximating in area 10,000 square miles, and lying north of the parallel of 31° 20′ north latitude.

MISS ALICE WOOD.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, a short time ago one of the teachers in the District of Columbia, Miss Alice Wood, was suspended for a week. Some charges were made to the effect that she was teaching Bolshevism in the schools. I have no defense for Bolshevism. I think if she were teaching Bolshevism in the schools she ought to have been dismissed instead of being suspended.

Charges have been made that she was not given a proper hearing. Charges have been made indicating that very autocratic action was taken and rather secret proceedings had. I do not know whether that is true or not. If that is true, we have the essence of Bolshevism in high places, and the practice of Bolshevism by those in authority is as bad, if not worse, than is the preaching of Bolshevism.

All I know is that Miss Wood was assured by the superintendent of schools of the District of Columbia that the hearing she had been invited to attend was simply an informal hearing and an inquiry of a friendly character. I know that much myself. A short time after the hearing there appeared under large headlines statements given out by the board or by the superintendent putting Miss Wood in a very unpatriotic light and position and setting out the action of the board. Only two members of the board were present at the meeting attended by Miss Wood. She was never called before the board. She had no opportunity to refute any charges before the board, and did not know that she was being prosecuted.

I think we ought to know the facts with reference to this incident, and so I am presenting a resolution authorizing the Committee on the District of Columbia or some subcommittee thereof to investigate the matter. I ask that the resolution may be read, and then I suppose it will have to go to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

The resolution (S. Res. 17) was read and referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on the District of Columbia, or any subcommittee thereof, be, and it is hereby, directed to investigate and ascertain the facts relative to the suspension by the Board of Education of the District of Columbia of Miss Alice Wood, a teacher in the schools of the District, and report the same to the Senate with its recommendations; and the committee or any subcommittee conducting such investigation is authorized to subpœna witnesses, send for persons, books, and papers, to administer oaths and take all steps necessary to ascertain the facts, and to employ such stenographic help as may be necessary at a cost not exceeding $1 per printed page, the expenses thereof to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate; and the committee or any subcommitte thereof may sit during the sessions or recess of the Senate in conducting such investigation.

UNITED STATES MILITARY OPERATIONS IN RUSSIA.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I submit a resolution which I ask may be read and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The resolution (S. Res. 18) was read and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, as follows:

Whereas the Constitution provides that the President shall from time to time inform the Senate of the state of the Union: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the President is requested to inform the Senate what plan, purpose, and policy has been adopted by the executive branch of the Government as to the military operations now being conducted by the United States Army in Russia; whether these operations are against the all-Russian Government at Omsk or against the Bolshevist party in control at Moscow; and if against either of these governments, to what extent it is proposed to proceed to carry out by force the objects of said several military expeditions; and to inform the Senate, if said expeditions have a military object, why the number of troops therein has been so limited and is so inadequate that it is impossible to accomplish such purpose, or any purpose: and that the only and inevitable result of said expeditions with inadequate numbers, and with no plan or purpose of policy or campaign, is the needless hardship, suffering, loss of life of men conscripted into the United States Army for the war with Germany, and vast expenditures from the Treasury of the United States, without the possibility of beneficial results.

CLAIMS AGAINST MEXICO.

Mr. KING submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 19), which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

Resolved, That the President is requested to open negotiations through diplomatic channels with Mexico for the appointment of a joint high commission on the part of the United States and upon the part of Mexico, which shall be authorized to consider, liquidate, and settle claims made by the citizens of the United States to recover damages suffered on account of the delinquency of the Government of Mexico.

REPEAL OF REVENUE LAW.

Mr. KING submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 20), which was referred to the Committee on Finance:

Resolved, That it be the sense of the Senate that sections 630 and 904 of the act entitled "An act to provide revenue, and for other purposes," approved February 24, 1919, be repealed.

INDIAN LANDS IN UTAH.

Mr. KING submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 21), which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry:

Whereas in the counties of Duchesne and Uinta, in the State of Utah, there is a large body of Indian lands known as Indian grazing lands, which has not been allotted in severalty to the Indians of the Ute Tribe, which lands adjoin the Ashley National Forest in the State of Utah; and

Whereas said lands are valuable for grazing purposes and contain areas which are also specially adapted to agricultural use and occupation; and

Whereas said lands are not being utilized for any beneficial purpose and are excluded from the use of the white settlers in said counties; and

Whereas the said Indians for whose use said lands have ostensibly been set apart are unable to occupy or make any economic or beneficial use of the same; and

Whereas said Indians for whose use said lands have been segregated and set apart are not making an economic or adequate use of said lands, and will not in the future be able to make an economic or adequate use of said lands: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Secretary of Agriculture be, and he is hereby, directed to report to the Senate the present status of the said so-called Indian grazing lands in Duchesne and Uinta Counties, Utah, and what means may be taken to extinguish the Indian title to said lands and open the same to use, settlement, and occupation, and whether it is convenient and advantageous to add said lands, or any part thereof, to the Uinta National Forest.

GRAZING LANDS IN UTAH.

Mr. KING submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 22), which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs:

Whereas in the counties of Duchesne and Uinta, in the State of Utah, there is a large body of Indian lands known as Indian grazing lands, which has not been allotted in severalty to the Indians of the Ute Tribe, which lands adjoin the Ashley National Forest in the State of Utah; and

Whereas said lands are valuable for grazing purposes and contain areas which are also specially adapted to agricultural use and occupation; and

Whereas said lands are not being utilized for any beneficial purpose and are excluded from the use of the white settlers in said counties; and

Whereas the said Indians for whose use said lands have ostensibly been set apart are unable to occupy or make any economic or beneficial use of the same; and

Whereas said Indians for whose use said lands have been segregated and set apart are not making an economic or adequate use of said lands, and will not in the future be able to make an economic or adequate use of said lands: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, directed to report to the Senate the present status of the said so-called Indian grazing lands in Duchesne and Uinta Counties, Utah, and what means may be taken to extinguish the Indian title to said lands and open the same to use, settlement, and occupation, and whether it is convenient and advantageous to add said lands, or any part thereof, to the Uinta National Forest.

ARMY OF 500,000 MEN.

Mr. KING submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 23), which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs:

Whereas representatives of the United States and the allied Governments have met at Paris for the purpose of negotiating terms of peace between the said Governments and the Central Powers; and

Whereas under the law providing for the present military forces of the United States most of said forces within a short period after the terms of peace have been signed will automatically be released and discharged from military service; and

Whereas it may be necessary for the United States to maintain military forces in Europe for a considerable period after peace conditions have been agreed upon, not only for the purpose of procuring a fulfillment of the necessary guaranties exacted from the Central Powers but for other proper, legitimate, and imperative reasons; and

Whereas the unsettled and confused conditions existing throughout the world require that provision be made for the safety and security of this Nation and its interests, and for such purpose, in addition to the maintenance of a strong Navy, an Army of sufficient strength and size should be organized: Therefore be it

Resolved, That in the opinion of the Senate legislation should be enacted authorizing the organization of an Army of 500,000 men.

THE NATIONAL GUARD.

Mr. McKELLAR submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 24), which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War be, and is hereby, respectfully requested to furnish the Senate the names of all National Guard officers that have been dismissed from the service since the beginning of the present war, by States, together with the rank of each officer and the organization to which he belonged, and the dates and causes of dismissal.

CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTORS TO MILITARY SERVICE.

Mr. KELLOGG submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 25), which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs:

Whereas during previous months the press of the country published articles relative to the release of conscientious objectors from the military service and from confinement; and

Whereas it is alleged that the War Department considered the matter subjectively and authorized that conscientious objectors should be given honorable discharges from the military service and become entitled to all compensation in arrears at the time of their discharge, which compensation was tendered them; and

Whereas the people of the United States, and particularly those who served faithfully in the military service, are entitled to a complete, true, and detailed report of the action of the War Department alleged above: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Secretary of War shall be, and he is hereby, requested to furnish a complete and detailed report of the action taken by the War Department affecting conscientious objectors, which report shall set forth names, dates of confinement, and dates of discharge, amount of compensation tendered each individual, and the character of the discharge granted in each instance; said report to be submitted to the Senate at the earliest practicable date.

STANDARD VALUATIONS.

Mr. THOMAS. By request I offer a concurrent resolution, which I ask to have referred to the Committee on Standards, Weights, and Measures.

The concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 1) was referred to the Committee on Standards, Weights, and Measures, as follows:

Whereas the lack of uniformity in determining value or relative value results at once in general confusion and inequality in taxation burdens; and

Whereas a scientific study of the subject by some recognized bureau of the General Government would be helpful; and

Whereas the Bureau of Standards, already established, would seem to be best fitted for such research and service: Now therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Bureau of Standards be, and it hereby is, empowered and directed to assign to the special study and investigation of the subject of value and relative value men of scientific and practical attainments, with the view of making early and comprehensive report on the subject to the Congress.

Resolved further, That in addition to suggesting and recommending a plan whereby value and relative value of all things shall be determined, the bureau shall recommend the manner in which it is believed the standard determined upon may be made of uniform application in the several States and the lesser political subdivisions, all that inequalities in valuations made for revenue, as well as for all other purposes, may be reduced to the minimum or altogether eliminated.

Resolved further, That the Bureau of Standards and the men assigned to the investigation of the subject of this resolution shall give to Dr. Napoleon Wagner, of Denver, Colo., and other students of relative value or the just distribution of the tax burden, not whose dollar but each dollar on the same basis to all alike, as they shall offer to submit the result of their studies, reasonable opportunity in the premises, and, moreover, may ask men of the bureau's selection to appear and present orally or submit in writing that which they believe would be helpful in the solution of the world-wide important question of relative value.

Resolved further, That in addition to stabilizing and standardizing in the Bureau of Standards, Washington, D. C., the daily purchasing power of the value of the present gold dollar or medium of exchange equally with all other commodities to be definitely determined by the present statistical or improved scientific Federal index numbers—as illustrated by the Federal Labor Bureau, the Hon. Samuel Gompers, Labor Statistician, enlarged and improved—on the basis of the natural use—not the profiteering speculative or temporarily artificially forced use—of the Federal determined, daily, publicly declared average value of each commodity based on the real national supply and demand, exactly as per the daily rate of value of money exchange of pound sterling by the Bank of England or by our rate of value of money exchange of the present gold dollar or medium of exchange by the American clearing house by regulation and control of the United States Congress. Thus the value of each commodity publicly daily declared at Washington, D. C., for universal use.

Resolved further, That the expenditure of the sum of $25,000 in furtherance of the investigation contemplated herein is hereby authorized, to be paid from funds not otherwise appropriated.

JOINT COMMITTEE ON DEPARTMENTAL ACCOUNTS.

Mr. McCORMICK submitted the following concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 2), which was referred to the Committee on Rules:

Resolved, That a committee is hereby created to be known as the joint committee on departmental accounts, to consist of 15 Members from each House of Congress, the membership to be appointed in the usual manner.

That said committee shall each year receive the departmental accounts, with the audit and report of the controller-auditor general thereon; shall submit them to a detailed examination; and shall report to the Congress their recommendations in regard to the same not later than the 1st day of March of each year.

That said committee shall not be limited in its examination to the points raised in the audit of the controller-auditor general, but may inquire into any question of irregularity, illegality, fraud, waste, loss, or other such matters which may arise in connection with the accounts: Provided, however, That said committee shall not inquire into questions relating to the wisdom or the policy of the legislation appropriating the money to which the accounts relate, nor shall it inquire into questions of purely an administrative nature.

That said committee shall have authority to call for all necessary documents and papers relating to the departmental accounts, and may compel the attendance of witnesses and administer oaths: Provided, however, That no witnesses may be called or examined who are not employed in the executive departments of the Government.

That this concurrent resolution shall take effect upon the passage of the independent audit bill now pending.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS—JAMES N. SEIP.

On motion of Mr. CURTIS, it was Ordered, That the papers accompanying the bill S. 1278, Sixty-fifth Congress, first session, granting an increase of pension to James N. Seip, be withdrawn from the files of the Senate, no adverse report having been made thereon.

COMMITTEE ON AVIATION AND AERONAUTICS.

Mr. NEW. Mr. President, I desire at this time to give notice that at the next meeting of the Senate I shall move an amendment to Rule XXV so as to have it include a provision for the appointment of a committee on aviation and aeronautics.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The notice must be in writing, the Chair will state to the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. NEW. I will reduce it to writing.

The notice was reduced to writing, as follows:

Mr. NEW. Mr. President, I desire at this time to give notice that at the next meeting of the Senate I shall move to amend Rule XXV to make it include a provision for the appointment of a committee on aviation and aeronautics.

REPORT ON TREATIES OF COMMERCE.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, at the last session of Congress the Senate passed a resolution calling on the Secretary of State for information with reference to treaties of commerce under which notice had been given for the abrogation following certain information. The report of the department did not get down before Congress adjourned. The report, however, is here. I think it furnishes some information that would be of considerable value to the Committee on Commerce in considering matters that very likely will come before it. So I ask that the report may be printed and referred to that committee.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

COVENANT OF LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the covenant of the league of nations in its original form, together with the address of the President in the presentation of it, which has already been printed as a public document, be reprinted as a public document containing the amended form of the covenant of the league of nations, so that we may have it conveniently before us.

Mr. LODGE. I think that ought to be done.

Mr. PITTMAN. The covenant, together with the address of the President in presenting the amendments.

Mr. LODGE. If the Senator will permit me, it ought to be printed in parallel columns, I think, to show the different drafts side by side.

Mr. PITTMAN. I think that is a very good suggestion.

Mr. SMOOT. That is the only way it should be printed. The original document could not well be printed with the amendments incorporated in it. It either ought to be printed by itself or else printed in parallel columns, as suggested by the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. PITTMAN. I adopted the suggestion of the Senator from Massachusetts.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ADJOURNMENT TO FRIDAY.

Mr. LODGE. I ask for the adoption of an order that when the Senate adjourns to-day it be to meet on Friday next. My object is to give time to the committees on committees of the two parties to arrange the standing committees, because until they are arranged business is hampered. We have a great deal of business that will soon be before us in the way of appropriation bills requiring immediate attention. Therefore I ask that when the Senate adjourns to-day it be to meet on Friday next.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by D. K. Hempstead, its enrolling clerk, communicated to the Senate the intelligence of the death of Hon. ALBERT ESTOPINAL, late a Representative from the State of Louisiana, and transmitted resolutions of the House thereon.

The message also communicated to the Senate the intelligence of the death of Hon. CARL C. VAN DYKE, late a Representative from the State of Minnesota, and transmitted resolutions of the House thereon.

DEATH OF REPRESENTATIVE ALBERT ESTOPINAL.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate resolutions from the House of Representatives, which will be read.

The resolutions were read, as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES,
May 19, 1919.

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. ALBERT ESTOPINAL, a Representative from the State of Louisiana.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate a copy of these resolutions to the Senate.

Mr. RANSDELL. Mr. President, I submit the resolutions which I send to the desk and ask for their immediate consideration.

The resolutions (S. Res. 26) were read, considered by unanimous consent, and unanimously agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with deep sensibility the announcement of the death of Hon. ALBERT ESTOPINAL, late a Representative from the State of Louisiana.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives.

DEATH OF REPRESENTATIVE CARL C. VAN DYKE.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate resolutions from the House of Representatives, which will be read.

The resolutions were read, as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES,
May 20, 1919.

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. CARL C. VAN DYKE, a Representative from the State of Minnesota.

Resolved, That a committee of 18 Members of the House, with such Members of the Senate as may be joined, be appointed to attend the funeral.

Resolved, That the Sergeant at Arms of the House be authorized and directed to take such steps as may be necessary for carrying out the provisions of these resolutions, and that the necessary expenses in connection therewith be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect this House do now adjourn.

Mr. KELLOGG. Mr. President, I offer the following resolutions and ask for their adoption.

The resolutions (S. Res. 27) were read, considered by unanimous consent, and unanimously agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with profound sorrow the announcement of the death of Hon. CARL C. VAN DYKE, late a Representative from the State of Minnesota.

Resolved, That a committee of six Senators be appointed by the Vice President to join such committee as may be appointed on the part of the House of Representatives to attend the funeral of the deceased.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate a copy of these resolutions to the House of Representatives.

Under the second resolution the Vice President appointed Mr. NELSON, Mr. KELLOGG, Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota, Mr. PHELAN, Mr. WALSH of Montana, and Mr. LENROOT as the committee on the part of the Senate.

Mr. RANSDELL. Mr. President, as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased Representatives named in the resolutions just adopted, I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

The motion was unanimously agreed to; and (at 1 o'clock and 15 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Friday, May 23, 1919, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TUESDAY, May 20, 1919.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

We bless Thee, our Father in heaven, for the beautiful spirit of harmony which prevailed in the opening day of the Sixty-sixth Congress, and we most earnestly pray that the spirit of brotherly love may follow in the wake of that day's opening. Men who think for themselves and act on their initiative in great problems, questions of state, will differ, but we pray that the spirit of Americanism may dominate them in their discussion, and that the love of home, the love of country, and all that is best in us may be guided by the angel of mercy.

And now, O God, our Father, help us to bend to Thy mighty will and believe that what Thou doest Thou doest for the good of mankind. Comfort us, therefore, in the loss of a Member of this House who was taken suddenly away; comfort his friends and family and bring them together again in thine own good time in one of the mansions Thou hast made for Thy children. In the name of Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE—WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that House joint resolution 17, proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States extending the right of suffrage to women, and House joint resolution 18, proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States extending the right of suffrage to women, be rereferred from the Committee on the Judiciary to the Committee on Woman Suffrage. I do this by request of the Committee on Woman Suffrage, which met this morning.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California asks unanimous consent for the change of reference of the joint resolutions referred to, 17 and 18, from the Committee on the Judiciary to the Committee on Woman Suffrage. Is there objection?

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask when the Committee on Woman Suffrage was elected? There are no minority members on that committee, and I object.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to make a privileged motion. By direction of the Committee on Woman Suffrage, I move that House joint resolutions 17 and 18 be taken from the Committee on the Judiciary and referred to the Committee on Woman Suffrage.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order on the motion of the gentleman from Illinois that the Committee on Woman Suffrage has not yet been selected by the House.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, the Committee on Woman Suffrage has not only been elected by the House, but it has met, with a majority of the members present, a majority of the entire 13 members acting. The fact that there are vacancies on that committee does not establish that the committee has not been elected. There are vacancies, and will be on many committees.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will hear the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, the committees of this House are composed of members selected by the majority and the minority.

Mr. MANN. Oh, the committees of the House are elected by the House.

Mr. WALSH. If the majority Members of the House select their members of various committees, and the minority Members of the House have not done so, not only are there vacancies on the various committees, but there is a failure to select the committee. This Committee on Woman Suffrage has not been completed by this House. The mere fact that the minority have not selected their representatives on the committee can not be said to leave a vacancy only on the committee. The committee organization has not been completed, and I submit that until the organization of the committees of the House have been completed this motion is not a preferential motion and can not be made.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Massachusetts yield?

Mr. WALSH. I do.

Mr. DYER. What would the gentleman say if the minority did not select its members for the Woman Suffrage Committee at all? Would the gentleman say that the Woman Suffrage Committee would be unable to proceed with business?

Mr. WALSH. I certainly should, until the organization of the committees of the House had been completed. That is the orderly way and the usual way. Why, of course if that was so, if the contention of the gentleman from Missouri and that of the gentleman from Illinois was correct, the minority Members who have been selected upon committees could hold meetings, report out resolutions and bills, have them considered here in the House without any representation from the other side whatever, and I think—though I do not know—that that is what is attempted to be done with the woman-suffrage resolution in this case.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is ready to rule. The Chair is of the opinion that when a majority of a committee has been elected by the House that committee is duly constituted, and whether it is usual or ordinary or expedient is a matter for the House to judge. The gentleman from Illinois moves, by direction of the committee, the change of reference from the Committee on the Judiciary to the Committee on Woman Suffrage.

The question was taken, and the Speaker announced the ayes seemed to have it.

Mr. BLACKMON. Mr. Speaker, I demand a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 211, noes 12.

So the motion was agreed to.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Mr. LEHLBACH. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from New Jersey rise?

Mr. LEHLBACH. I ask unanimous consent for the change of reference of a bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. LEHLBACH. Mr. Speaker, on yesterday the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. SIMS] introduced the bill H. R. 261, a bill to provide for the retirement of superannuated civil employees of the Government on annuity. This bill was referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. The subject matter is clearly within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Reform in the Civil Service. I am further informed that the introducer of the bill [Mr. SIMS] indorsed the bill himself for reference to the Committee on Reform in the Civil Service, and the chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce does not claim jurisdiction.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. SIMS. Mr. Speaker, that is correct. As the gentleman from New Jersey stated, I did so mark the bill for reference.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request?

Mr. MONTAGUE. Mr. Speaker, we could not hear the request.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman who introduced the bill if this is the same measure which was in the last Congress reported out by the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, and whether it provides for its administration under the Bureau of War Risk Insurance?

Mr. SIMS. It is exactly the bill, word for word, as reported by the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce during the last session of the Sixty-fifth Congress.

Mr. BARKLEY. I would like to ask why the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce does not have jurisdiction?

Mr. SIMS. I will state, Mr. Speaker, that the chief object and purpose of the bill is to provide for retirement pay for the civil employees of the Government, and the providing for the law to be administered by the Bureau of War Risk Insurance is merely an administrative matter and is not the subject matter or the chief object and purpose of the bill. The substance of the bill is to create a law retiring these civilian employees and providing for retirement pay for them, and therefore I did not think the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce was entitled to jurisdiction of the subject matter, and do not think so now.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I shall object for to-day. I want to look into the matter further.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky objects.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. Does the Chair understand the gentleman from Minnesota desires to correct the RECORD?

Mr. MADDEN. I thought I had been recognized.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask unanimous consent that the bill H. R. 274, a bill to provide returned soldiers with land, be taken from the Committee on Appropriations and be given to the Committee on Banking and Currency, to which it properly belongs. It is a mistake in reference.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota asks unanimous consent that the bill in reference to land for returned soldiers be taken from the Committee on Appropriations and referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency. Is there objection?

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, we can not hear a thing over here, and nobody knows what that bill is.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to inquire by what right the bill should go to the Committee on Banking and Currency?

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Speaker, I object.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may be permitted to address the House for one hour on next Monday, immediately after the reading of the Journal, on America in the war.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to address the House next Monday, immediately after the reading of the Journal, for one hour. Is there objection?

Mr. ASWELL. Will the gentleman state the subject?

The SPEAKER. America in the war. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

LEAVE TO FILE A MINORITY REPORT.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Florida [Mr. CLARK] and the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SAUNDERS], though not yet elected members of the Committee on Woman Suffrage, have leave to file minority views on House joint resolution No. 1, reported this morning from the Committee on Woman Suffrage.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the request of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN]. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, what happened to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. KNUTSON] about that bill?

The SPEAKER. That was objected to.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I want to serve notice on the House that I am going to object to everything if there is not enough order so that the ordinary Member can hear.

REFERENCE OF CERTAIN BILLS.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, during the last Congress, as the House will remember, there was a very important bill pending on the calendar providing for homes and work for returning soldiers, sailors, and marines. I introduced the bill I refer to, which was H. R. 15993. It is the Secretary Lane reclamation measure.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, we have not disposed of this other matter yet.

The SPEAKER. That was agreed to.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. I thought that matter was disposed of.

The bill was referred in the last Congress to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands, and as the chairman of that committee I reported the bill to the House. On yesterday there were some half dozen bills introduced in the House that are practically identical copies of that bill. All of those bills but one have been referred, I think erroneously, to the Public Lands Committee. One of those bills, introduced by Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina, was referred to the Committee on Irrigation. The bill of the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL] and of the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. FERRIS] and the gentleman from California [Mr. RAKER] and my own bill, which I reintroduced, and the other similar bills that were introduced were all referred to the Committee on the Public Lands, and I feel that they all ought to be rereferred to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands because this is not a public domain matter. It is a great governmental irrigation and reclamation matter. I ask, then, so far as my own bill is concerned, H. R. 457, that it be referred to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands, the committee that considered the same bill in the last Congress. I think all the other similar bills ought also to go to that committee. The Public Lands Committee has no right to this bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Colorado [Mr. TAYLOR] asks unanimous consent that the bill H. R. 457 be rereferred from the Committee on the Public Lands to the Committee on Irrigation. Is there objection?

Mr. SINNOTT. I object.

SWEARING IN OF MEMBERS.

The SPEAKER. If there are any Members present who were not sworn in yesterday, they will now present themselves and be sworn.

Mr. JONES of Texas, Mr. JACOWAY, Mr. BLACKMON, Mr. SUMNERS of Texas, Mr. NEWTON of Missouri, Mr. MCPHERSON, Mr. BABKA, and Mr. MOONEY presented themselves at the bar of the House and took the oath of office, administered by the Speaker.

PRIVILEGES OF FLOOR TO COMMISSIONERS FROM PHILIPPINES.

Mr. MASON. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas is recognized.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, there is no provision under the rules of the House——

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL] will proceed.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, there is no provision under the rules of the House extending the privileges of the floor to the Resident Commissioners from the Philippine Islands. I therefore ask unanimous consent that the privileges of the floor be extended during this Congress, or until the rules of the House provide formally for those privileges, to the said commissioners.

Mr. DYER. Will the gentleman from Kansas yield?

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Kansas yield to the gentleman from Missouri?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Yes.

Mr. DYER. Will not the gentleman also include the Commissioner from Porto Rico?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. The rules of the House provide for the privileges of the floor for the Resident Commissioner from Porto Rico.

Mr. CANNON. How many Resident Commissioners are there from the Philippine Islands for whom you desire the privileges of the floor?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Two.

Mr. CANNON. Has that been the rule heretofore?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. It has.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL] asks unanimous consent that the privileges of the floor be extended to the Commissioners from the Philippine Islands. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE TO NOTIFY PRESIDENT.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, the committee, consisting of Messrs. JAMES R. MANN, CHAMP CLARK, and F. W. MONDELL, appointed by the House to notify the President that a quorum of each House is assembled and that Congress is ready to receive any communication he may be pleased to make, begs leave to report that it has communicated with the President, that the President has expressed his thanks for the notification, and informed the committee that he will address the Congress in writing.

PETITION FOR WITHDRAWING TROOPS FROM RUSSIA.

Mr. MASON. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. MASON. To present a petition sent by 70,000 people to the President and the Congress asking that our troops be returned from Russia. I present it at the request of the mothers and wives of the soldiers in that country; and I ask unanimous consent that the Clerk forward these petitions to the President of the United States.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. MCARTHUR. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker——

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, the House has before it a message from the President of the United States. I suggest that the regular order of business be transacted.

Mr. MASON. I can not hear the gentleman.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House of Representatives by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

ANNUAL MESSAGE OF THE PRESIDENT.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read by the Clerk of the House:

GENTLEMEN OF THE CONGRESS: I deeply regret my inability to be present at the opening of the extraordinary session of the Congress. It still seems to be my duty to take part in the counsels of the peace conference and contribute what I can to the solution of the innumerable questions to whose settlement it has had to address itself: for they are questions which affect the peace of the whole world and from them, therefore, the United States cannot stand apart. I deemed it my duty to call the Congress together at this time because it was not wise to postpone longer the provisions which must be made for the support of the government. Many of the appropriations which are absolutely necessary for the maintenance of the government and the fulfillment of its varied obligations for the fiscal year 1919–1920 have not yet been made; the end of the present fiscal year is at hand; and action upon these appropriations can no longer be prudently delayed. It is necessary, therefore, that I should immediately call your attention to this critical need. It is hardly necessary for me to urge that it may receive your prompt attention.

I shall take the liberty of addressing you on my return on the subjects which have most engrossed our attention and the attention of the world during these last anxious months, since the armistice of last November was signed, the international settlements which must form the subject matter of the present treaties of peace and of our national action in the immediate future. It would be premature to discuss them or to express a judgment about them before they are brought to their complete formulation by the agreements which are now being sought at the table of the conference. I shall hope to lay them before you in their many aspects so soon as arrangements have been reached.

I hesitate to venture any opinion or press any recommendation with regard to domestic legislation while absent from the United States and out of daily touch with intimate sources of information and counsel. I am conscious that I need, after so long an absence from Washington, to seek the advice of those who have remained in constant contact with domestic problems and who have known them close at hand from day to day; and I trust that it will very soon be possible for me to do so. But there are several questions pressing for consideration to which I feel that I may, and indeed must, even now direct your attention, if only in general terms. In speaking of them I shall, I dare say, be doing little more than speak your own thoughts. I hope that I shall speak your own judgment also.

The question which stands at the front of all others in every country amidst the present great awakening is the question of labour; and perhaps I can speak of it with as great advantage while engrossed in the consideration of interests which affect all countries alike as I could at home and amidst the interests which naturally most affect my thought, because they are the interests of our own people.

By the question of labour I do not mean the question of efficient industrial production, the question of how labour is to be obtained and made effective in the great process of sustaining populations and winning success amidst commercial and industrial rivalries. I mean that much greater and more vital question, how are the men and women who do the daily labour of the world to obtain progressive improvement in the conditions of their labour, to be made happier, and to be served better by the communities and the industries which their labour sustains and advances? How are they to be given their right advantage as citizens and human beings?

We cannot go any further in our present direction. We have already gone too far. We cannot live our right life as a nation or achieve our proper success as an industrial community if capital and labour are to continue to be antagonistic instead of being partners. If they are to continue to distrust one another and contrive how they can get the better of one another. Or, what perhaps amounts to the same thing, calculate by what form and degree of coercion they can manage to extort on the one hand work enough to make enterprise profitable, on the other justice and fair treatment enough to make life tolerable. That bad road has turned out a blind alley. It is no thoroughfare to real prosperity. We must find another, leading in another direction and to a very different destination. It must lead not merely to accommodation but also to a genuine cooperation and partnership based upon a real community of interest and participation in control.

There is now in fact a real community of interest between capital and labour, but it has never been made evident in action. It can be made operative and manifest only in a new organization of industry. The genius of our business men and the sound practical sense of our workers can certainly work such a partnership out when once they realize exactly what it is that they seek and sincerely adopt a common purpose with regard to it.

Labour legislation lies, of course, chiefly with the states; but the new spirit and method of organization which must be effected are not to be brought about by legislation so much as by the common counsel and voluntary cooperation of capitalist, manager, and workman. Legislation can go only a very little way in commanding what shall be done. The organization of industry is a matter of corporate and individual initiative and of practical business arrangement. Those who really desire a new relationship between capital and labour can readily find a way to bring it about; and perhaps Federal legislation can help more than state legislation could.

The object of all reform in this essential matter must be the genuine democratization of industry, based upon a full recognition of the right of those who work, in whatever rank, to participate in some organic way in every decision which directly affects their welfare or the part they are to play in industry. Some positive legislation is practicable. The Congress has already shown the way to one reform which should be world-wide, by establishing the eight hour day as the standard day in every field of labour over which it can exercise control. It has sought to find the way to prevent child labour, and will, I hope and believe, presently find it. It has served the whole country by leading the way in developing the means of preserving and safeguarding life and health in dangerous industries. It can now help in the difficult task of giving a new form and spirit to industrial organization by coordinating the several agencies of conciliation and adjustment which have been brought into existence by the difficulties and mistaken policies of the present management of industry, and by setting up and developing new Federal agencies of advice and information which may serve as a clearing house for the best experiments and the best thought on this great matter, upon which every thinking man must be aware that the future development of society directly depends. Agencies of international council and suggestion are presently to be created in connection with the league of nations in this very field; but it is national action and the enlightened policy of individuals, corporations, and societies within each nation that must bring about the actual reforms. The members of the committees on labour in the two Houses will hardly need suggestions from me as to what means they shall seek to make the Federal Government the agent of the whole nation in pointing out and, if need be, guiding the process of reorganization and reform.

I am sure that it is not necessary for me to remind you that there is one immediate and very practical question of labour that we should meet in the most liberal spirit. We must see to it that our returning soldiers are assisted in every practicable way to find the places for which they are fitted in the daily work of the country. This can be done by developing and maintaining upon an adequate scale the admirable organization created by the Department of Labor for placing men seeking work; and it can also be done, in at least one very great field, by creating new opportunities for individual enterprise. The Secretary of the Interior has pointed out the way by which returning soldiers may be helped to find and take up land in the hitherto undeveloped regions of the country which the Federal Government has already prepared or can readily prepare for cultivation, and also on many of the cutover or neglected areas which lie within the limits of the older States; and I once more take the liberty of recommending very urgently that his plans shall receive the immediate and substantial support of the Congress.

Peculiar and very stimulating conditions await our commerce and industrial enterprise in the immediate future. Unusual opportunities will presently present themselves to our merchants and producers in foreign markets, and large fields for profitable investment will be opened to our free capital. But it is not only of that that I am thinking; it is not chiefly of that that I am thinking. Many great industries prostrated by the war wait to be rehabilitated, in many parts of the world where what will be lacking is not brains or willing hands or organizing capacity or experienced skill, but machinery and raw materials and capital. I believe that our business men, our merchants, our manufacturers, and our capitalists, will have the vision to see that prosperity in one part of the world ministers to prosperity everywhere: that there is in a very true sense a solidarity of interest throughout the world of enterprise, and that our dealings with the countries that have need of our products and our money will teach them to deem us more than ever friends whose necessities we seek in the right way to serve.

Our new merchant ships, which have in some quarters been feared as destructive rivals, may prove helpful rivals, rather, and common servants, very much needed and very welcome. Our great shipyards, new and old, will be so opened to the use of the world that they will prove immensely serviceable to every maritime people in restoring, much more rapidly than would otherwise have been possible, the tonnage wantonly destroyed in the war. I have only to suggest that there are many points at which we can facilitate American enterprise in foreign trade by opportune legislation and make it easy for American merchants to go where they will be welcomed as friends rather than as dreaded antagonists. America has a great and honorable service to perform in bringing the commercial and industrial undertakings of the world back to their old scope and swing again, and putting a solid structure of credit under them. All our legislation should be friendly to such plans and purposes.

And credit and enterprise alike will be quickened by timely and helpful legislation with regard to taxation. I hope that the Congress will find it possible to undertake an early reconsideration of Federal taxes, in order to make our system of taxation more simple and easy of administration and the taxes themselves as little burdensome as they can be made and yet suffice to support the Government and meet all its obligations. The figures to which those obligations have arisen are very great indeed, but they are not so great as to make it difficult for the nation to meet them, and meet them, perhaps, in a single generation, by taxes which will neither crush nor discourage. These are not so great as they seem, not so great as the immense sums we have had to borrow, added to the immense sums we have had to raise by taxation, would seem to indicate; for a very large proportion of those sums were raised in order that they might be loaned to the governments with which we were associated in the war, and those loans will, of course, constitute assets, not liabilities, and will not have to be taken care of by our taxpayers.

The main thing we shall have to care for is that our taxation shall rest as lightly as possible on the productive resources of the country, that its rates shall be stable, and that it shall be constant in its revenue-yielding power. We have found the main sources from which it must be drawn. I take it for granted that its mainstays will henceforth be the income tax, the excess-profits tax, and the estate tax. All these can be adjusted to yield constant and adequate returns and yet not constitute a too grievous burden on the taxpayer. A revision of the income tax has already been provided for by the act of 1918, but I think you will find that further changes can be made to advantage both in the rates of the tax and in the method of its collection. The excess-profits tax need not long be maintained at the rates which were necessary while the enormous expenses of the war had to be borne; but it should be made the basis of a permanent system which will reach undue profits without discouraging the enterprise and activity of our business men. The tax on inheritances ought, no doubt, to be reconsidered in its relation to the fiscal systems of the several States, but it certainly ought to remain a permanent part of the fiscal system of the Federal Government also.

Many of the minor taxes provided for in the revenue legislation of 1917 and 1918, though no doubt made necessary by the pressing necessities of the war time, can hardly find sufficient justification under the easier circumstances of peace, and can now happily be got rid of. Among these, I hope you will agree, are the excises upon various manufacturers and the taxes upon retail sales. They are unequal in the incidence on different industries and on different individuals. Their collection is difficult and expensive. Those which are levied upon articles sold at retail are largely evaded by the readjustment of retail prices. On the other hand, I should assume that it is expedient to maintain a considerable range of indirect taxes; and the fact that alcoholic liquors will presently no longer afford a source of revenue by taxation makes it the more necessary that the field should be carefully restudied in order that equivalent sources of revenue may be found which it will be legitimate, and not burdensome, to draw upon. But you have at hand in the Treasury Department many experts who can advise you upon the matters much better than I can. I can only suggest the lines of a permanent and workable system, and the placing of the taxes where they will least hamper the life of the people.

There is, fortunately, no occasion for undertaking in the immediate future any general revision of our system of import duties. No serious danger of foreign competition now threatens American industries. Our country has emerged from the war less disturbed and less weakened than any of the European countries which are our competitors in manufacture. Their industrial establishments have been subjected to greater strain than ours, their labour force to a more serious disorganization, and this is clearly not the time to seek an organized advantage. The work of mere reconstruction will, I am afraid, tax the capacity and the resources of their people for years to come. So far from there being any danger or need of accentuated foreign competition, it is likely that the conditions of the next few years will greatly facilitate the marketing of American manufactures abroad. Least of all should we depart from the policy adopted in the Tariff Act of 1913, of permitting the free entry into the United States of the raw materials needed to supplement and enrich our own abundant supplies.

Nevertheless, there are parts of our tariff system which need prompt attention. The experiences of the war have made it plain that in some cases too great reliance on foreign supply is dangerous, and that in determining certain parts of our tariff policy domestic considerations must be borne in mind which are political as well as economic. Among the industries to which special consideration should be given is that of the manufacture of dyestuffs and related chemicals. Our complete dependence upon German supplies before the war made the interruption of trade a cause of exceptional economic disturbance. The close relation between the manufacturer of dyestuffs, on the one hand, and of explosives and poisonous gases, on the other, moreover, has given the industry an exceptional significance and value. Although the United States will gladly and unhesitatingly join in the programme of international disarmament, it will, nevertheless, be a policy of obvious prudence to make certain of the successful maintenance of many strong and well equipped chemical plants. The German chemical industry, with which we will be brought into competition, was and may well be again, a thoroughly knit monopoly capable of exercising a competition of a peculiarly insidious and dangerous kind.

The United States should, moreover, have the means of properly protecting itself whenever our trade is discriminated against by foreign nations, in order that we may be assured of that equality of treatment which we hope to accord and to promote the world over. Our tariff laws as they now stand provide no weapon of retaliation in case other governments should enact legislation unequal in its bearing on our products as compared with the products of other countries. Though we are as far as possible from desiring to enter upon any course of retaliation, we must frankly face the fact that hostile legislation by other nations is not beyond the range of possibility, and that it may have to be met by counter legislation. This subject has, fortunately, been exhaustively investigated by the United States Tariff Commission. A recent report of that commission has shown very clearly that we lack and that we ought to have the instruments necessary for the assurance of equal and equitable treatment. The attention of the Congress has been called to this matter on past occasions, and the past measures which are now recommended by the Tariff Commission are substantially the same that have been suggested by previous administrations. I recommend that this phase of the tariff question receive the early attention of the Congress.

Will you not permit me, turning from these matters, to speak once more and very earnestly of the proposed amendment to the Constitution which would extend the suffrage to women and which passed the House of Representatives at the last session of the Congress? It seems to me that every consideration of justice and of public advantage calls for the immediate adoption of that amendmdent and its submission forthwith to the legislatures of the several states. Throughout all the world this long delayed extension of the suffrage is looked for; in the United States, longer, I believe, than anywhere else, the necessity for it, and the immense advantage of it to the national life, has been urged and debated, by women and men who saw the need for it and urged the policy of it when it required steadfast courage to be so much beforehand with the common conviction; and I, for one, covet for our country the distinction of being among the first to act in a great reform.

The telegraph and telephone lines will of course be returned to their owners so soon as the retransfer can be effected without administrative confusion, so soon, that is, as the change can be made with least possible inconvenience to the public and to the owners themselves. The railroads will be handed over to their owners at the end of the calendar year; if I were in immediate contact with the administrative questions which must govern the retransfer of the telegraph and telephone lines, I could name the exact date for their return also. Until I am in direct contact with the practical questions involved I can only suggest that in the case of the telegraphs and telephones, as in the case of the railways, it is clearly desirable in the public interest that some legislation should be considered which may tend to make of these indispensable instrumentalities of our modern life a uniform and coordinated system which will afford those who use them as complete and certain means of communication with all parts of the country as has so long been afforded by the postal system of the Government, and at rates as uniform and intelligible. Expert advice is, of course, available in this very practical matter, and the public interest is manifest. Neither the telegraph nor the telephone service of the country can be said to be in any sense a national system. There are many confusions and inconsistencies of rates. The scientific means by which communication by such instrumentalities could be rendered more thorough and satisfactory has not been made full use of. An exhaustive study of the whole question of electrical communication and of the means by which the central authority of the nation can be used to unify and improve it, if undertaken, by the appropriate committees of the Congress, would certainly result, indirectly even if not directly, in a great public benefit.

The demobilization of the military forces of the country has progressed to such a point that it seems to me entirely safe now to remove the ban upon the manufacture and sale of wines and beers, but I am advised that without further legislation I have not the legal authority to remove the present restrictions. I therefore recommend that the Act approved November 21, 1918, entitled, "An Act to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to carry out, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919, the purposes of the Act entitled 'An Act to provide further for the national security and defense by stimulating agriculture and facilitating the distribution of agricultural products,' and for other purposes," be amended or repealed in so far as it applies to wines and beers.

I sincerely trust that I shall very soon be at my post in Washington again to report upon the matters which made my presence at the peace table apparently imperative, and to put myself at the service of the Congress in every matter of administration or counsel that may seem to demand executive action or advice.

WOODROW WILSON.

20 May, 1919.

[Applause.]

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the President's message be referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union and ordered printed.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wyoming moves that the President's message be referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union and ordered printed. The question is on agreeing to that motion.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I should like to suggest to the gentleman from Wyoming that this message of the President ought to be referred to the various committees dealing with the subjects treated by the President.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, the more recent usage of the House is to report the President's message—a message of this sort—to the Committee of the Whole, and I am following the recent precedents in that regard.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the gentleman from Wyoming.

The motion was agreed to.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, for the information of the Members of the House, I desire to state that among other matters that will be taken up for consideration to-morrow will be the woman-suffrage resolution. [Applause.]

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, Mr. ALMON (at the request of Mr. OLIVER, of Alabama) was granted leave of absence on account of sickness.

DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SAUNDERS] desires to make an announcement.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for one minute.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia asks unanimous consent to proceed for one minute. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. I wish to state, without objection from the House, that immediately upon the adjournment of the House there will be a Democratic caucus held in this Hall to consider certain matters.

DEATH OF REPRESENTATIVE VAN DYKE, OF MINNESOTA.

Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, it is my sad duty to inform the House of the very recent and very unexpected death of Hon. CARL C. VAN DYKE, of St. Paul, Minn.

In the near future I shall offer a resolution asking that a day be set apart in order that eulogies may be delivered upon his life and memory. At this time, however, I desire to offer the following resolution and ask its immediate adoption.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. CARL C. VAN DYKE, a Representative from the State of Minnesota.

Resolved, That a committee of 18 Members of the House, with such Members of the Senate as may be joined, be appointed to attend such funeral.

Resolved, That the Sergeant at Arms of the House be authorized and directed to take such steps as may be necessary for carrying out the provisions of these resolutions, and that the necessary expenses in connection therewith be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, just one moment. I am informed that a very dear comrade of CARL C. VAN DYKE, Mr. GRIFFIN, of New York, who was associated with him in the Spanish-American War, desires to have his name placed on the list.

The SPEAKER. It is upon the list. The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

The resolution was unanimously agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Chair appoints the following committee: Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota, Mr. ANDERSON, Mr. ELLSWORTH, Mr. SCHALL, Mr. KNUTSON, Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota, Mr. CARSS, Mr. MAHER, Mr. ASWELL, Mr. RAGSDALE, Mr. ROMJUE, Mr. REAVIS, Mr. GANDY, Mr. MCCLINTIC, Mr. MUDD, Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota, Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota, and Mr. GRIFFIN.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota. I offer this additional resolution.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect, this House do now adjourn.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was unanimously agreed to; accordingly (at 1 o'clock and 3 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until to-morrow, Wednesday, May 21, 1919, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting copy of a communication from the Secretary of Agriculture giving reasons for not including an appropriation for general expenses of the Forest Service for 1919 in the deficiency bill now in course of preparation (H. Doc. No. 21); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

2. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting copy of a communication from the Secretary of Commerce, submitting supplemental estimate of appropriation required by the Bureau of Fisheries for miscellaneous expenses of the bureau and improvements at stations for the fiscal year 1920 (H. Doc. No. 22); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

3. A letter from the Secretary of Commerce, transmitting certain data regarding estimates of appropriations required by the Bureau of Fisheries, Department of Commerce, for the fiscal year 1920 (H. Doc. No. 23); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

4. A letter from the president of the Civil Service Commission requesting that the unexpended balance of certain appropriations for the fiscal year 1919 be made available during the fiscal year 1920 for the same purposes and with the same conditions (H. Doc. No. 24); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

5. A letter from the Secretary of Commerce inviting attention to certain items in the estimates of appropriations for the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce for the fiscal year 1920 (H. Doc. No. 25); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

6. A letter from the president of the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia inviting attention to certain items of deficiency submitted in House Document No. 1788, Sixty-fifth Congress, third session (H. Doc. No. 26); to the Committee on the District of Columbia and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII,

Mr. MANN, from the Committee on Woman Suffrage, to which was referred the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 1) proposing an amendment to the Constitution extending the right of suffrage to women, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1), which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. FERRIS: A bill (H. R. 1037) for the relief of the Wichita and affiliated bands of Indians; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 1073) authorizing the Secretary of War to donate to the city of Eagle Grove, Iowa, one German cannon or fieldpiece, to be placed in the city park; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 1074) authorizing the Secretary of War to donate to the city of Laporte City, Black Hawk County, Iowa, one German cannon or fieldpiece; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. FISHER: A bill (H. R. 1075) authorizing the Secretary of War to deliver to the city of Memphis, Tenn., captured cannon or fieldpieces and suitable outfit of cannon balls; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 1076) authorizing the Secretary of War to deliver to the town of Somerville, Tenn., captured cannon or fieldpieces and suitable outfit of cannon balls; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 1077) authorizing the Secretary of War to deliver to the town of Bolivar, Tenn., captured cannon or fieldpieces and a suitable outfit of cannon balls; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 1078) authorizing the Secretary of War to deliver to the town of Covington, Tenn., captured cannon or fieldpieces and a suitable outfit of cannon balls; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. WATSON of Pennsylvania: A bill (H. R. 1079) authorizing the Secretary of War to donate to the borough of Langhorne, Pa., one German cannon or fieldpiece; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 1080) authorizing the Secretary of War to donate to the borough of Bridgeport, Pa., one German cannon or fieldpiece; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 1081) authorizing the Secretary of War to donate to the borough of Cheltenham, Pa., one German cannon or fieldpiece; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 1082) authorizing the Secretary of War to donate to the borough of Norristown, Pa., one German cannon or fieldpiece; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 1083) authorizing the Secretary of War to donate to the borough of Conshohocken, Pa., one German cannon or fieldpiece; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 1084) authorizing the Secretary of War to donate to the borough of Doylestown, Pa., one German cannon or fieldpiece; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 1085) authorizing the Secretary of War to donate to the borough of Lansdale, Pa., one German cannon or fieldpiece; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. PARK: A bill (H. R. 1086) to donate one captured machine gun or cannon to Worth County, Ga.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 1087) to donate one captured cannon or fieldpiece to Dougherty County, Ga.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 1088) to donate one captured cannon or fieldpiece to Mitchell County, Ga.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 1089) to donate one captured cannon or fieldpiece to Calhoun County, Ga.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 1090) to donate one captured machine gun or cannon to Colquitt County, Ga.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 1091) to donate one captured machine gun or cannon to Early County, Ga.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 1092) to donate one captured cannon or fieldpiece to Baker County, Ga.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 1093) to donate one captured machine gun or cannon to Miller County, Ga.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WEDNESDAY, May 21, 1919.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Let Thy blessing descend, our Father in heaven, upon these Representatives of a great people, in the committee rooms and upon the floor of this House, as the gentle dew from the heavens falls upon the vegetation, with its quickening and fructifying influence, that it may give seed to the sower and bread to the eater; that they may think clearly, act wisely, do justly in this hour of reconstruction; that our people and all peoples may be restored to new life and activities. In the Spirit of the Master. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

SWEARING IN OF MEMBERS.

The SPEAKER. If there are any Members present who have not been sworn in, they will now present themselves to be sworn.

Mr. ALMON, of Alabama, and Mr. MCFADDEN, of Pennsylvania, presented themselves at the bar of the House and took the oath of office administered by the Speaker.

VICTOR BERGER.

The SPEAKER. In compliance with House resolution No. 6, the Chair appoints the following special committee.

The Clerk read as follows:

DALLINGER, of Massachusetts, chairman; ROSE, of Pennsylvania; RODENBERG, of Illinois; COLE, of Ohio; RANDALL, of Wisconsin; LUHRING, of Indiana; EAGLE, of Texas; ROBINSON, of North Carolina; WELTY, of Ohio.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Waldorf, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate had passed the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with deep sensibility the announcement of the death of Hon. ALBERT ESTOPINAL, late a Representative from the State of Louisiana.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives.

Also:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with profound sorrow the announcement of the death of Hon. CARL VAN DYKE, late a Representative from the State of Minnesota.

Resolved, That a committee of Senators be appointed by the Vice President to join such committee as may be appointed on the part of the House of Representatives to attend the funeral of the deceased.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate a copy of these resolutions to the House of Representatives.

And that in compliance with the foregoing resolutions, the Vice President had appointed as said committee Mr. NELSON, Mr. KELLOGG, Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota, Mr. PHELAN, Mr. WALSH of Montana, and Mr. LENROOT.

Also:

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect to the memory of Hon. ALBERT ESTOPINAL, late a Representative from the State of Louisiana, and Hon. CARL C. VAN DYKE, late a Representative from the State of Minnesota, the Senate do now adjourn.

The message also announced that the Vice President had appointed Mr. JONES of Washington and Mr. KIRBY members of the joint select committee on the part of the Senate as provided for in the act of February 16, 1889, as amended by the act of March 2, 1895, entitled "An act to authorize and provide for the disposition of useless papers in the executive departments," for the disposition of useless papers in the Department of Labor.

COMMITTEE IN CONTROL OF HOUSE OFFICE BUILDING.

The SPEAKER. The Chair announces the appointment of the following members of the committee in control of the House Office Building.

The Clerk read as follows:

GILLETT, of Massachusetts, chairman ex officio; BACHARACH, of New Jersey; CLARK, of Missouri.

COMMITTEE ON WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker I send to the desk the following nominations of the minority members for the Woman Suffrage Committee.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. KITCHIN moves the election as additional members of the Woman Suffrage Committee the following names: JOHN E. RAKER, of California; FRANK CLARK, of Florida; JAMES H. MAYS, of Utah; CHRISTOPHER D. SULLIVAN, of New York; THOMAS L. BLANTON, of Texas.

The motion was agreed to.

PRINTING AND BINDING.

Mr. KIESS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution which I send to the Clerk to be read.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the resolution which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolution authorizing the printing and binding for the committees, the floor leader, and conference minority chairman of the House of Representatives during the Sixty-sixth Congress.

Resolved, That the standing committees of the House of Representatives, the floor leader, and chairman of the conference minority are hereby authorized to have such printing and binding done as may be actually necessary for the transaction of their official business during the Sixty-sixth Congress.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the resolution?

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, does this include all the standing committees of the House?

Mr. KIESS. Yes.

Mr. GARNER. Heretofore each committee has asked for it as necessity arose.

Mr. KIESS. Not in the Sixty-fifth Congress; it was done by joint resolution.

Mr. BUTLER. May I ask the gentleman if it will not be necessary for the different committees after the passage of this resolution to ask for authority for printing and binding?

Mr. KIESS. It will not be necessary under this resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the resolution?

There was no objection.

The resolution was agreed to.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

The SPEAKER. This is Calendar Wednesday, and the Clerk will call the committees in their order.

The Clerk called the committees, and when the Committee on Woman Suffrage was reached,

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Woman Suffrage, I call up House joint resolution No. 1, proposing an amendment to the Constitution extending the right of suffrage to women, and ask that the resolution be reported.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 1) proposing an amendment to the Constitution extending the right of suffrage to women.

Resolved, etc., That the following article is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the Constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States:

"ARTICLE —.

"The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of sex.

"Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation."

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, the rules provide that on Calendar Wednesday general debate shall be confined to two hours. I am not entirely sure whether that rule applies to debate on a House Calendar bill, although I think it has been so construed in the past. It had been my intention to ask the House to proceed with the debate to-day and for a time to-morrow before asking for a final vote on the resolution; but there is a committee appointed to attend the funeral of our late colleague, Mr. VAN DYKE, and the Nebraska delegation has an appointment to meet the Nebraska soldiers returning to New York to-morrow morning. I desire to have the House complete consideration of the resolution to-day, and I would like, especially in order to accommodate the proponents and opponents of the resolution, to give a longer time for debate than two hours. I ask unanimous consent that the rule, so far as it limits debate, may be abrogated for the consideration of this resolution, and that at 5 o'clock the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the resolution and any pending amendments, and that the time between now and then shall be equally divided, one half to be controlled by the gentleman from Florida [Mr. CLARK] and the other half by myself.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that general debate be extended until 5 o'clock; that then the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the resolution and all pending amendments; and that the time be controlled one half by the gentleman from Florida [Mr. CLARK] and the other half by himself. Is there objection?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Reserving the right to object, I do not expect to debate this question or ask for time, but I would like to ask the gentleman from Illinois, in view of the fact that the bill as reported proposes a constitutional amendment, whether hearings have been had on the bill, since there are two sides to this question?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, hearings have been had on this resolution for more than 50 years. [Applause.] Hearings have been had on similar resolutions in the House of Representatives for a number of Congresses. There has been no hearing had on House joint resolution No. 1 in this Congress, nor is there anything new to be said in a hearing.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask the gentleman this question: In view of the fact that women opposed to woman suffrage have indicated, yesterday and to-day, that they are surprised by this action—and I give full credit to the gentleman from Illinois for his parliamentary cleverness in bringing it up at this time—whether he thinks it would be fair to let this matter stand over for a few days until those opposed to the resolution may be heard upon it?

Mr. MANN. I do not think it would be fair to the rest of us.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I am willing that the gentleman shall have the credit for the passage of the resolution, if it goes through, but I think it fair to have what has been said go into the RECORD.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I want to ask the gentleman from Illinois a question about the parliamentary status. If unanimous consent is agreed to and the previous question shall be considered ordered, will that give an opportunity of reading the resolution under the five-minute rule?

Mr. MANN. There is no opportunity for reading a House Calendar resolution or bill under the five-minute rule.

Mr. GARNER. Would there be any opportunity to offer an amendment unless the one offering the amendment should get recognition for that purpose?

Mr. MANN. There would not be, unless the Member offering the amendment should get recognition for that purpose.

Mr. GARNER. I wanted Members of the House to understand the situation.

Mr. MANN. That is the rule with reference to a House Calendar proposition.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I desire to ask the gentleman a question. The gentleman's proposal as to time gives one-half to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] and one-half to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. CLARK], who is opposed to the resolution. The gentleman from Florida is the one member on the committee who is opposed to the resolution. All of the members upon the majority side of the committee are in favor of it, and all of the rest of the minority members are in favor of it, as disclosed by the vote yesterday. Of course, the Democrats upon this side of the House desire to be heard, so that they may speak on the resolution. I take it the gentleman from Illinois will yield me time so that time can be divided among the Members on the Democratic side of the House who desire to speak for the resolution?

Mr. MANN. I shall not make any agreement with the gentleman upon the floor about it, and I told him so yesterday. The gentleman can take time to delay the consideration of the measure if he desires, but I am in a position where I can not be held up, because if the extension of time is not agreed to, there will be but two hours of general debate. I have always dealt fairly with every Member of the House about debate.

Mr. RAKER. That is not the question. Just one moment further. It ought not to appear that Members on this side are opposed to the resolution, for that is not the fact; they favor it; and I know the gentleman from Illinois does not want it to appear that a large majority here are not in favor of the resolution; but by fixing the time and giving one Member who happens to oppose it on the Democratic side half of the time for debate in opposition, the impression might be conveyed that we are opposed to the resolution.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, after all, the RECORD will show who votes for it and who votes against the resolution, and it will not be determined by those who talk as to who is for or against it.

Mr. RAKER. I think that is right, but, nevertheless, this side of the Chamber must be heard.

Mr. MANN. There will be a very small amount of talk as compared with the real vote upon it.

Mr. RUBEY. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, the gentleman from California [Mr. RAKER] has about stated my position. I have voted for this same measure before and expect to vote for it again.

Mr. MANN. I hope so.

Mr. RUBEY. I would like to speak for it to-day. I would like to have the gentleman's assurance that we on this side of the House will be given opportunity to say a few words in behalf of the resolution.

Mr. MANN. I can not promise the gentleman any time. I shall be just as fair with those in favor of the resolution on the Democratic side of the House as with those on the Republican side of the House, but in dividing the time I shall first give preference to members upon the committee, if they desire the time, and then I shall do the best I can, intending to take little or no time myself.

Mr. RUBEY. Mr. Speaker, if I may be permitted, I would ask a question of the gentleman from Florida [Mr. CLARK], if the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] will yield for that purpose.

Mr. MANN. Certainly; but I think the gentleman from Florida understands that he gets the time in opposition to the resolution.

Mr. RUBEY. What I want to ask is whether he would yield to this side of the House any of his time to those who desire to speak in behalf of the resolution?

Mr. MANN. I expect to yield to members on the Democratic side of the House to speak on behalf of the resolution.

Mr. RUBEY. That is satisfactory to me.

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, the gentleman from Illinois has at all times in the past been fair, and he knows the rules better than anyone else. Why did not the gentleman make the request, allowing the ranking Democratic Member on our side to control the time, which is the usual custom?

Mr. MANN. Oh, no; the gentleman is mistaken.

Mr. FERRIS. I do not think I am.

Mr. MANN. Where a majority of the committee on both sides of the proposition are in favor of a resolution or a bill, and there is opposition, the one in opposition is entitled to take the time. Under this rule of the House, on Calendar Wednesday, one hour would be allotted to those in favor of the resolution and one hour to those opposed to the resolution. I have asked to extend the time, so that a longer time than one hour will be given on each side.

Mr. FERRIS. But if the gentleman will indulge me a moment further, although the gentleman has been here more years than I have, yet I have been here for 12 years, and my recollection is that the rule has been to divide the time equally between the chairman of the committee and the ranking member, with an agreement that the time be yielded equally on the two respective sides as between those opposed to and those in favor of the proposition.

Mr. MANN. That is a very common practice, and a perfectly proper one where all parties agree to it.

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Speaker, under the circumstances, the minority members of the Committee on Woman Suffrage not having had a chance to be appointed and to participate in the matter, I object.

Mr. MANN. Well, I will say to the gentleman that the Democratic members of the committee participated. They were at the meeting and made the agreement which I have asked to have carried out.

Mr. FERRIS. But the announcement was made——

Mr. MANN. Very well; there is to be only two hours' debate on the bill then.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Oklahoma object?

Mr. FERRIS. I do object.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MANN. I take it that I am now recognized for an hour, allowed under the rules in favor of the bill?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is recognized for one hour.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman from Florida [Mr. CLARK], a member of the committee, is opposed to the resolution. I take it the gentleman from Florida will be entitled to recognition at the proper time to control the hour in opposition?

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman from Florida a member of the committee?

Mr. MANN. Yes.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker, before the Chair decides on that. Now, I trust the chairman of the committee will not make that statement to the Chair. Just one moment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois has the floor.

SEVERAL MEMBERS. Regular order!

Mr. MANN. This is a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. RAKER. Now, the gentleman from Illinois has his hour. He states that the gentleman from Florida would get his hour. The gentleman from Florida has not been recognized yet.

Mr. MANN. I submitted a parliamentary inquiry, making a statement, and asking whether the gentleman from Florida would be recognized for an hour.

Mr. RAKER. Of course, I can not say yet as to that.

Mr. MANN. I am not asking the gentleman. [Laughter.] It is out of the gentleman's power to recognize him.

Mr. RAKER. May I state this: Now, in fairness to the gentlemen on the other side and this side, when this resolution was up last year the gentleman from Florida made a minority report. The ranking member on the other side, Miss Rankin, was given half the time——

Mr. MANN. I have nothing to do with what was up last year. I am proceeding under the rules of the House.

Mr. RAKER. Well, I know——

Mr. MANN. The gentleman is asking about a special rule of the House. I am not asking any special rule of the House. I am proceeding under the ordinary rules of the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is recognized for an hour.

Mr. MANN. I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. LITTLE], the ranking Republican member of the Committee on Woman Suffrage. [Applause.]

Mr. LITTLE. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] suggests that the ladies who are not in favor of woman suffrage are taken unawares. To register surprise at the appearance of propositions of a certain welcome, friendly, complimentary, and anticipated tenor is one of the most highly valued privileges of that charming sex, which no gentleman, even in the heat of debate, would ask them to surrender for any political right, however important. The ladies are certainly no more surprised than I am, because it is scarce 30 minutes since notification from the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], chairman of the Woman Suffrage Committee and author of the resolution at issue, whose rare parliamentary sagacity and unrivaled parliamentary leadership made this day's work possible, that I was to open this debate. This is a good time to bring it up.

Five years ago Julius Cæsar, after 19 centuries, challenged Jesus Christ to a final contest. The Kaiser threw down the gantlet and the friends of Christian civilization took it up. The tide of war turned in favor of the Son of Bethlehem and against the Prussian; and, if anything has been decided, it has been decided that now right, not might, shall rule the world. [Applause.] Unless our sons and our billions have been sacrificed in vain, the world is about ready to substitute the rule of reason for the rule of force in the government of reasoning creatures. What better expression of that could there be than to say now that the mothers who risked their lives to bring into the world the four millions of soldiers we mustered shall have some word to say about the destinies of their sons? [Applause.] The British House of Commons voted, I think, 7 to 1, and recently, I believe, the French Chamber of Deputies voted 7 to 1, for woman suffrage. The time is opportune for marking an era's close. Civilization has reached a stage, a period, a moment, when we can ring the liberty bell again and announce that this great step forward has been taken.

They tell us that woman should not vote merely because she is a female. No other reason has been advanced except that form which says that she can not bear arms. Every mother who bears a son to fight for the Republic takes the same chance of death that the son takes when he goes to arms. The fact that she is a woman is a reason for, not against, the utilization of every force for the advancement of society. Ninety-nine per cent of the murderers in the world are men. Ninety-nine per cent of the burglars are men. Ninety-nine per cent of the gamblers are men. Ninety-nine per cent of the counterfeiters are men. Ninety-nine per cent of all the thieves, outlaws, forgers, pickpockets, bank robbers, train robbers, pirates, and drunkards in the world are men. Ninety-nine per cent of all criminals are men.

Ninety-nine per cent of all diseases inherited by reason of evil lives of parents come down from the male side. For every courtesan there is a seducer and panderer and a thousand customers. When one considers the character of the two sexes, he better appreciates the power of the instinct of race preservation which nature has planted in the human kind, which certainly is all that has induced women to remain on the same continent with man for 60 centuries. If the world were open and the best character of votes were the dominating factor, women would control the ballot entirely. If good character were the basis for the franchise, most of the voters would probably have been women long ago.

In the last analysis those who oppose woman suffrage simply ignore everything except brute force. They discard brains, scholarship, character, and simply seek to enforce the law of the herd, that the biggest bull is the boss. Under their theories Napoleon Bonaparte was a greater man than Abraham Lincoln; John L. Sullivan a more useful citizen than Thomas Edison. I challenge all such claims as unworthy of the citizens of a Christian and cultured land. Carried to their logical conclusion those theories have dominated and guided and wrecked and ruined the great Empire of Germany perhaps for centuries to come, and at the very moment when they had attained the rounded summit of a successful, brutal, despotic development of brute force. If during the last 40 years the women had held absolute control of Germany, that mighty State would now be rich, happy, contented, and yet there are still those who will tell you woman should not vote because she can not fight.

They told us last year the determination of this issue should be relegated to the States. One of the fundamental privileges under the Constitution is to amend it. If three-fourths of the States wish it, there is no authority under the Constitution that endows any State with the privilege of denying it. They suggested they wanted a referendum vote. The Constitution prescribes, orders, another method. When the women come here and ask for the ballot, they simply invoke the methods by which the Constitution has always been amended. Any other system would be illegal. If you say to them that you are not willing to abide by those rules under which every amendment has been made, you simply plead the baby act; and when the mother of a soldier comes here to demand the privilege of the ballot you should not do that.

Men have argued here for 50 years that woman suffrage would break up the home. But in the Western States, where we have had woman suffrage in one form and another for years, we know of no family that has ever been disrupted by quarrel over politics. We know of no fireside that has burned more dimly because of any difference of opinion about the use of the ballot. To permit the mothers of this country to express their views on important issues will not injure the homes. As I reflect now I realize that every time I followed my mother's advice I did well. Generally when I did not listen to her I lived to regret it. She was a thoughtful and prudent woman. The long and short of the whole matter is that for centuries you have treated woman as a slave, dragged her over the pages of history by the hair, and then you pretend to think she is an angel, too good to interfere in the affairs of men. Give her now a fixed, reasonable status, as becomes a rational human being like yourself.

I wish there were a home for every woman. But our civilization has developed in another direction. During this great war it has been determined that women are to take part in every vocation of human life. There is no place they have not filled with ability. The increase in population, the complex demands of a complicated civilization, have made it absolutely essential that many women shall come away from the fireside and go to work for a living and fight and struggle with men.

In the streets of Strasburg I have myself seen women assisted by dogs hitched in harness pulling carts and selling milk at the homes along the streets. My friends and I traveling the path through an Egyptian wheat field were suddenly accosted by a woman, who rose with her sickle from among the wheat to cry in Arabic, "In your great country, sir, women do not thus toil in the field." But now, in my great country, women throng the shops, the offices, the factories, in their strife with men to earn a living. In uncivilized nations they still treat her as a slave and as an angel. Your great civilization gives woman the glorious privilege that man has to battle for a livelihood if she will do so for smaller wages, but denies her the use of the ballot in her struggle. What are you afraid of? The Burmese women handle all the business of that country. Is this, then, a Burmese peril which menaces you?

The gentleman who leads the opposition to-day said once that she could not have the rights of a man and the privileges of a woman. Why can she not? That can not be true. If we are going to be the gentlemen we assume to be, why should she not have the rights of a man and the privileges of a woman? Men retained all the male privileges of drinking whisky, playing poker, and racing horses when they cast the ballot. Why can not she still retain the privilege of being treated like a lady, a wife, a mother, even if she votes? God Almighty placed upon her certain duties from which you escape, and you are wonderfully fortunate that you do, and every time you think of it you should blush for shame that you would deny any rights you have because of the responsibility that God has placed upon her.

It has been a source of profound regret to me this morning that I did not have some notice that would enable me to present this subject more thoroughly. The women of the Republic come here and say to you that they want the ballot. Gentlemen, God Almighty has made you strong; they have made your Republic great and made you statesmen of the great Republic. They have given you infinite powers, mighty responsibilities. Now, the mother who bore you, the wife who brought your son into the world, and those who have gone before reach out and ask that you apply to them the rules of common sense, and no more, no less.

If you should throw 200 people upon an island, why should any particular member or set of members there for any reason have the power to say what should be done? Why should not a sensible, God-fearing, intelligent woman have just as good a right to have her say about what goes on in any nation as any man that walks the earth?

As I have said to you, she takes the same risk that every soldier did. Which of you is there who has taken the same chance on any battle field that a mother has taken every time a child comes into the world? Who are you that you should say to the mothers of America that they can not vote as you do?

The world must progress according to the methods of Julius Cæsar or the theories of Jesus Christ. During the last five years that ancient contest came to a head and the cross of Christ must henceforth and forever be made the standard of civilization instead of the crown of Julius Cæsar. For the second time in this House I appeal from the rule of force to the rule of reason. The conquering armies camped on the Rhine have fought to establish the fact that civilization is better civilized than barbarism. If common sense is more potent than the sword, if men have determined on the field of battle that that is their sober intention and their law, woman should now be accorded the same opportunity to take part in life that men have always had.

When I am laid away on the hillside, Bert Berry, my orderly in the Philippines, will bring the bugle he blew for me at Marilao, Guiguinto, and San Fernando and sound taps above my last earthly resting place, and I trust I shall hear no more of wars for all eternity. I hope, as my dear wife holds my hand for the last time as I pass out into the starlight, and as my dear mother extends her sainted hand to me as the trumpets sound the reveille on the other side, both will know that the sons for whom they went down into the valley of the shadow have granted to the mothers of this most august and stateliest Republic of all time the same power, authority, and opportunity to fashion and preserve the lives of their sons that is possessed by their fathers. [Applause.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CLARK of Florida. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is recognized for one hour.

Mr. CLARK of Florida. I yield seven minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN].

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, I shall vote against this resolution. I do not rise, however, to make an argument against it, but rather for the purpose of an explanation and expression of some congratulations. It appeared in the RECORD yesterday, though not intentionally, that the Democratic organization of the House had been a little amiss in nominating the membership of the Woman Suffrage Committee. I want to say that that is simply apparent. This morning was the first opportunity which the Democrats had to present the names of the Democratic membership of the Woman Suffrage Committee, though the identical Members that were this morning elected as minority members of that committee were notified and invited by Mr. MANN, the chairman of the Woman Suffrage Committee, to meet in his committee room yesterday along with the majority members elected on Monday and participate in the consideration of this resolution. They did meet and consider this resolution, and they did vote, with the exception, I think, of one, for its favorable report.

I want to say that in making up the minority of the committees the Democratic organization of the House hope to report all the nominations by Friday next, and when that is done it will have concluded and nominated its membership of the various committees earlier and with greater dispatch than has ever been done in this House since I have been a Member. The majority now will understand—and it does understand—how very difficult it is to make up committee assignments, and especially minority committee assignments. We are now working on them and will continue day and night, and we hope, as I said, to have them ready for nomination and election by the House on Friday.

In the Sixty-fifth—the last—Congress the Democrats, as in the case of the Republican Members this time, being in the majority then, did have on the first day of the session a complete list of the Democratic nominations for membership of all the committees, and they were elected on the first day of the session, but under the then existing circumstances the minority could not do so. They had a right to ask, as we have asked, for several days' time in which to prepare their list of nominations. While in the last Congress the Democrats presented and the House elected to the several committees the majority members on April 2, 1917, the first day of the session, it was not until April 18, 1917, that the minority was ready with its nominations.

In the Sixty-fourth Congress the Democrats were ready on the first day with their nominations—that is, on December 6, 1915—but not until December 14, 1915, was the minority ready. So that the minority in this Congress will be ready to present its nominations several days before the minority in the former Congresses was.

I wish now to express congratulations—sincere congratulations—to the Republicans on their quick response to the President's message on yesterday. [Applause and laughter.] The President yesterday in his message, read from the desk, requested this Congress—and he knew that the Republicans were in the majority and had control of the organization—to immediately pass the woman-suffrage amendment. "Immediate adoption" was his language, and in less time than 24 hours, the succeeding day, in come the Republicans, patriotically and loyally, presenting this amendment resolution in compliance with the President's request, and it will be carried. [Applause.] I want also to congratulate——

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KITCHIN. No; I am sorry I have not the time, as I have only seven minutes.

Mr. MANN. I wanted to add that we reported it before the President's message was received. [Applause and laughter.]

Mr. KITCHIN. I want also, Mr. Speaker, to congratulate not only the leaders of the Republican Party on that side, but the entire membership on the Republican side, on the ease and celerity with which within 18 months they have been able to jump on the band wagon. [Laughter.] Let it be known that for 14 years, from 1897 to 1911, the Republican Party had control of every branch of this Government. It had control of the White House, it had control of the House of Representatives, it had control of the Senate. The Susan B. Anthony amendment—this amendment—had been before the American public for half a century. And yet during every one of those 14 years, session after session, its advocates came and appealed to the Republican Party in this House and the Senate to have this amendment considered by Congress, but a deaf ear was turned to them. They were absolutely ignored and were told to go back home and attend to their own business. The Republicans were in control of every branch of this Government for 14 years, I say, and when the advocates of this amendment found that they could not get the Republicans to submit this amendment to the consideration of the House or Senate they then asked them to create a woman-suffrage committee, so that they could have hearings and present their cause. Again they were refused, again they were sent back home empty handed and without hope.

For 14 years, I repeat, the Republicans of the House turned a deaf ear to the men and women of this country who desired woman suffrage. For 14 years, with absolute control of every branch of the Government, the Republicans in the House not only refused to allow them to have the suffrage amendment considered in the House—to have a vote on it—but refused even to allow a woman-suffrage committee to be created in the House before which they could submit reasons and arguments for their cause. But it was reserved for a Democratic Rules Committee and for a Democratic House to give the suffragists of this country a Woman Suffrage Committee before which they could go and put their case. [Applause on the Democratic side.] They did go before this Woman Suffrage Committee, composed of a majority of Democrats, who gladly heard them day after day and week after week and month after month plead their cause. Be it known that it was a Democratic Woman Suffrage Committee that for the first time favorably reported this very resolution to the House and gave the advocates of woman suffrage a chance to have their cause considered and voted on in the House. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

And, gentlemen, I want to congratulate the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], chairman of the Woman Suffrage Committee in this Congress, for promptly reporting out of that committee the same resolution which the Democratic chairman of the Woman Suffrage Committee in the last Congress reported out. His committee has adopted the same amendment resolution that the Democratic Woman Suffrage Committee, headed by the gentleman from California [Mr. RAKER], adopted last Congress, and they ask the Members of this House to pass to-day the same resolution that the Democratic House passed last Congress, and which a Democratic President approved and now insists on "immediate adoption." [Applause and laughter.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from North Carolina has expired.

Mr. CLARK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, has the gentleman used all his time?

The SPEAKER. Yes. The gentleman from North Carolina used seven minutes.

Mr. CLARK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I desire to offer an amendment to the resolution and have it pending, to be voted upon later.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Florida offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend House joint resolution No. 1 by adding thereto as an additional paragraph the following language:

"This amendment shall not be valid unless the same shall be ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States within seven years after the adoption of this resolution by both Houses of the Congress."

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Florida [Mr. CLARK] is recognized.

Mr. CLARK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HARDY.]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. HARDY. Mr. Speaker, this is a curious exhibition to me. I have watched the chasing of the band wagon on many occasions during all my life, but I never saw such a band-wagon chasing as there was yesterday and is to-day. I have just left my home in Texas, where an amendment to our State constitution giving our women the vote is pending. It is to be voted on May 24. I have written a letter, and authorized its publication, urging the great State of Texas to adopt for herself this amendment giving to her women the same right to vote as her men now have. I earnestly hope and believe the amendment will be adopted.

But, Mr. Speaker, I believe that the very foundation of the original agreement under which the thirteen sovereign States formed the Union that constitutes this Nation is undermined and the agreement itself violated in spirit and in principle by the attempt to incorporate in the Federal Constitution a provision fixing or affecting the qualification of electors in the several States, and giving to Congress or to the Federal Government the right to enforce that provision.

The very first reservation in the Constitution of the United States when it was made by our fathers was a reservation reserving to the States the right to determine the qualifications of electors for electing Members of Congress. Article I, section 2, of the Constitution reads:

> The House of Representatives shall be composed of Members chosen every second year by the people of the several States * * * and the electors in each State shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the State legislature.

This joint resolution violates that section by providing that Congress shall determine who may vote or who shall not vote, or who may be permitted to vote or who shall not be excluded from voting by the several States, and it goes further and provides that Congress shall have the power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

When the States of this Union find Federal supervisors and inspectors attending all our elections, and perhaps Federal appointees holding all our elections under this provision, which violates the principle and destroys the rock on which our ship of state was anchored, the rock of local self-government, they may rue the day when they refused to let each State decide for itself this great fundamental question.

We first violated this principle when we adopted the fifteenth amendment. Under the fifteenth amendment, not only the negro, for whom it was adopted, but the sons of every other race under the sun may vote in any State in the Union, provided they or their ancestors have once been naturalized. Our immigration and naturalization laws are in the jurisdiction and control of the Federal Government. What evils may yet come of the fifteenth amendment only the future may unfold. Under it the old force bill was introduced, and defeated only after a long and bitter fight. When a new force bill shall be introduced under the fifteenth amendment and this proposed amendment, it will not be defeated.

Encroachments upon established rights are rarely wholesale; usurpations of power are gradual.

The question of suffrage, once exclusively for the States, has been taken over by the Federal Government, first as to race and now as to sex qualification. Next, perhaps, it will be taken over as to educational or property qualifications.

Texas now has a poll-tax payment requirement for suffrage; other States have not. Agitation and clamor for an amendment prescribing uniform requirements for suffrage in all the States may well be next.

Even now, if and when Congress shall pass laws to enforce the fifteenth and this proposed amendment, the Federal Government will or may control not only all our elections for Federal offices, but every State, county, and municipal election.

Every thoughtful man is asking himself to-day if this country of ours no longer recognizes the separate identity and autonomy of the States that compose the Union. That is the question upon which every lover of the original principles on which our fathers founded this Government must vote, and ought to vote against this resolution.

Aye, we ought to look further. We are contemplating the formation of a league of the great nations of the earth and our Government is looked to for example and precedent. We are setting an example and precedent under which if that league shall be formed its central authority may be tempted to greatly encroach upon the rights of the States or countries that may become the constituent members of the league. If our example had been to respect through all time the reservations made by our States in our Constitution, then a world-wide union of nations for limited purposes might have been invited to follow us with confidence of perpetual safety against all encroachments and usurpations of power. But now the example has been set, one by one we have absorbed the powers that the fathers reserved to the States. We have taken them sometimes consciously, sometimes avowedly, sometimes unconsciously, and at times without confessing it, until to-day there is no sacred right once reserved to the several States that we dare not put the unholy hand of usurpation upon and take it away.

For one, I love my whole country; for one, I believe that the women ought to vote; but for one, I believe that each and every State in the Union should determine the qualifications of its own electors. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. RAKER].

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, I am sorry that we are unable to have the time extended, so that more Members may have an opportunity to express their views to the membership of this House and to the country at large. They have been in favor of the resolution, and they feel as though a few words would give them the opportunity to express what has been in our mind for many years. This is one of the great fundamental questions confronting the American Nation to-day. We have settled many of the other questions ahead of the civilized world, but we have been behind when it comes to treating half of our population and giving them the same right the other half has had with respect to participation in the Government. We are behind the other nations of the world in that respect. There are some things that I would like to adopt from the Old World and add to ours, but a great big majority of the things that our people have and that this country has the Old World has not. This country has stood for the right of the individual to express his opinion, for the doctrine that he is responsible only to himself and to his God, and up to this date, so far as the Federal Government is concerned, we have said that one-half only of our population should express their views, give their sentiment, and have a voice in our Government. But the time is coming, and it is coming fast, when there will be a change in this respect, and to-day we will see this resolution passed by a good substantial vote over and above the two-thirds majority necessary. I expect that within the next week or 10 days the resolution will have passed the Senate and will then go to the States for ratification, as it ought to.

When we come to look back it is somewhat remarkable to see what the States have done. We find that there are 15 States which have full woman suffrage. There are 29 States where women can vote for President. These 29 States control 306 electoral votes, but still you do not permit those women to vote for Members of this House; you do not permit them to vote for Members of the United States Senate, and in many other instances you fail to allow them to vote for State officers. Before the last Congress adjourned, and after it had passed this resolution by a two-thirds vote on the 10th of January, 1919, it is remarkable to find what the countries of the Old World had done with respect to woman suffrage. Practically every civilized country in the world has extended the right of suffrage to women. Let us take first the little country that was devastated some four years ago by the rude Huns. They recognized that had women been able to participate in the affairs of the world before the war began humanity would have been different, the conditions of the world would have been different, and we would have saved the lives of many hundreds of thousands of our best people not only in this country, but abroad, as well as billions of dollars. While in Europe some months ago we had the pleasure of riding with the chief deputy of the Belgian Congress from Paris to Brussels, and the next day that congress met and extended the right of suffrage to women. Let us go right on down the line. England with all her colonies, New Zealand, Canada, Australia, has extended the right of suffrage to women. This is also true of Sweden and Denmark. Even the country that the world has been fighting has extended a limited suffrage to women, and should we be the last of the civilized countries of the world to extend this right—we who boast that we stand for humanity, who boast that we stand for giving men the opportunity to express their voice in our Government, that we might have a Government of the people, not by heredity, but that the people might express their will and desire as to what their Government should be? Is it right that we should be the last?

I want to congratulate the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], as I think I am entitled to, upon his insisting that this resolution be brought up the first thing when this Congress met in extraordinary session. The House by a large vote expressed its desire in the last Congress that it should pass. The Senate by one vote failed to give it passage. The President of the United States, not only yesterday but some three months ago, appeared before the Senate urging that body, with all its conservatism and its rules, because of the work women had done, because of the advantage they have been to America in winning the war, because of their loyalty and unselfishness and their ability to cope with all the vicissitudes of war, be given the same right to participate in their Government as the men have. So with propriety, with justice, with fairness this proposition was placed on the calendar yesterday and comes up to-day as House joint resolution No. 1. It is now up for consideration by the House and within the next hour and a half the vote will have been taken and America will have taken her place with the civilized nations of the world in extending this God-given right, this thing that makes America worth while, this thing that men have died for, even within the last year, to the women of the country in order that they may exercise their individual right; that they may participate in the affairs of their country; that they may say that the laws under which they are living shall be such as human beings should live under—to the advantage of this country and of the children that are to come, so that we might have a stronger, a more virile, and a better race.

We are going to pass this resolution to-day, and instead of having just enough to make the necessary two-thirds, I hope that we will have 50 votes to spare. Some of the States, since the last Congress adjourned, even in the very heart of the sunny

South, in the very center of where some say there is the greatest opposition, have given the women the right to vote. We find that the great State of Tennessee has extended the right to women to vote for the President of the United States. What little objection there might have been is being eliminated. Even our good Republican friends who voted against it in the last Congress will vote for it this time, and, so far as politics are concerned, there should be no attempt to take advantage by either the Democratic or the Republican Party. This Congress has elected as Speaker a man whom we all admire, who was opposed to woman suffrage, but the people demand, notwithstanding the individual vote of any particular man, that this recognition be given the women of the country. The leader of the Senate was opposed to woman suffrage, but that body will pass it. There may be a few Democrats and a few Republicans who in the past have voted against this who will again vote against it to-day, but they are going to be so scarce that you will hardly be able to count them. Notwithstanding that fact, the great body of the Representatives, Democrats and Republicans, will vote for this resolution, because neither party has a sufficient number of votes to pass it as a political measure.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

By unanimous consent Mr. RAKER was granted leave to extend his remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members have the privilege of extending in the RECORD their remarks upon this resolution for five days.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, for the present I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts objects.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. NELSON].

Mr. NELSON of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, I am for this resolution and desire to speak in its behalf, because I believe that the time is now here when we ought to express ourselves in favor of one-half of the loyal, patriotic, and conscientious citizenship of our country—the faithful women who have stood by us in the hour of need and in the hour of the greatest crisis of our history. Equal suffrage for the women of the United States is certain to come. It is futile to stem the ever-growing tide in its favor any longer. Delay will only intensify its demand. Our people are impatient. They demand this simple act of justice to our great American womanhood. The Republican Party will to-day add additional honor to its glorious history of statesmanlike achievements by overwhelmingly passing this amendment to our Constitution. [Applause.]

Wyoming was the first Territory in the Union to adopt equal suffrage, in 1869, and the first State to incorporate equal suffrage into its State constitution, 1890, and Congress gave its first official approval of equal suffrage when it admitted Wyoming as a State, July 10, 1890. State after State has followed in adopting equal suffrage until now complete enfranchisement of women is given in 15 States; right to vote for presidential electors in 11 States; full suffrage at primary election in 2 States; and partial suffrage in 13 States. This means that 41 out of the 48 States of the Union have already granted women the right of the ballot in some form and to some degree. I am proud this afternoon to say that in my own State of Wisconsin the legislature recently granted to women suffrage as far as it relates to presidential electors, and if the United States Senate promptly acts upon this joint resolution and passes it, as we confidently believe it will, my own Legislature of Wisconsin, which is still in session, I think will, without question, promptly ratify this amendment, and the State of Wisconsin will thus become one of the first States in the Union to ratify the equal suffrage amendment.

I believe that the time is now ripe for this Congress to vote to submit to the several States of the Union for ratification the constitutional amendment making equal suffrage a part of the Constitution of the United States. The privilege of ratifying the amendment by three-fourths of the States should no longer be denied. In the interest of justice, right, and equality, the equal-suffrage amendment should be passed by this Congress and be speedily ratified by the several States. Woman has demonstrated in the awful war just ended, as well as in every crisis of the world's history, her undisputed right to equal suffrage. President Wilson has said: "This war could not have been fought had it not been for the services of the women." Gen. Pershing says: "This war is being fought by women; it is women who suffer and lend courage to us; women are the ones who will deserve honor for their aid in establishing democracy." Gen. Wood says: "The support and efforts of American women made our part in the war possible." Ex-President Roosevelt, the matchless leader of American thoughts and ideals, and one of the three greatest statesmen of our history, was very pronounced in his views in favor of woman suffrage.

In home, in religion, in education, in society, and in the very fundamentals of civilization itself, it has been woman who has been the moulder of our highest ideals and purposes and the inspiring genius for the achievement of liberty, justice, and democracy. In all the great spiritual, moral, and social movements and reforms of the world for the uplift and blessing of the human race, women have taken a conspicuous part and have been willing to suffer and die that civilization might be advanced and the blessings of liberty vouchsafed. The family, the church, the school, and the State are dependent upon women for their highest development and largest achievement. [Applause.]

Taxation without representation should no longer apply to womankind. Only those who place the rights of property over the rights of humanity can possibly oppose women's suffrage. Disfranchisement of women is merely a relic of barbarism and is founded on the old spirit that might makes right. Real democracy is built on equality and justice and a government by the consent of the governed. Real democracy, therefore, demands the full enfranchisement of women.

In the work of the Red Cross—the great mother of the world—in the hospitals and trenches on the battle fields of Flanders and France, and in all the tasks that lie at the very heart of civilization, women have displayed a patriotism and heroism born of devotion, sacrifice, and service that has meant and means to-day a larger interpretation of the "Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man," in which there shall be no supermen of autocracy to despoil and crucify by acts of tyranny, but supermen of democracy to sacrifice and die for the freedom of mankind and the liberation of the world. The heroic and supreme sacrifices of our women inspire us to-day to permit our women to contribute jointly with our men in the work of our reconstruction period that is before us, our utmost power of service to the end that not only our own Nation but the whole human family shall be enriched spiritually, physically, socially, and economically.

The world is now calling as never before for both men and women of great brains and noble hearts to meet our large and complex problems of national and international reconstruction. Problems that will tax to the very limit our best statesmanship must be solved patiently and wisely yet heroically and resolutely, ever looking to the interest not only of our own Nation but to the lasting interest of all mankind. With the allied powers we have won a triumphant and glorious victory over militarism, materialism, and autocracy, but if this great victory is to bear fruit for the interest and benefit of future generations we must now unite in a peace program of reconstruction that will challenge our highest resolves and greatest determinations. In this great work we need the constant aid and counsel of our women in order that we may unitedly accomplish the best results. We need the aid of our American womanhood to build a democracy competent, constructive, and achieving.

Nothing less than absolute equality will begin to do justice to our glorious American womanhood. Right, justice, liberty, and democracy will then be our common aspiration, attained by a united citizenship of men and women who shall believe in a culture, a religion, a government, and a civilization subject not to the distinction of sex, but to the highest law of morals and justice, and which shall make right might and righteousness power and help usher in the glad day when the whole world shall be a glorious sisterhood of democracies dedicated to the welfare of all mankind. [Applause.]

The battle for the equal-suffrage amendment in the United States was begun by Susan B. Anthony, and the first amendment was drafted by her in 1875. The proposed amendment to the Federal Constitution to give the right of the ballot to women reads:

> The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of sex.

This amendment is practically the same as the one proposed by Susan B. Anthony in 1875. The amendment was first introduced by Senator Sargent, of California, January, 1878. It was voted on in the Senate four times, as follows: In 1887, yeas 17, nays 34; in 1914, failing by 11 votes; in 1918, failing by 2 votes; February, 1919, failing again by 1 vote. In the House it was voted on in 1915, failing by 78 of the necessary two-thirds vote. On January 10, 1918, it passed by 1 vote over the necessary two-thirds majority.

WHERE WOMEN VOTE.

The 28 States in which women now have presidential suffrage control about 55 per cent of the Electoral College, over one-half of the Senate, 45 per cent of the House, and 55 per cent of the votes in the party conventions.

Full suffrage is granted to women in the following States:
Wyoming, granted 1869.
Colorado, granted 1893.
Utah, granted 1896.
Idaho, granted 1896.
Washington, granted 1910.
California, granted 1911.
Kansas, granted 1912.
Arizona, granted 1912.
Oregon, granted 1912.
Nevada, granted 1914.
Montana, granted 1914.
New York, granted 1917.
Michigan, granted 1918.
Oklahoma, granted 1918.
South Dakota, granted 1918.
Texas, granted 1919.
Tennessee, granted 1919.

Presidential suffrage (those with star have municipal also):
* Illinois, granted 1913.
* Nebraska, granted 1917.
Rhode Island, granted 1917.
* North Dakota, granted 1917.
Iowa, granted 1919.
Tennessee, granted 1919.
Vermont, granted 1919.
Wisconsin, granted 1919.
* Indiana, granted 1919.
Maine, granted 1919.
Minnesota, granted 1919.
Missouri, granted 1919.

Primary suffrage, which is considered practically equal to full suffrage in the following States:
Arkansas, granted 1917.
Texas, granted 1918.

School or tax suffrage in the following States:
Kentucky, granted 1838.
Minnesota, granted 1875.
New Hampshire, granted 1878.
Massachusetts, granted 1879.
Mississippi, granted 1880.
New Jersey, granted 1887.
Connecticut, granted 1893.
Iowa, granted 1894.
Ohio, granted 1894.
Delaware, granted 1898.
Louisiana, granted 1898.
Wisconsin, granted 1900.
New Mexico, granted 1910.

Foreign countries in which women have full suffrage are as follows:
Isle of Man, granted 1881.
New Zealand, granted 1893.
Australia, granted 1902.
Finland, granted 1906.
Norway, granted 1907.
Iceland, granted 1913.
Denmark, granted 1915.
Russia, granted 1917.
Canada, granted 1918.
Austria, granted 1918.
Czecho-Slovakia, granted 1918.
England, granted 1918.
Germany, granted 1918.
Hungary, granted 1918.
Ireland, granted 1918.
Poland, granted 1918.
Scotland, granted 1918.
Wales, granted 1918.
Holland, granted 1919.
Sweden, granted 1919.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. NELSON of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I ask the privilege of revising and extending my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman?

Mr. LITTLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask the same permission.

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. MANN. No; I have no objection to everybody having the privilege, but I am not going to stop at this time to have each individual Member of the House make the request.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members have the right to print speeches in the RECORD, because we will spend half an hour here for individuals to get leave.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri asks unanimous consent that all Members be permitted to extend their remarks on this subject.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. For five days.

The SPEAKER. For five days. Is there objection?

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I object for the present.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin and the gentleman from Kansas——

Mr. HARDY of Texas. And I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks also.

The SPEAKER. And the gentleman from Texas? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. MANN. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. MACCRATE].

Mr. MACCRATE. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen, I realize thoroughly that a man only three days in Congress should hold his tongue, but coming as I do from a district which has equal suffrage, and being a member of the Committee on Woman Suffrage, I felt it obligatory to say why we from our section believe this national resolution or amendment should be submitted to the States for the States to decide in the constitutional way whether it shall be adopted. Now, whether you consider the franchise a right or a privilege, the women of America deserve the right, or they have earned the privilege. Everywhere you went during the past two years you saw women in uniform. You saw them in the Salvation Army, the Red Cross, the Knights of Columbus, the Young Men's Christian Association, Young Men's Hebrew Association, and other allied war activities. Whether you were at home or whether you were abroad, and like myself had the privilege of seeing the streets of London and Liverpool in January of this year, you realized that American womanhood had met the last argument that men have given for denying them the suffrage privilege, namely, that no one who is not a potential soldier is entitled to the franchise. I submit to your fairness and judgment that the women of America have been as potential soldiers during the past war as have been the men of America. [Applause.] And if potentiality for military service is the last objection, then certainly with the men who avoided the draft, or with the slackers, the women of America ought never be compared; and more certainly if men who continued in agricultural pursuits to win the war, if men who continued in shipyards to win the war, if men who continued in other branches of activities to win the war are entitled to the franchise, the women who maintained equal industrial and agricultural burdens and high moral burdens to win the war are entitled to the franchise. [Applause.] Not only that, but this resolution seems to me to be in perfect harmony with the Constitution itself. The preamble of the Constitution declares its purpose to be "to form a more perfect Union." This amendment will help us perfect the Union. It does not go into the homes of the country and tell the people what they shall put on or what they shall eat or what they shall drink. It does not say to the men and women of America they shall not do this or they shall not do that, but it does recognize a fundamental of our Government that rights and privileges shall be equal, and declares that sex alone shall not deprive women of the right or privilege of voting. I submit to you that this resolution is in harmony with the spirit of the Constitution itself. [Applause.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I now renew my request that all Members have leave to extend their remarks in the RECORD on this subject for five legislative days.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that all Members may be permitted to extend their remarks in the RECORD on this subject——

Mr. RAGSDALE. I object, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from South Carolina objects.

Mr. CLARK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FOCHT].

Mr. FOCHT. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do not think it fair to let in any more extensions unless we let in those who did not have a chance to speak, and so I object—of course, without any discourtesy whatever to the gentleman.

Mr. FOCHT. Mr. Speaker, we all realize that this is a transcendent and far-reaching question. It has been decided in Pennsylvania more than once what the people there think about it. It has been decided in many, many States what they think about it there. It has been brought to Congress for decision.

In Pennsylvania the last time the test was made the amendment was defeated by 50,000 majority, and it is conceded it would have been 250,000 majority or 300,000 majority had the question been voted on separately instead of in connection with four other amendments.

In my own district in Pennsylvania, comprised of eight counties, which are typical of the Christianity, civilization, and the chivalry of America, every last county went against it after a full discussion of the question. I dare say, if it were submitted again, yes or no on its merits, it would go double what it was the last time against it. I appreciate the tribute that has been paid here, very tenderly and, I might say, patriotically, to womanhood. How could any of us do otherwise than pay high tribute to the mother or wife or daughter? These gentlemen say that those of us who are opposed to this amendment are denying the women something; that we are defeating them in a high and laudable purpose. I challenge that statement and that argument. My proposition is that those mothers of the soldier boys do not ask for this thing. I need not dwell upon the greatness of Pennsylvania, or her glory, or the soldiers she sent to the front, or the money she gave to back them up, but it is well that you be reminded that Pennsylvania's only vote of record is against woman suffrage. In the time I have here I want to enter the protest of one Member from Pennsylvania against going so far afield at this particular time in this uncharted matter, simply because a few States out West have adopted the suffrage program. And with all respect for the Members who come from those States where they have had woman suffrage, I do not believe many appeals come to them or much concern is felt for the franchise by most women. I do not believe a vast majority of women want the vote, nor do they need it for their protection.

Furthermore, let me say that in the State of Pennsylvania 20 years ago we had better laws for the protection of womanhood than they have in the States where they have had woman suffrage for 25 years, and we have better laws there now; hence it is to be seen that it is not necessary for women to engage in the conflict and asperities of politics to secure more than equality of protection with men. Formerly it was contended that the vote for women was necessary to win the war and to further prohibition, but the fallacy of these arguments was made manifest by subsequent events.

Mr. HICKS. Will the gentleman yield for a moment?

Mr. FOCHT. I can not, having but a few minutes' time. I know where your heart is. You are really not for this. [Laughter.] There is no Member here, either from the States of New York, Pennsylvania, or Ohio, who down in his heart is for this sort of thing.

Another reason why women in their good sense are not here appealing for the vote and sphere of political activity may be that they have a better conception of the biological and physiological laws than some gentlemen who will vote in the affirmative on account of coming from States where women now vote—laws ordained by God, and which the vote of Congress nor an amendment to the Constitution can not change or set aside. [Applause.]

In conclusion I will submit a letter I received this morning from Mrs. Horace Brock, president of the Pennsylvania Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, and which includes some salient points on this question:

> By the submission of the question of woman suffrage to the voters of the State in 1915 Pennsylvania declared against Federal interference and for the right of the electorate to decide this question. There is a bill now before the State senate, which has passed the house, providing for a resubmission to the people. We opposed this bill in the house, for, while we agree a referendum to the people is the only democratic and just way of deciding this issue, we know there is no increased demand for woman suffrage, but rather increased opposition to it. Since the passage of the bill in the house, however, we have made no further opposition and are making our opposition to the passage of an amendment to the Federal Constitution, which would deprive the State of the right to decide its own electorate.
> A Federal amendment to the Constitution is a serious matter, because it is irrevocable. The voters of New York State, men and women, finding double suffrage increases taxes and the socialist vote, are planning a resubmission of this question to the voters before long. If the Federal amendment is not passed, this will certainly be done.
> A noisy minority are demanding votes for women as a reward for their war work, but the majority of women war workers, who have been largely antisuffragists desiring no reward, object to being penalized and given this added burden because of their work. Moreover, because a woman is efficient in Red Cross and industrial work, it does not follow she would be efficient in Congress. Also, it is not advisable to legislate for normal times extraordinary measures that may be useful and necessary in abnormal times.
> I therefore ask you, in justice to your State and its electorate, to vote against the Federal woman-suffrage amendment.

[Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. FESS). The time of the gentleman from North Carolina has again expired.

Mr. CLARK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLACK].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. Speaker, of course there is no dispute upon the proposition that Congress by a two-thirds vote of both Houses may submit any amendment which it sees fit, and when such amendment is ratified by three-fourths of the legislatures of the several States it would become a part of the Constitution and binding upon all the States. There is no controversy upon that point. And since the right of a State to peaceably secede from the Union has forever been settled in the negative, there can no longer be any sound contention that any amendment which is adopted in the constitutional manner violates any of the rights of the other States. The minority States must, of course, yield to the will of the majority.

But this very fact makes all the more important that Congress should be careful in submitting amendments, and the States should be slow in ratifying those which delegate power to the Federal Government hitherto reserved to the States and exercised by their own legislative machinery.

Article I, section 2, of our Federal Constitution provides—

> The House of Representatives shall be composed of Members chosen every second year by the people of the several States. * * * And the electors in each State shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the State legislature.

Thus it will be seen that the framers of our Constitution, recognizing the State as the sovereign unit of government, deemed it wise to reserve to the States the right to regulate their own suffrage and provided in affirmative terms that the House of Representatives should be chosen by electors having the same qualifications as those who should choose the most numerous branch of the State legislatures.

And when 123 years later the seventeenth amendment was adopted, which provided for the election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people, this same provision was carried which prescribed that the electors should have the same qualifications as those required for electing the most numerous branch of the State legislatures.

Now, the amendment which we have under consideration proposes to change all of this and turn over to the Federal Government one of the most essential elements of State sovereignty; that is, to limit and control the States in their right to determine and prescribe the qualifications of their own electors.

And while I concede that the method by which it is proposed to be done is a perfectly legal one, the question is, Should it be done as a matter of wise governmental policy?

Is suffrage such a question as should be snatched from the control of the States and lodged in a rapidly centralizing government? That is a question which I consider myself called upon to answer as the elected Representative of the people from the district which I have the honor to represent in this body.

When I consider the principles which underlie the structure of our republican form of government, with its "indissoluble Union of indestructible States"; when I consider the fact that I am a Democratic Representative and owe at least some allegiance to the historic principles of the party and some degree of obedience to its most recent national platform, then I am not in doubt as to how I should vote.

I should vote against the submission of this amendment and leave each State free to regulate and control the matter of its own suffrage.

Therefore I will vote the way I think and believe.

If my own State—Texas—for instance, wants to grant full suffrage to women, it has a perfectly simple method of doing it. On next Saturday, May 24, the people of our State will vote upon a constitutional amendment which has for its object this very purpose.

In the submission of this State amendment the voters get a real referendum. If they adopt it, they will have no need of this Federal amendment. If they do not adopt it, then why should I vote for a Federal amendment which would impose it upon them against their own will.

The committee at the last session of Congress who reported this resolution made this remarkable statement on page 4 of their report. I would not refer to it now except for the fact that it is illustrative of much of the logic used by the proponents of this amendment. The language was:

> To deny the States the opportunity to establish woman suffrage if they wish to do so is an act of autocratic injustice which would certainly be misunderstood abroad and would deeply incense the millions of women who are voters, as well as the millions more who are petitioning for the vote.

That is a very remarkable statement. I would like to inquire what provision there is in the Federal Constitution which in the slightest degree prohibits the States from granting full suffrage to their women whenever they desire to do so? And if there is no such prohibition, then what possible power is there anywhere which can prevent a State from doing so?

Every schoolboy knows that all the powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution nor prohibited by it to the States are reserved to the States, respectively, or to the people. If that report had said, instead of the language which I have quoted, that "To deny the States the opportunity to control their own suffrage, if they wish to do so, is an act of autocratic injustice," then it would have been a statement, as I understand it, of the doctrine which the Democratic Party has championed for more than a hundred years and which has been so ably defended by many of the party's greatest leaders. I do not think that the matter has been more clearly stated anywhere than by President Wilson in a statement to a delegation of suffragists January 6, 1917:

> I am tied to a conviction which I have had all my life, that changes of this sort ought to be brought State by State. It is a deeply matured conviction on my part, and therefore I would be without excuse to my own constitutional principles if I lent my support to this very important movement for an amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Of course it will be conceded that the President has expressed some contrary opinions since then, but the newest is not always the best. The date or luster of the coin does not determine its true value, and "he who chooses without a proper test may perish, both a pauper and a fool."

When we put these different statements of the President to the test of Democratic principles, as interpreted throughout the history of our party and by our recent Democratic platforms, I am compelled to choose his opinion, as expressed on January 6, 1917, as the soundest and wisest one, rather than that of these more recent days.

Our platform at St. Louis in 1916 contained this declaration:

> We recommend the extension of the franchise to the women of the country by the States on the same terms as to men.

If the party had intended to take the position that woman suffrage is a Federal and not a State matter, then the platform would have recommended that Congress take action on the question instead of making its recommendation to the several States of the Union. There is no declaration in the platform anywhere for the submission of a national woman suffrage amendment, and no Democratic national convention in the history of the party has ever declared for it.

On the contrary, it is perfectly well known that the attitude of the party has long been that the regulation of suffrage belongs to the States, and that as a matter of proper public policy it should be left there.

It is for these reasons, and not because I am opposed to woman suffrage by State action, that I will vote against the submission of this amendment. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, there is an old adage, "Let justice be done though the heavens fall," and I invoke that principle in voting upon this resolution to-day.

The distinguished chairman of this committee [Mr. MANN] has well said that for 40 years one-half of the population of the United States of America have been clamoring for the privilege of suffrage, the privilege which we men have enjoyed since the foundation of this Republic. The distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE], in raising opposition to the question of procedure this morning, said that he was willing to give the credit of the passage of this resolution to the distinguished chairman of this committee. I yield to no Democrat in loyalty to and love for my party. Yet if, in order to pass this resolution to-day, it were necessary to give the credit to the Republican chairman of this committee, I would say pass it and give credit to him. If, in order to pass this resolution to-day, it were necessary to give the credit to the Republican Party, I would say pass it, do justice, give them the credit of it if such credit has to go to any particular party. [Applause.]

But this resolution would pass regardless of anything I may say or do or anything that may be said or done by the chairman of this committee. If the poll we proponents have made is correct, this resolution will pass and receive 301 votes of this House.

The proponents of this measure have a right to expect that the opposition, in opening the discussion of this question, would send to us the best argument they have against woman suffrage. But when they open this discussion by sending to the floor that distinguished, astute, eloquent orator from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] we had the right to expect that the last word in opposition to woman suffrage would be forthcoming, but the distinguished gentleman was unable to say one word against the passage of this resolution. He was unable to give us one argument why it should not be passed. He said, in effect—and it was all he could say—that he would blindly shut his eyes and vote against the resolution. He did, however, call attention to the fact that this suffrage resolution was introduced in the Sixty-fifth Congress by a Democrat, that a suffrage committee was organized by a Democratic Congress, that it was reported by a suffrage committee with a Democratic majority, that it was handled on the floor of this House by a Democratic majority, and that it passed this House by a Democratic majority.

Mr. BAER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. Not now. He said that it was called for as a piece of legislation by a Democratic President of this Nation. He called attention to that, and further to the fact that the President from France has asked this Congress to pass this resolution at this time. But, as good a Democrat as I am, I want to say to my colleagues that if the message read yesterday from the President of the United States had asked us to vote against woman suffrage, it would have reached a point when I could no longer do that which a Democratic President asked of this Congress to do. [Applause.]

The President has asked me to vote to put back wine and beer, but that is one question that I will not follow the President on when the time comes, although up to this time I have followed him on every issue. [Applause.] My good friends from Texas, my colleagues, Mr. HARDY and Mr. BLACK, and my good colleague from North Carolina [Mr. SMALL], seem to be so afraid that this resolution infringes on the sovereignty of the States, that it takes from the States some ancient rights which they have possessed for so many years, and that it interferes with their regulating the question of suffrage. I ask my good friends in what particular, aside from the question of sex, over which God Almighty alone has control, will this amendment restrict the regulation by States of suffrage? Why, the State of Texas, regardless of this resolution, will still by its legislation say what qualifications a person must possess in order to vote. They will say whether or not there should be a property right restriction placed upon it; they will say whether or not a person must have an educational qualification; they will say whether or not a person must pay a poll tax, whether they must register here or there; and in what particular. They will say this or that concerning every single regulation or control which will not interfere, except that by the Constitution of the Government they shall not say that one half of the citizens of the Union may vote and the other half, equally intelligent, equally qualified, shall not have equal rights that we men have possessed for time eternal. I say the time has come when justice must be done, though the heavens fall.

I am not afraid of this infringing on the sovereignty of my State. If it was intended to infringe upon its rights I would not support it, but it does not infringe on the rights of the sovereign States. The minority on many questions has to give up to the majority in the interest of the welfare of the whole people. I have the right, following the pursuit of happiness, to go just as far in that pursuit as I can without infringing upon the equal rights of every other citizen of the United States, and whenever in following the pursuit of happiness my action infringes on the equal right of any other citizen, then and there I must stop. I say that in this case we need not be afraid, and we need not anticipate trouble coming from this resolution which gives the women the right to have a part in governmental affairs of this country. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I ask leave to revise and extend my remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Speaker, I feel that I must object. I renew the request that I made that all Members of the House may have the right to extend their remarks in the RECORD for five legislative days.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Oklahoma asks unanimous consent that all Members of the House have the right to extend their remarks in the RECORD for five legislative days. Is there objection?

Mr. RAGSDALE. I object.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. VAILE].

Mr. VAILE. Mr. Speaker, following the example of the distinguished gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN], I would like first to congratulate the President of the United States upon his final, though belated, acceptance of Republican principles.

But in this galaxy of brilliant advocates I prefer to appear as a witness, believing that residence in a State where women have voted for a quarter of a century will give my testimony some value.

I want to mention by name the women whom we have elected to office in Colorado. Aside from the incumbents of the office of State superintendent of schools, who have been invariably competent, and some of whom have shown marked ability, we have elected in the last eight years nine women to the upper and lower branches of the State legislature. First, Mrs. Alma V. Lafferty, a Democratic member of the lower house, in 1911, and a very close associate and coworker of that city builder, Robert W. Speer. Those of you who know my beautiful city know what it means to have been associated with him in that work. Mrs. Lafferty had a son who was a graduate of West Point and who fell mortally wounded at El Caney. In the same legislature was Mrs. Louise Kerwin. Mrs. Evangeline Heartz was in the house of representatives in 1915 and was reelected in 1917. Mrs. Frances S. Lee served in 1911. All of these women had been school-teachers, successful ones, and I submit that many Members of this House have been elected with no greater qualifications than those held by these women; and we used to regard as very high the qualification necessary in a candidate for the office of Member of Congress. Miss Louise U. Jones was elected to the Democratic lower house in 1911—a wealthy woman who made her wealth by wise investment in real estate and as a builder of hotels and residences. All of these women were Democrats. Mrs. Agnes L. Riddle was a Republican member of the lower house in 1911 and was later a candidate for secretary of state in 1912 and elected to the State senate in 1917. Mrs. Riddle is the daughter of a German peasant, and I heard her, addressing a liberty loan meeting, recall the fact that she had been twice elected to the Colorado Legislature. She asked her audience how far the daughter of a German peasant could advance under the Kaiser's autocracy. I heard her tell that audience that when with her mother and little brothers and sisters they first saw the Stars and Stripes in New York Harbor and said, "Mother, what a beautiful flag," her mother took from her handbag a silk miniature of that flag and made the children kiss it, and said to them, "Henceforth that is your flag, and this new beautiful country is your country." Mrs. Riddle had two sons serving under the Stars and Stripes in the war now happily ending.

Mrs. Helen Ring Robinson, a Democrat, was elected to the State senate in 1913. She has a grown daughter, is a brilliant newspaper woman, a skillful debater, an able parliamentarian. Mrs. Mary C. Bigelow was elected to the lower house as a Republican in 1919. She is a physician. Her husband is a banker, and she has a son who has been three years in the military service of the United States, and who has just returned a captain in the Expeditionary Force, after being through the stiffest fighting in the Argonne. Miss Mabel Ruth Baker, a school teacher, was elected as a Republican to the lower house in 1919. She is of tested metal, intellectual, sensible, and practical.

Those are the women actually elected in a suffrage State. They are all of the women that we have elected to the two branches of our State legislature, and I would willingly submit them to a comparison with an equal number of men legislators selected from the legislature of any Commonwealth in this country. They are just exactly the same kind of women as your own mothers and sisters. They were elected not because they were women but strictly upon their merits. Their opponents in every case were good men. They have left their names written on our statute books in measures for the benefit of the community, for the welfare of women and children, for the reclamation of unfortunates, the development of agriculture and industry, and the improvement of labor. I have not had the pleasure of agreeing very often with Senator Robinson, but both she and Mrs. Riddle are active and important in their party councils. Four of these women have grown children, including four men children who have served in the Armies of this Republic. Colorado has gained by electing the mothers of men to help make her laws, and, gentlemen of Dixie, I ask you men to help your own mothers reelect you. You may need their votes. [Applause.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I will ask the gentleman from Florida to proceed now.

Mr. CLARK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield one minute to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SAUNDERS].

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I desire to offer an amendment at this time, to be pending, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia: "Page 1, line 6, after the word 'by,' strike out the words 'the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States,' and insert in lieu thereof the following: 'popular vote in three-fourths of the several States.'"

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the point of order against the amendment.

Mr. MANN. Is this an amendment to the amendment?

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. No; it is an amendment to the resolution.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman can not offer an amendment until we first dispose of the amendment now pending.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. I did not think that any question of order would be raised. I thought it was understood that an amendment could be offered if one obtained the time in which to offer it, the amendment to be considered pending.

Mr. MANN. I do not know that I have any objection to an agreement to that effect; but I want to say very frankly that I am not going to get into a position, if I can help it, where 40 amendments may be offered for the purpose of obstruction. Of course, I know that this is not offered for that purpose. If the gentleman asks unanimous consent that the amendment shall be considered as pending until the two hours of debate are disposed of, the amendment to be disposed of after that, I shall make no objection.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment I have offered be considered as pending, to be disposed of at the expiration of the two hours of debate.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request that the amendment be offered simply for information, to be disposed of at the end of the two hours of debate?

There was no objection.

Mr. BLANTON. A point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BLANTON. Did the Chair understand that I reserved a point of order against the amendment as being unconstitutional?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair did not.

Mr. BLANTON. Well, I did.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair did not recognize the gentleman——

Mr. BLANTON. A moment ago I asked for recognition and reserved the point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is not called upon to pass upon the constitutionality of an amendment.

Mr. BLANTON. I would like to reserve a point of order against it.

Mr. MANN. I would like to have the amendment again reported, Mr. Speaker. I did not hear it read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. If there is no objection, the amendment will be again reported.

There was no objection.

The amendment was again reported.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the Chair hear me for a moment on the matter?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The matter can not be now considered. There is no time for its discussion at this time, but it will be considered at the close of the two hours' debate.

Mr. BLANTON. I merely wanted to call attention to the fact that it is in face of the provision of the Constitution of the United States, and I want to reserve the point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is out of order at the present time.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. It is proposed to amend the Constitution in that respect. We are Constitution-making now.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, what became of the point of order?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman reserved it.

Mr. MANN. I ask that it be disposed of. I do not propose, if I can help it, to get the House tied up where we can not have a chance to vote on the original proposition.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair does not pass upon the constitutionality of an amendment, and therefore overrules the point of order.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLARK]. [Applause.]

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I have never set up as a prophet and I am not the son of a prophet, but on the 4th day of July, 29 years ago, I made a speech in which I indulged in two prophecies. One of them was that the justice of the American people would give the right of suffrage to women. [Applause.] The other one was that we would live to travel in flying machines. One of the prophecies has been realized and the other will be realized in a very few days. [Applause.] When I came here the voice of the suffragist was like that of John the Baptist crying in the wilderness. It was more a joke than anything else, but time and the expressed sentiment, in pieces, of the American people have converted a majority of the House and perhaps a majority of the Senate to this doctrine. In the last Congress by a curious accident they got just exactly enough votes to pass this amendment through the House. I did not vote; I rarely ever did. I do not think it was ever intended the Speaker should vote very much, but one gentleman was going to change his vote to the negative, and I sent word if he did I would vote and that would tie it. So I came that near voting. [Applause.] I do not think woman suffrage is going to precipitate the millennium. I do not believe it is going to cause the damage to American institutions that some very good men think. The great State of Missouri at its last session of its legislature went as far as it possibly could go under the Constitution in favor of woman suffrage. They gave the right to women to vote for presidential electors and municipal officers, and several other States have done the same. I believe in State rights as much as any gentleman on the floor of this House, but in voting for this suffrage amendment I am representing the voice of the people of Missouri. I am not going to quarrel with anybody about voting the other way. This is a free country and we ought to have the right to vote here as we please. Now, another argument in favor of it, and I think it is founded on justice, is I think my wife and my daughter are as capable of voting as most men in this country are—— [Applause.]

Mr. MANN. More.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. And I would be ashamed to have raised a daughter who was not. [Applause.] Well, now, there has been a good deal of talk first and last about the opinion of the President, and some people have insinuated I was not up to the mark in that respect. [Laughter.] From across the sea comes the voice of the leader of the Democratic Party and the leader of the American people, who was made that way by two elections in this country, and it ought to be a matter of pride to every American citizen that Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States, is universally acclaimed the foremost man of all this world. [Applause.] He has arrived at that opinion by gradations, like a good many of the rest of us have. It is the progress of the human race going on all over the world, and if we want to keep in tune with them we ought to pass this amendment, and we can not afford very well, with our boasted civilization and our boast about our great intelligence, all of which I thoroughly indorse, to be behind every other civilized nation on earth in this matter. [Applause.] I wish instead of having two hours we had some more time, so we could talk freely, but we are limited as to time. There is an old saying that brevity is the soul of wit. If that is true, then these speeches which have been made here to-day judged by that standard would be very witty, although I doubt whether a good judge would so pronounce them. [Laughter.] My own judgment—one moment, Mr. Speaker [laughter]—my own judgment is that if submitted to a plebiscite, as the French call it, in the United States this amendment would carry overwhelmingly. [Applause.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois is recognized. [Loud applause.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, two years ago when a similar resolution was pending in this body I took my life in my hands and came over here to vote, and for a week thereafter I did not know whether it would kill me or not. But to-day, strong and healthy [applause], I appear in the advocacy of a great cause, with the time ripe, with the people ready, with the beneficiaries eager, intelligent, and willing to perform their share in the functioning of good government. [Applause.]

The distinguished speaker who has just preceded me referred, as had a Democrat formerly, to the message of the President. I had hoped that this discussion might proceed without any partisan bias. It is true, my friends on this side of the House, that the President and Democratic leaders have frequently talked in favor of woman suffrage, but a majority of them have never voted for it. [Applause on the Republican side.] They have been long on promises, like they are on everything else, but very short on fulfillment. I heard the distinguished gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. SMALL] speak for seven minutes in favor of the amendment which he proposes to vote against.

Now, this is not a partisan question on either side of the House. If it were, it would not have any chance. Let both sides, Republicans and Democrats, feel their responsibility to civilization, to enlightenment, to progress, to the movement ahead. You can no more stop the wave of progression than you can roll back the sea with a broom, and which was tried once. Women will receive the suffrage; they will take their share in the management of the Government, and, in my judgment, good citizens everywhere will thank God shortly that we have the conservatism and good sense of women, the home makers and remaining mostly in the homes, standing against the wave of unreasonable wildness which seems now to be dominating the world in many quarters.

I hope that the Republican side of the House may vote almost as a unit, if not as a unit, in favor of the amendment, and I pray that the majority of the Democratic side of the House will see the light and vote accordingly. [Applause.]

Mr. CLARK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I shall undertake in the few minutes left to say a word or two in reference to this proposed resolution. They say there is no zeal like that of a new convert. The distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], who has just taken his seat, has not always been so zealous in support of this propositon. I remember very well, Mr. Speaker, as you do, and as the older Members of this House remember, that on one occasion these women for whom he speaks so eloquently now had a parade down Pennsylvania Avenue. Mr. Hobson, of Alabama, who was then the valiant defender of this cause, stood upon this floor and denounced what he said was the insulting conduct of certain ruffians toward some of these ladies on the floats as they went down the Avenue, and that such insulting conduct was winked at by the police.

He said, among other things, that he had just received a message over the telephone from some good lady to the effect that her daughter, who was upon one of these floats, had been insulted by a ruffian who had climbed on the float. And at that time my distinguished friend, whom I thought was right, then said, "Her daughter ought to have been at home." But now he wants her at the polling places; he wants her in the public offices; he wants her on the stump.

Ah, Mr. Speaker, we have had a lot of very great changes in this country. The former Speaker stood here a moment or two ago and lauded the President of the United States, who sent us a message from across the waters, so anxious is he for woman suffrage. But I prefer to follow the President, when it seems to me he was in, I will not say a saner state of mind, but when the President, in a letter to the Jane Jefferson Club, of Denver, Colo., in 1916, gave expression to this statement:

> Both the great political parties have in their recent platforms favored the extension of suffrage to women through State government.

That is where the President stood, and that is where the Democratic Party of this Nation in its last official utterance stands. The President can not prescribe Democratic law, and the gentleman from Missouri knows it. No power on this earth can lay down Democratic doctrine but a Democratic convention, and the last one that spoke declared that this was a matter for the respective States to attend to. And the Republican Party in convention declared practically the same thing. And I assert, without fear of successful contradiction, that any Democrat and any Republican who votes for this resolution to-day votes directly against the last official declaration of his party. You can not get away from it. It is there.

And there is some other good Democratic authority that I shall call to witness in this connection. Thomas Jefferson, the father of the Democratic Party, did not favor woman suffrage. I have not time to read his statement, but it is in the minority report, and gentlemen can read it, and I shall incorporate it in my remarks. And Grover Cleveland did not, and Woodrow Wilson did not. And when you come to the Republican thought on this question, the Hon. Elihu Root, the brainiest man in the Republican Party to-day, is not in favor of it, and William Howard Taft was not in favor of it. I believe he has seen the light, too, that my friend from Illinois [Mr. MANN] spoke of. A lot of these people have been traveling the road to Damascus lately. [Applause and laughter.]

A MEMBER. The present Speaker voted against it the last time.

Mr. CLARK of Florida. Ah, Mr. Speaker, the Speaker of this House is loyal to his convictions and loyal to his declarations. A Member on the floor says that the present Speaker voted against it the last time, and my prediction is that he is going to vote against it this time.

I am opposed to submitting this amendment to the States for several reasons, Mr. Speaker, and one is because the franchise is not a right which attaches or belongs to any person of any sex or race. It is a privilege to be granted or withheld at the pleasure of the States. The power to control and regulate the suffrage was not delegated in the Constitution to the Federal Government, but was expressly retained by the several States, and these States have exclusively exercised this power ever since the Union was established. No member of the convention which framed our Federal Constitution suggested that the power should be delegated to the Federal Government, but by unanimous consent it was left as a reserved right to the respective States. Why should the States now delegate to the General Government a power which in the unanimous judgment of the fathers of the Republic it was deemed wise to retain when the organic law was written? I respectfully submit, Mr. Speaker, that a radical change in the structure of a great government should not be made unless it should be indisputably established that the proposed change is not only for the betterment of mankind, but that it is necessary for the welfare of the people.

What is it that we are asked to do here? We are asked to pass this joint resolution and thereby submit to the legislatures of the several States for ratification or rejection an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which amendment confers upon women the privilege of voting. What is the duty of a Representative? I ask my colleagues to listen to this: What is the duty of a Representative in Congress when he is confronted with a proposition to submit an amendment to the Constitution?

Just two or three days ago everyone of us took a solemn oath "to uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic," and that Constitution itself, with unerring certainty, points out our duty in this emergency. The Constitution provides that "the Congress, whenever two-thirds of both Houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose amendments to this Constitution." It does not provide that whenever two-thirds of both Houses think it "advisable." It does not provide that whenever two-thirds of both Houses think it "politic." It does not provide that whenever two-thirds of both Houses think it "expedient." It does not provide that whenever two-thirds of both Houses "believe their seats are in jeopardy." It does not provide that whenever "a few women in the country desire it." But it provides that whenever two-thirds of both Houses, before the bar of their consciencies, under their oaths to defend the Constitution, deem it to be necessary to propose the amendments.

Why is it necessary? Is the Republic in danger? Is there any great public purpose to be subserved? Does the welfare of the country demand it? Why is it necessary? Not only must the Representative in his solemn judgment be convinced that it is necessary, but he ought to be able to point out the necessity which impels him to vote that way. Oh, my friends, some gentlemen say they will vote for it "because their people want it." That does not meet the constitutional requirement. Some people are for it "because the good women of the country say they want it." That does not meet the constitutional requirement under your oath to uphold and defend the Constitution. You can not excuse yourself upon the proposition that somebody wants it or that you believe it is a good thing. If the fathers who framed the organic law had intended that, they would have put in that solemn instrument that whenever two-thirds believed that it is a good thing, or that so many people want it, they will vote for it.

Oh, my friends, can you put your hands upon your hearts to-day, before God and man, with due respect to your oaths to uphold the Constitution, and say that you believe that it is absolutely necessary that this amendment be submitted to the American people? You can not say it. No; you can not say it. I have heard gentlemen give their reasons for voting for it. Some of them say one thing and some say another, but I want to tell you what I believe. It strikes me that a great political storm cloud has appeared on the horizon and many are running to cover. There are a whole lot of people who, if Indian nomenclature were adopted at this time, might properly be dubbed "Young-men-afraid-of-their-jobs." That is what is the matter with a great lot of people. [Laughter.]

Oh, my friends, let us stand here to protect the Constitution which we swore we would protect. The fathers put that in the Constitution because they did not think that that great instrument ought to be lightly amended, because they did not think that we ought to tinker with it in obedience to the demand of every passing fancy. They knew that these "isms" would arise. They knew that these fantastic propositions would come up in the future to meet and plague the people of this country, and they decided to fix the Constitution so that it would be hard to amend, and then not amended until the welfare of the people absolutely demanded it. And yet here we tinker with a Constitution that for a century and a third and more has stood the test of all the changes of time.

My fellow countrymen, I am opposed to woman suffrage straight out from the shoulder, every day in the week and every week in the year. I am against it because I agree with the great leader from Illinois [Mr. MANN], that the place for the women is at home. That is where they belong. That is where he said they belonged. I agreed with him then and I agree with what he then said now. [Applause.]

Oh, they want to "purify politics," and yet I had one gentleman tell me that he wanted women to vote because the communities in his country were dry before they got the suffrage and after that they went wet. [Laughter.]

While I am opposed to it straight, and in the State, if I had a chance, I would vote against it, vote against it everywhere, and all the time, yet if the good women of my State really wanted it I am willing for my State to give them the right to vote, but I want my State to regulate and control it. I do not want to turn over to the Federal Government the right to control the franchise in all the States of this Union. When you do it you are going to open a Pandora's box whose ills will sweep all over this country, and you gentlemen from the North need not think that the only ones who are going to suffer are those who live below the Potomac.

You need not worry about that, we will all have our troubles. We will go through them, probably, worse than the days of reconstruction, and I remember something about that. But you will have it up above the river with your millions of foreign population who can not speak English. With your Bolsheviki, with your anarchists, with your I. W. W.'s, you are breeding trouble for yourselves as well as you are cooking up the dish for us. Do not worry, you will have yours and plenty of it.

I know it is old-fashioned, and I know that some people laugh now when it is suggested that the good, pure woman, the queen of the American home, the mother of your children, your sister, and your daughter, all of them ought to be at home. I know that some of the women who are advocating this proposition laugh and jeer at that idea. It is old-fashioned and out of date.

I was amused when some gentlemen were talking to-day about women being entitled to this privilege because they had made this great fight for world liberty and world democracy. I am willing to leave it to the mothers of the sons who went to France. If you will leave it to them and cut out the agitators and soapbox orators, you will see that the vote would be overwhelmingly against it. The real mothers—I do not mean all of them, but the great majority of them—do not want it. The men of America have protected them for a century and a third, and they will do it yet. But when this comes, women have got to take their stand on a level with the men. There will be no more legislation in the different States in her interests. There will be no more legislation in the National Government in her interest. Take the case to-day in every State in the Union and let a man and a woman have a law case before the court and the jury and the man has as much chance as the proverbial snowball down in some other country. But when this comes, she will have to "stand up to the rack, fodder or no fodder."

I want to call attention here, for I have not the time to go through all of it, to some of the misrepresentations that are made in order to create a sentiment for this resolution. Why, I had a copy of a paper here called The Suffragist, and in it Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, one of the bright particular stars in the suffrage movement, in undertaking to argue her side of it, said that women were not expected to know the laws of all the States, and they could not be expected to know that the age of consent in Florida was 10 years, while in Wyoming it was 18. And yet the statute books of my State, section 3521 of the General Statutes of Florida, fixes 18 years as the age of consent.

But here she is advertising to all the world that in Florida the age of consent is only 10 years. We are heathen down in that country, we are barbaric, we do not protect the girls and the women. I want to say to you that no woman in Florida has ever yet needed protection that she did not get it and the day will never come when the men of my State will decline to come to the rescue of a woman in distress. [Applause.]

Ah, Mr. Speaker, this amendment is going to be carried. I know that; I am not deceiving myself. I am not doubting it for one moment. The cards have been stacked, the decree has been written and the leaders, or some of the leaders, I will not say all of them because, thank God, we have some Democratic and some Republican leaders both who are still faithful to their first love—but some of our leaders on both sides are trying to run over each other to see who can get there first and get a credit for the enactment of this proposition.

God bless your souls, it will not be anything to be proud of. The distinguished gentleman from Illinois said that everybody would be delighted to have it passed. I am looking for him to be back here asking to renig before long. You are going to get mighty sorry about this. You were right in 1914 when you made your reply to Hobson. The former Speaker was right when he was standing solidly on the eternal granite of truth and State rights, but he has got on the shifting sands of expediency and they are all floating out onto the bosom of this unknown fathomless sea, and I am fearful they will never again reach the harbor of sound political doctrine.

Oh, Mr. Speaker, let you and I stand put. [Laughter.] If all the other leaders leave us let you and I stay true to the Old Flag. [Laughter.]

Then we have got Senator LODGE on the other side. He is with us yet. Senator LODGE is all right on this question at least. Senator PENROSE is another distinguished Republican, I believe, who is still firm in the faith. And so we have got a few leaders on our side. The enemy has captured a good many of them; some have been shot down; others have been wounded; some have almost had heart failure; and a great many of them are suffering from mental aberration, but a few are still strong, sound, and loyal.

I wish now they would come back, for "while the light holds out to burn the vilest sinner may return."

While we have a few minutes I wish the distinguished gentleman from Illinois and the distinguished leader over here, the former Speaker from Missouri, would get up and confess the fact that they are wrong for the time being and come back to where they both belong. [Laughter.]

Mr. Speaker, I have been here a little over 14 years. I have sat at the feet of these gentlemen and tried to imbibe wisdom, and if there are any two men I have looked up to as my ideals of fixed stars in the political firmament of the immovable Rock of Ages kind of statesmen it was the gentleman from Illinois and the former Speaker from Missouri. [Laughter.] But they have quit.

I was following them trustingly and faithfully when, all at once, when I got into the tangled brush I found that they had gone around another way and had left me struggling in the bushes. Mr. Speaker, you are not going to do it, I know. [Laughter.]

One other thing. No class of persons ought to have the right to vote, I think everyone will agree, unless that class can perform all of the duties of citizenship. They ought not to have the privileges of citizenship unless they can perform the duties. I think that is a proposition which no one will dispute. Women can not do that. We have heard a great deal here about what they can do. We can not create our armies out of women. We can not depend upon them.

Mr. LITTLE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CLARK of Florida. I have not the time.

Mr. LITTLE. We can not create our armies without women, can we? [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. CLARK of Florida. I agree with the gentleman absolutely on that proposition, but you can not form an army out of women. There is no use talking about that. They can not perform the duties of a sheriff. It would certainly be very disagreeable to them to perform jury duty. Take a murder case, for instance, with 12 jurors, 5 or 6 or 7 women with 4 or 5 or 6 men. The case takes a week to try. The judge orders them locked up, kept together, and all that sort of thing, and that would not be very agreeable, I am sure.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Florida has expired.

Mr. CLARK of Florida. Just one moment, Mr. Speaker, if I may be indulged. I want to say this one thing in conclusion: I feel very deeply about this matter. I feel for my country. I believe that this is the worst act that the American Congress will have ever performed, so far as the future of this great country is concerned, and while I know this resolution is going through the House, I have an abiding faith that three-fourths of the States will never ratify it. [Applause.]

Democrats can not support this resolution because of the fact that it contravenes every principle of democracy, and particularly is it antagonistic to the doctrine of States' rights, which has ever been one of the cardinal principles of the Democratic Party. This resolution takes the matter of the regulation of the suffrage entirely out of the power of the respective States of the Union and confers upon the Federal Government the unrestricted power to regulate elections and prescribe the qualifications of voters.

I am aware that some Representatives, and especially some from the South, who are supporting this resolution are endeavoring to justify their support of it by claiming that the States will still control in this regard, notwithstanding the incorporation of this amendment in the organic law. The last paragraph of the amendment provides "Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation." This provision either means what it says or it means nothing. It gives to Congress the full, absolute, unrestricted, and exclusive power to "enforce this article," and to enforce it "by appropriate legislation." The amendment gives to all women—white, black, and any other color—the right to vote, and invests Congress with complete power to carry it into effect by the enactment of any legislation which Congress may deem to be "appropriate." This opens up anew the negro question in all the Southern States, and I warn my colleagues from the South who are supporting this measure that they are "playing with fire," which is likely to produce another "reconstruction" conflagration in our Southland.

I am not an alarmist, Mr. Speaker, nor am I an extremist. The negro in the South to-day is as a class satisfied. He is treated fairly and justly under the law and is content to leave politics alone. He is now not a factor in politics and has no desire to become a factor. The two races understand each other perfectly, and are now dwelling in the same territory in amity, with nothing to disturb these relations. So far as I am concerned—and I am sure I speak for the real representative sentiment of the southern people—I would do the negro no harm, and would protect and defend him in the enjoyment of his every legal right. We do protect him under our laws in the full enjoyment of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, and no States in any portion of this country will go further to conserve his rights in these respects than will the States in the section from which I hail. But we had as well be plain. This does not mean that we will tolerate conditions of social equality with the negro or that we will allow the vicious and ignorant to control in our political affairs.

Our laws shall be, as they are now, fair, equitable, and just to all, but, with God's help, so framed that the intelligent, patriotic, and virtuous shall rule our beloved land. But why should this measure be forced upon us when the strong probability—yea, almost the certainty—is that it will disturb our local conditions to such an extent as to force us to go through the distressing trials of another "reconstruction" period? Gentlemen say this will not occur. Mr. Speaker, let us be candid with each other. While the great masses of the negroes in the South are contented with existing conditions, some of the alleged leaders of the race are agitators and disturbers and are constantly seeking to embroil their people in trouble with the white people by making demands for social recognition which will never be accorded them; and the real leaders in these matters are the negro women, who are much more insistent and vicious along these lines than are the men of their race.

Make this amendment a part of the Federal Constitution and the negro women of the Southern States, under the tutelage of the fast-growing socialistic element of our common country, will become fanatical on the subject of voting and will reawaken in the negro men an intense and not easily quenched desire to again become a political factor. White Bolsheviki will readily be found to organize and train this mass of ignorance and vice to the end that they may be elevated to places of honor and power, and they will make promises of social position and anything else to their deluded followers in order to accomplish their own ignoble purposes. But, say my southern colleagues who are enamored of this new and to Democrats strange doctrine, this will not happen. Let us see.

The Crisis, the official negro suffrage organ, issued by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, of which Jane Addams, pacifist and former suffrage president, is a director, says in its issue of November, 1917 (p. 8):

> It is going to be more difficult to disfranchise colored women in the South than it was to disfranchise colored men. Even southern 'gentlemen,' as used as they are to the mistreatment of colored women, can not in the blaze of present publicity physically beat them away from the polls. Their economic power over them will be smaller than their power over the men. * * * It is, therefore, of the utmost importance that every single black voter in the State of New York should this month cast his ballot in favor of woman suffrage and that every black voter of the United States should do the same thing whenever and as often as he has opportunity.

In the same issue of this negro suffrage organ (p. 12) there is an official resolution, passed by the National American Woman Suffrage Association, maintaining "that all American men or women, white or black, * * * shall share equally in the privileges and protection of democracy."

Also, in the same issue (pp. 19, 20, 21), are articles by Anna Howard Shaw, Carrie Chapman Catt, and Mary Garret Hay, leaders of the National Woman Suffrage Association, appealing for negro support, and demanding that distinction of color, as well as sex, be eliminated.

And this after the Crisis had distinctly pointed out the "discriminations" it wants to wipe out.

What say you, my brethren from the South, as to these statements of the Crisis? Suffragettes appealing to the negro vote in the North to support woman suffrage, because it means the ballot for the negro women of the South!

Again let us take a look at the Crisis. In the May, 1917, issue of the Crisis, page 41, is the following:

> INTERMARRIAGE OF RACES.
> Four bills against the interests of colored Americans have been introduced into the Sixty-fifth Congress—two to prohibit intermarriage of races and to provide Jim Crow street cars and one to provide a permanent colored military school, a fourth to segregate colored people.

From this it is clear that the Crisis wants free intermarriage, no military training for negroes, and no segregation!

Here we have the Crisis, negro suffrage organ, issued by an association of which Jane Addams, a leading suffragette, is a director, boldly advocating the intermarriage of the white and negro races.

In this same (May, 1917) issue of this negro suffrage organ we find the following editorial paragraph entitled "A Suggestion":

The Republican Party is on the rocks. The disfranchised negro sees light but dimly. The disfranchised woman is still disfranchised in the vast majority of the inhabitated States. Suppose these three groups strike a simple bargain. Let them work for a constitutional amendment basing representation in Congress on the actual vote cast for President in each State. We pause for reply.

Here we see the proposed combination. The Republican party, the disfranchised negro, and the disfranchised woman. Listen: "Suppose these three groups strike a simple bargain. Let them work for a constitutional amendment basing representation in Congress on the actual vote cast for President in each State." Have they struck the "simple bargain"? Where do Democrats come in on this bargain? What do southern Democrats get out of the bargain? How can a Democrat, and especially a southern Democrat, in view of these disclosures, support this resolution?

The extracts from the "Crisis" I have taken from a pamphlet called "Constitutional Bulletin No. 1," published by the "American Constitutional League," and there is no question as to their authenticity, and I plead with my southern colleagues to defeat this amendment which can bring nothing of good to our people and our country.

Another thing which should be seriously considered by gentlemen before the vote to submit this amendment to the States is the fact that once it becomes a part of the Constitution it is practically irrevocable. If, therefore, its adoption does not usher in the millennium, as its advocates so confidently assure us it will, then it will be with us in all probability for all time to come. On the other hand, if we should leave it where it belongs—to the individual action of the several States—and those adopting it should find that it was not what was desired it could easily be repealed.

And, Mr. Speaker, if women are to be given the privilege of voting, why should not the right be conferred through the same agency which granted the suffrage to men? Men have the right to vote through the independent action of the different States and not by virtue of any act of the Federal Congress. It is true that the privilege of exercising the right to vote was accorded to negro men through the agency of an amendment to the Federal Constitution, but that amendment was submitted by the Congress in the midst of a season of bitter sectional hate immediately following the close of a bloody four years of war between the sections, and surely no such precedent as this will be invoked in behalf of a resolution of this character.

The fourteenth and fifteenth amendments were the offspring of the bitterest sectional hate and most unreasoning party passion that ever blighted any land, and God grant that our beloved country may never be cursed with its like again. But the blind passion of those dark days immediately following the War Between the States fastened these amendments upon our organic law, and they are there to remain apparently forever, and as long as they do remain we must respect them as part and parcel of our Constitution. Mr. Speaker, in my own State of Florida there is no discrimination under the law against any class of men with respect to the exercise of the elective franchise. We have the usual provisions which prohibit insane persons, persons convicted of crime, and the like, from voting, and in addition we require that a man shall be a resident of the State for 12 months and of the county in which he lives for 6 months before he can vote. We also require that he must pay a poll tax of $1 per year, which goes into the school fund, before he is qualified to vote.

In addition to these requirements we have the Australian ballot. We have no party emblems or marks of any character on the ballot, but the names of all candidates, regardless of party, are printed thereon in alphabetic order, and for a man to vote intelligently he must be able to read and must know the names of his party's candidates. Being able to read and knowing who are his party's candidates, he simply makes a cross mark opposite the name of each candidate for whom he desires to vote. Under our election laws the voting is secret, and this is all there is to the election laws of Florida, except that we have provision for the due registration of all qualified voters. I challenge any State in all the Union to present any cleaner and fairer election laws than Florida has written in her statute books.

Mr. Speaker, another objection which I have to woman suffrage is the fact that it will unquestionably materially aid the growth of socialism in this country. It will not only add to the growth of socialism, but will likewise contribute to the upbuilding of femininism and Bolshevism in America. Every Socialist and every Bolshevist throughout the land wherever you find him is an ardent advocate of woman suffrage, and he wants it by Federal amendment. Take the situation in the great State of New York. I desire to call attention to some facts connected with the New York election in 1917, and present the following extracts which I have taken from a circular issued by the Women Voters' Anti-Suffrage Party. These extracts, it will be seen, were taken from the New York Call, the official Socialist organ, in its issue of the day after the election.

Page 1, first column.—"Woman suffrage carried New York State. This was hailed as one of the biggest victories, not only by the women * * * but to radicals of all kinds."

Seventh column.—"Socialism and suffrage, inseparable companions in revolutionary thought and action, have triumphed in the election in New York City and State."

Third column.—Hillquit: "Socialist propaganda has undoubtedly been the most potent factor in the success of the woman-suffrage amendment."

Page 2, first column.—"It is pointed out that the Socialist vote throughout the Empire State was the decisive factor in the victory for woman suffrage."

First column.—"It is certain that if the women had had the vote before this election Morris Hillquit would have been elected mayor and the whole Socialist ticket would have been triumphant."

Fifth column.—"At the last referendum in New York on woman suffrage, only two years ago, the issue was snowed under. So was the issue of Socialism. And yesterday, hand in hand (you bet!), Socialism and feminism forced the fates to reverse their dictum and the voters to act accordingly."

Sixth column.—Hillquit: "Socialists can take the credit in a large measure for the success of the woman-suffrage amendment. From all indications the Socialist vote in the State exceeded 200,000, all of which counted for suffrage. Furthermore, our campaign, with its social and political background, had a visible effect on the increase of the suffrage vote. That alone was a great Socialist achievement."

In its issue of November 12, 1917, we have the following from a socialist leader:

Page 1, third column.—Elmer Rosenberg, Socialist assemblyman, representing the sixth assembly district, Manhattan, is quoted as saying of the election: "This was not a campaign; it was a rebellion. It is going to break out into a political revolution in America."

And on November 26, 1917, we have this extract from the speech of Morris Hillquit, the Socialist candidate for mayor of New York City:

Page 2.—Socialist jubilation meeting, November 25, 1917, in Madison Square Garden, New York City, after the 1917 election Morris Hillquit, former candidate for mayor, stated: "We have put Socialism on the map of New York and on the map of the United States. * * * We have opened the doors of many local legislative assemblies to our representatives. Our slogan now is 'On to Washington!'"

"On to Washington" is the "slogan," and they are here, my friends. They are here to carry out the bargain which was struck, the "simple bargain" which it was proposed to "strike" between the Republican Party, the disfranchised negro, and the disfranchised woman. What an alliance! And over the heads of this combination the Socialist proudly cracks his whip. Can it be possible that Democrats, and southern Democrats, will give this resolution their approval?

Mr. Speaker, aside from the question of principle and treating the matter purely from the viewpoint of expediency, why should a Democrat vote for this resolution? What can the Democratic Party expect to gain by its adoption? I make the prediction now that if this amendment becomes a part of the Constitution the women's organization will line up almost solidly with the enemies of the Democratic Party. The great President of the United States, the undisputed leader of the Democratic Party, Woodrow Wilson, has done more to make woman suffrage an accomplished fact than all the Republican leaders put together, and yet the leaders in the woman suffrage movement have denounced him and his party, "in season and out of season."

They have not been able to find language sufficiently strong to voice their opposition to the President and his party. In the election of 1916 the women at the head of the suffrage movement, almost without exception, took their stand against Woodrow Wilson and the Democratic Party. Their organ, The Suffragist, under date of November 11, 1916, gives an account of how Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch, on the night of Sunday, November 5, 1916, from the platform of the Blackstone Theater at Chicago, sent final appeals over long-distance telephone to the women leaders in the Western States to oppose President Wilson and the Democratic candidates for Congress. I present some of the messages of Mrs. Blatch and the replies thereto, as follows:

Boise, Idaho, was next on the wire, Mrs. Blatch said. "In the mountains the spirit of freedom was born. Mountain lands are the cradle of liberty. Women of Idaho, you are free. With the torch of freedom in your hand, blaze the way for your fellow women by using your political freedom against our enemies, Woodrow Wilson and the national candidates of the Democratic Party."

Mrs. Frederick Walker, state chairman, answered: "The people of Idaho are seriously considering their responsibility toward Federal woman suffrage. Consequently thousands will vote against President Wilson, for the women realize that a vote for him is a vote against women."

Next came Montana. To the women of that State Mrs. Blatch sent this message: "All the political prophets put Montana among the doubtful States. Let no woman of Montana stand in doubt. Her course is plain. Let her use her whole power to defeat the party that blocks the way to freedom for women. Let her strike this blow for justice now—she has nothing to lose and the gratitude of all women to gain. Use your power, use every vote, against Woodrow Wilson and the national Democratic candidates."

Mrs. C. S. Haire, State chairman, in response said: "The Montana Woman's Party sympathizes with you in your fight for freedom and pledges you its support. We will unitedly vote on November 7 against President Wilson and the Democratic candidates for Congress. The Democratic Party has bitterly opposed national freedom for women during its whole term of power. We western women will not support a party that has done this injustice to women. We dedicate ourselves to a free womanhood, and wish you Godspeed in your work."

Mrs. Blatch's message to Nevada was: "The women of the East have known no State lines. Where the battle for liberty was being waged, there they were found. When you called for help they were at your side. Use now the power they helped you win, to strike down the party which has refused to give the women of America enfranchisement. Help lift up all your countrywomen to your plane of full citizenship. With your full political might strike down our enemies, Woodrow Wilson and the national candidates of the Democratic Party."

Miss Anne Martin, national chairman of the Woman's Party, said in reply, "Nevada women voters are determined to establish political liberty for women throughout the Nation. The record of the Democratic Party shows that this party has fought against justice to women. Therefore Nevada women will refuse their first vote to President Wilson and the national Democratic candidates, believing such a vote would be against women."

To Utah this message was given: "Women of Utah, when you were politically weak, two great pioneers, Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Susan B. Anthony, came to you from the East, preaching their evangel of freedom for women. They helped to set you free. Now, you are strong, stand bravely shoulder to shoulder with other voting women, and in your might help to emancipate all the women of the Nation. Serve your fellow women as the two pioneers served you. Strike down the enemy of enfranchisement for the women of America."

Mrs. L. M. Garnett, second district chairman, replying said: "The women of Utah promise loyalty and support to the unenfranchised women. The Woman's Party has made a wonderful compaign and has a strong organization which will continue to work for women's political freedom. Many prominent and brilliant women are putting aside political parties and standing by the Woman's Party. Everything looks bright and promising."

Next came Arizona. Mrs. Blatch's final word of appeal to that State was: "Women of Arizona, stand clear of partisan politics. Rise above all considerations of party. Place before all other questions that of achieving self-government for all citizens. With half the people politically enslaved, to establish a Government based on the consent of the governed becomes a matter of supreme moment. Back up with your votes the demand that a democratic form of government shall prevail throughout the Nation, that there shall be a true Republic, self-government for all, under our national flag. Stand against the Democratic Party in this supreme hour, and you liberate the women of a Nation."

Mrs. C. E. Hull, chairman of the Maricopa County branch of the Woman's Party, responded as follows: "We believe that out here in the West, Arizona men as well as Arizona women are standing by the disfranchised women of the Nation. The Woman's Party has awakened Arizona. We have adopted a new conscience here in the West. We believe that the vote of Arizona day after to-morrow will astonish the country. It will be a rebuke to the President who does not believe in the freedom of the women of America. Congratulations to the women of Illinois who are working with us."

To Cheyenne, Wyo., next on the wire, Mrs. Blatch sent this word: "When Wyoming sent its first constitution to Congress for approval it was urged to leave out woman suffrage. Wyoming men instantly sent reply: 'We will stay out of the Union of States with our women rather than go into the Union without them.' Women of Wyoming, be as great now as your men were then. Make a stand for the political liberty of the women of America. Annihilate the party that refuses to give women protection under the United States Constitution."

Mrs. Robert Morton, chairman of the Woman's Party, replied: "The women of Wyoming have responded loyally to the call of America's unenfranchised women. We will be with you on Tuesday and will not return to the White House the chief opponent of political freedom for women."

The next ring of the telephone brought Denver, Colo., on the line. Mrs. Blatch's message was: "Oh, women of Colorado, fate has placed in your hands a decision momentous for us, for you, for our country. Self-government for half the people of the Nation is in the balance. A step forward in democracy—democracy, the need of the hour, the world need, a world issue—is bound up with your foresight, with your devotion. Stand true in this hour of clash of arms to the spirit of freedom, true to America's faith in self-government for the people. So vote as to establish throughout our land a republican form of government for all women. Our Revolutionary fathers freed men; let the women of Colorado free their fellow women. Strike the blow and liberty is ours."

Mrs. Bertha Fowler, State chairman, replied: "Colorado women, regardless of party, are putting forth every effort to defeat President Wilson because of his hostility to the Federal amendment enfranchising women."

Then came Kansas, the State of which Mrs. Blatch herself is now a voting citizen. She said: "Women of Kansas, women of Topeka, you have an historic event to celebrate on November 7. Burnt into your memory is the occasion when you sent a deputation to President Wilson during his stay last winter at Topeka, to urge upon him the need of national justice to women. You will never forget the reception he accorded your representatives. Awaiting his pleasure, they stood one hour in a driving snowstorm. That is the way he and his party treat all women nationally. Women must wait outside the Federal Constitution. Build a monument to that incident. Snow Woodrow Wilson under on election day."

Miss Katharine A. Morey, of Kansas, replied for the State: "Women of the East, have courage. The women of Kansas have heard your call and will stand by you. We will not return to power the man who has blocked the political freedom of American women."

Last came California. This was the last appeal of the Woman's Party to the voting women of the suffrage States. "Wishing to help women to be free," Mrs. Blatch said, "knowing that Woodrow Wilson is the chief block to self-government for American women, there are those who try to balance against that the plea 'he has kept us out of war.' Never was a more undemocratic claim made. Imagine 100,000,000 people depending upon the kindly offices of one man to be kept out of war! How does that differ from Russia, with its Czar to keep that nation in or out of war?

"No, we are standing for the voice of the people to determine the momentous question, Shall it be peace or shall it be war? Had the people of Europe, the men and the women, been able to speak their desire in 1914 there would have been no war. The world bleeds to-day because of one-man power. The world needs a democracy, and no greater assurance of peace could be given than to include women in the democracy.

"Help, women of California, to answer this need. Stand against the party that opposes nation-wide self-government for women. Win for our country a government of the people, for the people, by the people. Punish, women of California, the party which stands against such a government. Vote solidly against Woodrow Wilson and the national candidates of the Democratic Party."

Mrs. Ida Finney Mackrille, State chairman, responded: "The women of California have responded magnificently to the appeal of the disenfranchised eastern women. Thousands of women have put suffrage first in this election and have done all in their power to defeat Wilson and the Democratic Party in our State as a protest against delayed justice to women. The votes of women are going to cause Wilson's defeat in California next Tuesday."

Mr. Speaker, again I desire to call the attention of my colleagues in this House to the seriousness of amending the organic law of the Republic. It should not be amended except the necessity to amend for the public welfare is made plainly to appear, and I respectfully submit that no such necessity is apparent. I may be old-fashioned and out of date, but I believe in the home woman. I believe in the American mother who presides in queenly dignity over an American home.

She needs no ballot for her protection. God bless her; she is and always will be protected by the deep and undying love of the American man. I want her to forever occupy the commanding place which she fills in our economic affairs, respected, honored, and revered. I would not drag her from the lofty pedestal on which she has been placed by the undying love of the American man—the pedestal of sisterhood, wifehood, and motherhood—to the low level of ward politics. God forbid.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to my distinguished friend from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH].

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Speaker, some surprise and, I might add, great gratification was expressed by my distinguished friend, the author of this resolution, when this morning I asked him for a few minutes' time in which to speak in favor of it. Some surprise has been also manifested by others of my friends when I told them that I intended to support it. If I am about to execute a volte-face, at least it will not be comparable to that executed by a most distinguished American now residing abroad, who sent us a cable on the subject yesterday. [Laughter.] It is true that upon the occasion when this resolution was last before the House I voted against it, but my vote was predicated upon a doubt as to the opportuneness of the time rather than upon the essential justice of the question. I have for a long time believed that suffrage was inevitable, that it would come soon, and that it ought to come. I am now convinced that the time has arrived when we ought to give suffrage to the women of the country.

Heretofore I have felt it my duty to follow the vote last cast by the citizens of my constituency. I believe, however, that since then the situation has changed. Certainly it has changed to the extent that in my State my party has gone on record in its platform in favor of suffrage. It is beyond argument that my party as a national party is in favor of suffrage, that it is now one of its main tenets. This is no longer a local question. It is a national question. I think the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] was right when he said it ought not to be a political question, but the fact remains that our action to-day, to be followed, I am confident, very shortly by another body, will make it indisputably evident to the country that suffrage has been granted to women, and could only have been granted, through the medium of the Republican Party. [Applause.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I yield the remainder of my time to the distinguished Republican leader, the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL].

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I bring the balm of consolation to the agonized soul of the gentleman from Florida [Mr. CLARK]. I have been voting, lo! these many years, and I have never voted except where women voted. I come from a Commonwealth whose women have been exercising the elective franchise for a little more than half a century, and there are certainly no more patriotic, law-abiding, progressive folks on earth than those of the Commonwealth that first granted full suffrage to women. [Applause.] I think it is a splendid omen that this session of Congress, in which we hope to write upon the statute books a progressive, constructive legislative program, should begin with the prompt adoption of this great measure of franchise reform.

I want to congratulate the good women who fought the good fight all these years, and who now see the dawn of the day of final victory. Before this session closes, in my opinion, this resolution will be upon the statute books of the Nation. The resolution is in keeping with the spirit of the times; it is in keeping with the onward march of mankind toward better things. We are proposing to invite the better half of mankind into participation in the settlement of the multiplied and multiplying questions of government, and we shall have better laws, better administration, and a better world when that is accomplished. [Applause.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution——

Mr. CLARK of Florida. Will the gentleman yield for just a moment, so that I may ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the RECORD?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Florida asks unanimous consent to revise and extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I again renew my request, and I hope gentlemen will not object that all Members have leave to extend their remarks for five legislative days on this subject.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that all gentlemen have the right to print their remarks for five legislative days on this subject. Is there objection?

Mr. RAGSDALE. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Florida asks unanimous consent——

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask, coupled with that, that I have the same right to extend my remarks.

Mr. MANN. I shall not object to individual requests as Members make them.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Florida and the gentleman from Texas ask unanimous consent to extend their remarks on this subject. Is there objection?

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, is it on the same subject—woman suffrage?

Mr. FERRIS. Yes.

Mr. GARD, Mr. RANDALL of California, Mr. SMALL, Mr. RUBEY, Mr. AYRES, Mr. WELTY, Mr. OLIVER, Mr. LANKFORD, Mr. BARKLEY, Mr. LAGUARDIA, Mr. LANGLEY, and others asked unanimous consent to extend their remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. RAGSDALE. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. BLANTON. I would like to serve notice there will be no more extension of remarks by the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. RAGSDALE].

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question——

Mr. RAGSDALE. The gentleman can make it in writing or verbally.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is out of order.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution and the two pending amendments to final passage.

The question was taken, and the previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Florida [Mr. CLARK], which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend House joint resolution No. 1 by adding thereto as an additional paragraph the following language, viz:

"This amendment shall not be valid unless the same shall be ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States within seven years after the adoption of this resolution by both Houses of the Congress."

The SPEAKER. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

The question was taken, and the Chair announced the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. CLARK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Florida demands the yeas and nays. Thirty-seven gentlemen have arisen, not a sufficient number, and the yeas and nays are refused.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SAUNDERS].

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I would like to have the amendment reported.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the amendment will be again reported.

There was no objection.

The amendment was read, as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia: Page 1, line 6, after the word "by," strike out "the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States" and insert, in lieu thereof, the following: "popular vote in three-fourths of the several States."

The SPEAKER. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

The question was taken and the Speaker announced the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia demands the yeas and nays. Fifty-two gentlemen have arisen; not a sufficient number.

Mr. SAUNDERS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I would like to have the other side.

The SPEAKER. The other side is called for. Two hundred and forty-four Members are opposed; 52 is not a sufficient number, and the yeas and nays are refused.

So the amendment was rejected.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read the third time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the adoption of the joint resolution.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois demands the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The yeas and nays were taken; and there were—yeas 304, nays 90, answered "present" 1, not voting 33, as follows:

YEAS—304.

So, two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the resolution was agreed to.

The Clerk announced the following pairs.

On this vote:

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania and Mr. SULLIVAN (for) with Mr. GREENE of Vermont (against).

Mr. SCULLY and Mr. SNELL (for) with Mr. RAMSEY (against).

Until further notice:

Mr. DOOLING with Mr. MCPHERSON.

Mr. GALLIVAN with Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, my colleague, Mr. MCPHERSON, is unavoidably absent to-day. If he were here, he would vote in favor of this resolution.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

On motion of Mr. MANN, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was agreed to was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. CLARK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks on this bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Florida asks unanimous consent to revise and extend his remarks on this bill. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. RAKER. I desire to have a telegram put in the RECORD.

Mr. WALSH. I object, Mr. Speaker, to the reading of a telegram.

Mr. RAKER. See what it is first.

Mr. WALSH. It does not make any difference what it is.

Mr. RAKER. Oh, yes; it makes lots of difference.

Mr. LITTLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my colleague, Mr. WHITE of Kansas, be allowed to extend his remarks on this bill.

Mr. PHELAN. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. LITTLE] asks unanimous consent that his colleague, Mr. WHITE, be allowed to extend his remarks on this bill. Is there objection?

Mr. BLANTON. Reserving the right to object, I make the same request to extend my remarks on this bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] makes the same request.

Mr. RAGSDALE. I object.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 3 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until Thursday, May 22, 1919, at 12 o'clock noon.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, May 22, 1919.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Father Almighty, we come to Thee with gratitude in our hearts and praise upon our lips for the provisions Thou hast made for Thy children in this transitory life; for the preparations Thou hast made for them in the life eternal; the intellectual, moral, and spiritual attainments which are ours for the struggle and which bind us together in the home, society, State, and religion.

Give us the will, the courage, the strength, the disposition to obey Thy mandates now and always. In the spirit of the Master. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

LEAVE TO EXTEND REMARKS.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members shall have leave to extend their remarks in the RECORD on the woman suffrage resolution which was passed yesterday for five legislative days, not including telegrams or other extraneous matters not originally prepared by the Members.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that all Members may have the right to extend their remarks in the RECORD for five legislative days on the woman suffrage resolution which was passed yesterday, without including extraneous matter. Is there objection?

Mr. BLANTON. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, yesterday in the House, for the first time in the last two years that I know of, even a member of the committee having in charge the proposed legislation was prevented from revising his remarks after he had spoken on the floor of this House. I had spoken on the floor of the House and I was prevented from revising my remarks after I had asked for the permission twice. I think it is a little hard for us not to be allowed to extend our remarks and that it is asking a great deal now to let in everybody else, even those who objected.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. BLANTON. I will not object.

The SPEAKER. The Chair hears none, and the request is granted.

SWEARING IN A MEMBER.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. DUPRÉ] is here and wants to be sworn in.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Louisiana is present. Are there any other Members present who have not been sworn in? If not, the gentleman from Louisiana will present himself to receive the oath.

Mr. DUPRÉ appeared before the bar of the House and took the oath of office.

COLUMBIA INSTITUTION FOR THE DEAF.

The SPEAKER. The Chair submits to the House, through the Clerk, the following appointments.

The Clerk read as follows:

Under the law providing for the appointment, by the Speaker, of two Members of the House of Representatives on the board of directors for the Columbia Institution for the Deaf, the Chair announces the following appointments: Mr. PORTER, of Pennsylvania, and Mr. RAKER, of California.

INVITATIONS.

The SPEAKER. The Chair wishes to call the attention of the House to two invitations which he was requested to convey to the House, one from the Secretary of the Interior, saying that there is an exposition of the activities of that department now open at Nineteenth and F Streets, to which he extends a cordial invitation to all Members of Congress from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. on June 1, and the Secretary of the Navy says that at present there is at the foot of O Street dock a German submarine, U-17, which is one of the largest mine-laying submarines remaining after the armistice, and that the lieutenant in charge will be glad to tender any courtesies he can to those desiring to visit it.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for two minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wyoming asks unanimous consent to proceed for two minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, we are beginning the new session, and we are, all of us, anxious to expedite business and have affairs move along smoothly and avoid confusion. Members have occasion from time to time to ask unanimous consent for the consideration of various matters. Mr. Speaker, may I suggest that if Members who expect to ask unanimous consent, other than for corrections of the RECORD and extension of remarks and matters of that kind, if the request relates to matters that are of some importance, I should appreciate it very greatly personally if they would be good enough, if it is convenient for them to do so, to let me know in advance of their intention to make such a request. I am of the opinion that it is a courtesy due to the minority leader to notify him in the same way when a request of that sort is to be made.

I am sure I do not make this request with any thought of being captious or of preventing Members from securing the consideration of those matters that they desire to have considered, but rather with a view of aiding and assisting, and I am sure that is the view of the minority leader. Many Members have a hesitancy about objecting to unanimous-consent requests, and yet they expect some one who is in a position of responsibility to be informed as to such requests. I think Members will be assisted in having their requests given favorable consideration and business will be expedited if we follow the practices I have suggested.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Wyoming has expired.

COMMITTEE ON WATER POWER.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I submit a privileged report from the Committee on Rules.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas submits a privileged report, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Committee on Rules, to which was referred House resolution 32, submit a privileged report on said resolution, with the recommendation that the resolution be agreed to:

"House resolution 32.

"Resolved, That the Speaker of the House be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to appoint a special committee of 18 members to whom all bills and resolutions heretofore or hereafter introduced during the Sixty-sixth Congress pertaining to the development or utilization of water power shall be referred, notwithstanding any general rule of the House to the contrary."

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, this resolution appointing this committee is made necessary because a similar committee, provided for in a resolution passed in the Sixty-fifth Congress, did not complete its work. The bill reported by that committee passed the House and passed the Senate, but failed in conference, and it is the purpose——

Mr. SIMS. If the gentleman will allow me, it did not fail in conference.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. It did not fail in conference, but the conference report failed in the Senate.

Mr. GARRETT. On account of the filibuster over there.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. The gentleman is correct. The House adopted the conference report, but the conference report failed in the Senate. Those interested in the legislation are anxious to have this committee appointed, so that the work may be undertaken at the earliest date possible.

Mr. GARNER. Does this resolution provide for the same arrangement as the former one?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. The resolution is very general in its terms and provides for the reference to that committee of bills pertaining to this subject.

Mr. FLOOD. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Certainly.

Mr. FLOOD. Is this the same resolution that was adopted in the last Congress?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. This resolution makes no reference in any way to boundary waters. The resolution is general in terms, and sends to this committee such bills as may be referred to it by the Speaker or the Speaker's clerk or by the action of the House.

Mr. FLOOD. The question I asked was if it was the same resolution that was adopted in the last Congress for the creation of the water-power committee.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Oh, yes.

Mr. GARRETT. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. CAMPBEL of Kansas. Certainly.

Mr. GARRETT. The gentleman recalls, of course, that in the last Congress this committee was made up from the membership of three committees; and it was our understanding, I think, in the Committee on Rules that that same practice would prevail this time, without any reference to resolutions that may have been adopted by the steering committees affecting the right of any Member to serve on more than one committee. In other words, this is to be a special committee, and is to be made up from the membership of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, the Committee on the Public Lands, and the Committee on Agriculture.

Mr. DEMPSEY. That is the understanding.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. The gentleman from Tennessee has called my attention and the attention of the House to the fact that this committee provided for in this resolution has been made up in its membership heretofore of members of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, the Committee on the Public Lands, and the Committee on Agriculture, and that the committee so created does not infringe upon the rule which prohibits Members from serving on certain other committees. The gentleman is correct in that statement.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I was about to ask a question similar to the one propounded by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GARRETT]; but that question having been answered, I should like to inquire a little further. As I understand it, one of the purposes, and perhaps the most important purpose, of having this committee appointed is to expedite water-power legislation.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. That is the purpose of the creation of this committee at this time.

Mr. WALSH. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. What language in the resolution confines the selection of this committee to the membership of the three committees which have been named?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. No language in the resolution, and nothing except the understanding that was had in the former Congress, and probably an understanding with the Speaker and the members of the committees concerned in this legislation.

Mr. WALSH. An understanding between the Speaker and the Members who are to be members of this special committee?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. No understanding except that it was arranged when the committee was created formerly that it should be composed of members of the Committees on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, the Public Lands, and Agriculture, and I assume that the same procedure will be followed in the appointment of the committee in this Congress.

Mr. MONDELL. It will.

Mr. WALSH. Will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. What necessity is there for appointing another special committee? Why can not this subject be handled as it has been handled heretofore, by the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. It has not been handled heretofore by the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Mr. WALSH. The greater part of the legislation has.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Owing to the contention concerning the question it was thought that a more satisfactory result would follow if the committee should be selected from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, the Committee on the Public Lands, and the Committee on Agriculture, and if such a committee were to give their united action to the preparation of such legislation.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Did the special committee on water power in the last Congress have jurisdiction of the water power at Niagara Falls or was that left to the Committee on Foreign Affairs?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. There was no exclusion made. That was a matter that was settled here on the floor.

Mr. MANN. Was it settled on the floor or not?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Did not the Committee on Foreign Affairs have jurisdiction of the bill relating to the Niagara Falls water power?

Mr. DEMPSEY. Will the gentleman yield to me to allow me to answer that question?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. DEMPSEY. The way the question arose was this——

Mr. MANN. The gentleman can answer the question very easily by saying whether they did or not.

Mr. DEMPSEY. I think a word would not answer the question. If the gentleman will permit me, I will answer in this way: The committee reported a bill including all boundary streams, and the Committee on Foreign Affairs came in with an amendment to exclude the boundary streams. That was debated three days in the House, and at the end of that three days' debate the amendment proposed by the Foreign Affairs Committee failed in the House by a substantial majority.

Mr. MANN. I am asking for information. I do not know. Did the Committee on Foreign Affairs have jurisdiction of bills relating to the Niagara Falls water-power bill?

Mr. FLOOD. It did.

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Speaker, are we proceeding under the one hour allowed the gentleman from Kansas, or how are we proceeding? We can not hear a thing over here. I should like to know if this comes out of the hour.

The SPEAKER. Certainly; the gentleman from Kansas has one hour.

Mr. SEARS. Then it comes out of his time.

The SPEAKER. Yes.

Mr. DEMPSEY. The Committee on Foreign Affairs was allowed to retain jurisdiction of the Niagara Falls bill. Of course, the Committee on Foreign Affairs would not obtain jurisdiction over such bills under this resolution.

Mr. FLOOD. I want to say that I think the statement made by the gentleman from New York is not exactly correct. When this rule was brought in in the last Congress it was intended not to take from the Foreign Affairs Committee jurisdiction over boundary waters, and particularly the Niagara Falls water-power bill.

Mr. DEMPSEY. I have so stated.

Mr. FLOOD. The water power committee so treated it. Gentlemen of that committee stated on the floor of the House that they had no hearings in reference to the Niagara Falls situation and did not intend to take any jurisdiction of it. When there was a small attendance in the House a resolution was offered by a member of the Commitee on Foreign Affairs to make this clear, which was voted down. That was the whole situation, and it was not the intention of the House to take from the Foreign Affairs Committee the control of the Niagara Falls water power. As I said, the resolution was defeated one day when there was a small attendance.

Mr. DEMPSEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I will yield to the gentleman.

Mr. DEMPSEY. The gentleman from Virginia is mistaken in stating this matter came before the House "one day" when there was a small attendance. The matter was debated three separate days and the Foreign Affairs Committee was in attendance, and practically every member of that committee was heard on the question.

Mr. FLOOD. I think the gentleman from New York is mistaken. I was not present any one of the days he mentions, and I was chairman of the committee. I understood that the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] offered a resolution, which he himself debated, and it was not debated by anybody else in favor of the resolution. I was away on account of sickness in my family, but before I left I conferred with the chairman of the Water Power Committee and was assured that Niagara Falls was not embraced in the bill.

Mr. DEMPSEY. The gentleman from Virginia is in error. I was here each of the three days, and while I now recollect that the gentleman from Virginia, the chairman, was not here, practically all the other members of the Foreign Affairs Committee were heard. The committee could not see any reason why boundary waters should not be considered the same as other water powers throughout the Nation. They could not see why they ought not to be put on a parity and have no preferential treatment; they could see no distinction between the two; and after a very full and complete debate on the question, after every phase of it had been considered elaborately and deliberately by the House, after three days of enlightening debate the resolution was voted down.

Mr. FLOOD. How many voted on the proposition?

Mr. DEMPSEY. Sixty-eight Members, a good membership in Committee of the Whole, much larger than you ordinarily have.

Mr. FLOOD. I thought it was something like that. Not one-sixth of the House. There is a very great distinction between a developed water power like Niagara Falls and an undeveloped water power. The Niagara Falls water power, worth millions and millions of dollars, can not be treated as an undeveloped water power could.

Mr. SMALL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I will yield to the gentleman.

Mr. SMALL. This resolution as reported by the Committee on Rules does not limit the committee to members of any standing committees of the House?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. As the resolution reads it does not, but the assumption is that the committee would be made up as it was made up before.

Mr. SMALL. And it is on that assumption that I wish the gentleman to yield to me. Some gentleman referred to three committees—Agriculture, Public Lands, and Interstate and Foreign Commerce. Only one of these committees has anything to do with water powers, and that is the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. It does not include the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and yet, as a matter of fact, 12 years ago the Committee on Rivers and Harbors was the only committee that assumed jurisdiction of water power in the House; and to-day the Committee on Rivers and Harbors has jurisdiction of all water powers upon navigable rivers which affect navigation. So that in the proscription of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, so that no member of that committee shall be appointed on the special committee, is unwarranted. I think the resolution of the committee is in proper form. I do not think the Speaker ought to be bound by any suggestion, because if a suggestion is to be made of any committee I submit that the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, along with the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce and the Committee on Foreign Affairs, are more entitled to representation on that special committee than the Committee on Agriculture and the Committee on the Public Lands.

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Speaker, with the permission of the gentleman from Kansas, I want to make a suggestion along the line of the gentleman from North Carolina. The Committee on Foreign Affairs has had jurisdiction of boundary waters, especially the Niagara Falls water power, on which it has worked for years. The Committee on Agriculture and other committees named, with the exception of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, have no jurisdiction of water power. I think that the suggestion of the gentleman from North Carolina that the matter ought to be left open is a wise one, and that the Speaker should put on this committee the representatives from the Committees on Rivers and Harbors and Foreign Affairs, for the water-power committee, and not the Committee on Foreign Affairs, will have jurisdiction of that power under the resolution.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, it is left open as the resolution reads. If there are no other questions, I ask for a vote on the resolution.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

The question was taken, and the resolution was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas, a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the resolution was agreed to was laid on the table.

HOSPITAL FACILITIES IN CHICAGO.

Mr. MASON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for three minutes upon the question of the hospital situation for soldiers in the city of Chicago.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to address the House for three minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MASON. Mr. Speaker, the last Congress passed a bill to increase the hospital facilities and to arrange for a very large hospital that is already completed in the city of Chicago. And after a long investigation by the legislative branch of the Government, the act was passed by the Congress and was signed by the President. It has been delayed for some reason in the Treasury Department, I suppose, on account of the engagements of the Secretary of the Treasury in the last Liberty loan. But the situation has increased to such an alarming extent that all the hospitals in the city of Chicago are very crowded, and this hospital which the Government arranged to purchase is ready for occupancy, or can be made so in 60 days, as I am informed, and can be furnished inside of 30 days. It has had the approval of everyone up to the present time. I ask to insert as a part of my remarks a telegram from the commissioner of health of the city of Chicago showing that every hospital is full to overflowing, and I desire to state to my colleagues that I have been endeavoring to get many soldiers transferred into the Chicago hospital who are in the hospitals of Pennsylvania, New York, and New Jersey, and other States, and I believe it is in the interest of the health of the soldiers if they could be transferred when they are able to travel to rooms in a hospital where they can occasionally meet their own people.

I have had called to my attention many instances of operations that have been performed in these hospitals, and they are now sending a good many to Camp Grant. The Chicago mothers and wives have to go to Camp Grant, and it costs $10 to go there and back at the present rate. I am filing a resolution, which I shall ask to have referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, which provides that the Secretary of War be allowed to furnish tents or such temporary relief as may be necessary until such time as the Secretary of the Treasury may find time to sign the necessary papers to furnish and complete the hospital which has already been ordered to be purchased by the Government. I ask that the telegram from Dr. Robertson, commissioner of health, be inserted as a part of my remarks, and shall not now take up the time of the House to read it in full.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired. The gentleman asks unanimous consent to insert a telegram as a part of his remarks. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The telegram referred to is as follows:

CHICAGO, ILL., May 20, 1919.

Hon. WILLIAM E. MASON,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.:

The situation in regard to hospital beds in the city of Chicago is precarious. The total bed capacity of the city of Chicago is approximately 10,000. At the present time there are over 12,000 patients, making it impossible for me to enforce the city ordinances. In regard to bed space, the Municipal Tuberculosis Sanitarium is crowded to capacity and there is a waiting list of several hundred. The sanitarium has been caring for soldiers and relatives of soldiers, taking all the cases referred to us by the Red Cross. We have reached the limit of our endurance. Should an epidemic occur which would make hospital beds necessary the situation would be appalling. I wish you would hurry arrangements for marine hospital beds, so as to take this burden from the city of Chicago and provide the proper space for patients, so that I may be able to maintain proper sanitary control of the hospitals.

JOHN DILL ROBERTSON,
Commissioner of Health.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for five minutes upon the question of the food supply of the country at the present time.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts asks unanimous consent to address the House for five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, I think that everyone will agree that the question of the cost of living is the most important subject now before the American people. Yesterday the House by an overwhelming vote decreed that women should have the right to vote. I think, as important as that subject is to the women of America, that if an expression of opinion was asked of them they would like to know from their Representatives in the Congress of the United States how the cost of living could be reduced. It is the great vital question before the American people to-day. All other subjects dwarf by comparison. When they find a situation such as now exists, with hundreds of millions of pounds of canned meats and vegetables—to be specific 100,000,000 cans of beef and more than 50,000,000 pounds of bacon—in the surplus food stocks of the Army, some of which when about to be put upon the market three or four weeks ago were withdrawn because it would occasion a glut of food products, while they are told at the same time that the constantly increasing price of beef is due to the fact that there is a deficiency of food products, they wish to know how their Representatives in Congress reconcile these statements. They wish to know whether governmental agencies are being used by the Beef Trust to defraud the people of the United States. This matter is being discussed in every home, and necessarily so, because people wonder whether our Government, as far as food products are concerned, is a government of the people, by the people, and for the people, or of the food buccaneer, by the food buccaneer, and for the food buccaneer. [Applause.] The life and existence of every American home is involved in this question. The poultry situation is as bad as the beef situation. Only last Saturday, at home, I paid 7 cents a pound more to my butcher than I paid a year ago, and yet I find that the official figures show that the storage of poultry in the warehouses of the United States from May 1, 1918, to May 1, 1919, increased 248 per cent in broilers, 107 per cent in roasters, 279 per cent in fowls, and 290 per cent in miscellaneous poultry products. Yet the price of poultry is from 10 to 20 per cent higher than last spring and summer.

I have a statement here from a New York paper in regard to shipments abroad. Under date of Monday, May 19, in a telegram to the New York Times from The Hague, it is stated "that the prices are too high for Dutch consumption; that the stuff is put upon the market every day, but that the Dutch do not buy it; and that American pork and meats are held there to spoil for nothing." I am reading this statement from the New York Times of Monday, May 19. Yet the American people are called upon to pay impossible prices for beef products because tons of beef are carried across the water and such high prices asked that the Dutch will not buy, and the stuff spoils on the wharves. How long will a self-respecting people stand this outrage? [Applause.] The same kind of management, it seems to me, is shown in respect to the flour situation. According to the best judgment of everyone, the wheat crops of this year will amount to 1,200,000,000 bushels and possibly 1,300,000,000 bushels. The crop is so enormous as to tax the imagination of the average American, who has been accustomed to six or seven hundred million bushels as an average wheat crop. Nine hundred million bushels are at our doors about to be gathered, yet the price of flour is soaring.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts has expired.

Mr. RANDALL of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman's time be extended for five minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, the situation is such that flour, instead of decreasing from war prices, has increased about $2 a barrel. I went into the food administration at 42 Broadway, New York, two or three weeks ago. I saw by the papers that there was another increase of $2 a barrel to be put upon flour. Mr. Barnes was away, and I talked with Mr. Moore, who was in charge of the food administration. I asked him how it was that, with this tremendous wheat crop in sight, with the Texas crop coming in in less than five or six weeks, the people are being told in the daily newspapers that an increase of $2 a barrel was about to be made, making flour, which now costs $16.25 in Boston, $18.25 a barrel. I told him also it was a sad commentary on Mr. Barnes's handling of the wheat situation that England could provide for six months ahead, while our elevators are filled with wheat cornered by foreign governments, and leave our own people at the mercy of speculators.

"Well," he said, "Mr. Representative, there are various reasons for this situation." But his explanation did not get him anywhere in my opinion. I then called his attention to these facts, which I had in my possession at that time, which showed that the carry over of wheat from 1917 was 28,000,000 bushels, which added to last year's crop of 918,000,000 swells the grand total to 946,000,000 bushels. The estimated consumption last year—500,000,000 bushels—and 100,000,000 bushels more for seed leaves us an exportable surplus of 346,000,000 bushels. The Government report gives the exports of wheat up to April 1 at 197,000,000 bushels, leaving with us 149,000,000 bushels, making the amount of wheat available for export and consumption up to July 1, when the new crop will come to market, 172,000,000 bushels. The prospective wheat crop of 1918 will exceed 1,300,000,000 bushels, which, after deducting 750,000,000 for home consumption and seed, will leave us with an exportable surplus of 550,000,000 bushels, which is enough to supply all the wheat-buying countries in the world for a whole year without any supply coming from Argentina, Australia, or Canada. As a result of this line of talk, an order was issued that night that no more wheat be bought in this country for export purposes, and the price of flour was not increased as predicted in the press. During my investigation I found that as high as $2.86 a bushel was being paid for northern wheat. This does not seem to me to be fair. I say to the Members of the House, much as I sympathize with the farmers, when we fix a minimum of $2.26 a bushel for wheat it is as much as the American people and the people of the world should pay, and that a maximum price of $2.26 as well as a minimum price should be made, thus giving the farmer a square deal and giving a square deal to every workingman and every workingman's family and every citizen of the United States. I am frank to say, Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, that I have not the confidence that the administration seems to have in some of the men who are in charge of these food bureaus. We had an experience in Massachusetts in connection with the fish business, and we had some representatives of the Fish Trust in charge of the fish administration, with the result that people paid exorbitant prices for fish. Fish which was brought into the Boston market at a cost of a little better than a cent a pound was charged for at the rate of 6 or 8 cents a pound wholesale. People were robbed right and left all through the war because a man friendly to the fish interests held the job as fish administrator. Profiteers came over from New York, took over companies which they bought for a few hundred thousand dollars, and capitalized them into millions. Some of these men were tried and found guilty and are now awaiting sentence. The House of Representatives is the repository of the people's power in the United States, and it seems to me that the time has come when we should say to the administration authorities that the war being over it should rid itself of these so-called experts. [Applause.]

The President of the United States; Mr. Baker, the Secretary of War; and Mr. Daniels, the Secretary of the Navy, called upon every line of business for its experienced men in the time of stress to help the people of the country, and these men came in at a dollar a year, and in many cases their names were never off the salary rolls in their own corporations, and their interests, as you gentlemen know and I know, were with their own corporations in too many cases, rather than with the people. The fish industry is a striking example. Now, when the war is over we witness the spectacle of millions of pounds of surplus beef and vegetables being kept off the market because it would cause a glut, while prices are rising almost daily, because, according to the meat interests, there is a scarcity. It seems to me that these gentlemen have fooled the administration officials long enough and that they should get out, and if they will not get out they should be kicked out. God pity the American people when they can not find men big enough and honest enough to manage these departments in the interest of the people.

In conclusion I submit, for the information of the House, a statement of the amounts of canned beef and vegetables intended for shipment overseas, but which will not be used for that purpose. This tremendous amount of food products, if released at once for sale, would sensibly reduce the cost of living, and it should be done forthwith. Not to do it is to keep prices up for the benefit of various food combinations and is a crime against the people of this country, which they will not be slow to avenge when the right moment comes. [Loud applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman be permitted to proceed for five minutes more.

Mr. FITZGERALD. No; I thank the gentleman and the House for the courtesy, but I have said enough for the present.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the House stand in recess until 3 o'clock to receive a report from the Committee on Appropriations, and, pending action on this request, I ask that the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations be heard for a moment as to the necessity of this action.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wyoming asks that the gentleman from Iowa be permitted to address the House for two minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Speaker, the subcommittee on deficiencies has held hearings regarding some deficiencies which are very urgent. The deficiency bill which failed of enactment in the last Congress carried an item for additional clerk hire and similar administrative expenses in the Bureau of War Risk Insurance of $4,220,000. This matter has been largely taken care of by an allotment from the President's fund of something over $2,800,000. This allotment will permit the bureau to function for the present, but the question of family allowances is quite a different thing. On the 1st of May there were over 700,000 family allowance checks which had been issued and which could not be sent out because of the lack of funds. There is no appropriation out of which they can be paid. They amount to about $13,000,000. On the 1st of June there will be another lot, about 600,000 checks, amounting in the aggregate to about $11,505,000, that can not be sent out because there will not be funds with which to pay them. It is estimated that the allowance under the law for June will amount to $9,615,000, and all of these checks must be held up until Congress appropriates the money.

The same condition, only in a lesser degree, exists with regard to the pension of the soldiers of the Civil War. The Commissioner of Pensions will not be able to send out after the 4th of June about 25,000 vouchers that should be sent out during the fiscal year because of a lack of funds. There is a deficiency in that bureau of about $3,000,000, which must be appropriated before those checks can be mailed. The subcommittee has been conducting hearings on these estimates and will submit the matter to the full committee this afternoon, and the committee will be able, I think, to report out a bill making appropriations to cover these very urgent deficiencies, and we hope to call it up immediately, in order that it be passed, so that 700,000 families and dependents of our soldiers that are entitled to this allowance will be supplied with the funds that Congress intended that they should have.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. GOOD. I yield.

Mr. MANN. This appropriation would have to be passed in the form of a bill, I take it?

Mr. GOOD. Certainly.

Mr. MANN. And in order to become a law it must receive the signature of the President of the United States, or at least be presented to the President?

Mr. GOOD. Yes.

Mr. MANN. The President can not sign the bill unless it is either sent to him in Paris or he comes here to sign it. Does the gentleman know whether it is safe, if the bill is passed within a week or 10 days, to send it to the President, or whether it will be held until the President returns? Can anyone predict now how soon the President will return? I will say to the gentleman I have no objection to the consideration of the bill, but I see no possible way that this appropriation can be effective before the middle of June.

Mr. GOOD. The committee has not considered that at all. The committee has just considered the plain questions of the obligations resting upon this body and upon Congress. If some other department should fail to perform its duty, that is not the blame of Congress.

Mr. CARTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOOD. I yield.

Mr. CARTER. I wanted to ask the gentleman if I understood him correctly to say that the amounts carried in this bill were for allotments to soldiers' families?

Mr. GOOD. The families of soldiers, sailors, and marines.

Mr. CARTER. Those carried in this bill are the same as carried in the other bill?

Mr. GOOD. No; there was no family allowance carried in the former deficiency bill. There was a provision in the sundry civil bill which made the amount appropriated for that purpose immediately available.

Mr. CARTER. But did that sundry civil bill pass?

Mr. GOOD. No; that failed of passage.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Mr. LEHLBACH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to change the reference of a bill, H. R. 261, introduced by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. SIMS], which was referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. It deals with the retirement of civil-service employees of the Government. I ask that it be rereferred to the Committee on Reform in the Civil Service, and this request is in accordance with the wish of the introducer of the bill and is not opposed by the chairman of the committee to which it is asked to be referred, or any member of it, so far as I know.

Mr. GARRETT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LEHLBACH. I will.

Mr. GARRETT. I hope the gentleman will withhold that request until the committees have all been organized. Personally I have no objection to the matter. I presume it is all right, but I think the committee should be organized first.

Mr. LEHLBACH. Everybody on that committee is satisfied.

Mr. GARRETT. I will have to object at this time.

RECESS.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the House stand in recess until 3 o'clock p. m.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 12 o'clock and 50 minutes p. m.) the House stood in recess until 3 o'clock p. m.

AFTER RECESS.

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker.

URGENT DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Appropriations I present a privileged report.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report it by title.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 2329) making appropriations to supply urgent deficiencies in appropriations for the Bureau of War Risk Insurance and for the payment of pensions for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I reserve all points of order on the bill.

The SPEAKER. The bill will be referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union. The gentleman from Tennessee reserves all points of order on the bill.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman from Iowa if it is his intention to ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of this bill?

Mr. GOOD. No. By order of the Speaker, it is printed under the rules. I desire to give notice, however, that I will call it up to-morrow when the House meets.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. In view of the very deplorable condition outlined by the gentleman this morning in reference to the needs of dependent families and soldiers who will not get their checks until this bill is passed, I had hoped that the gentleman would ask for unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill. If he does, in view of the statement made, I do not anticipate any objection from this side of the Chamber. For my part, I do not think we ought to delay even 24 hours.

Mr. GOOD. I quite agree with the gentleman that there should be no delay whatever. But this bill carries $45,044,500, and I would rather that the House should have an opportunity to read the bill and see the report and to thoroughly consider it. However, if it is the desire of the House to take the matter up, I have no objection.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. It is a fact, I will say to the gentleman from Iowa, that every dollar of the appropriations in this bill, except a small amount for salaries, will be paid out, if paid out at all, to the dependent families of soldiers who served in the recent war and also of soldiers of the Civil War. I am sure there will be no amendments offered, for it is a simple question of appropriating the amount of money needed to pay them what is due under the law.

Mr. GOOD. I will say to the gentleman further that a couple of items were mentioned when the matter was under consideration that I was asked to look up and procure some further information about. I have not been able to get the additional information that was desired with regard to the purchase of furniture and what was included under that designation.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. If I may be permitted——

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Tennessee yield for an inquiry?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa has the floor. Does he yield?

Mr. GOOD. I yield.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. I want to make this remark, with the permission of the gentleman from Iowa. The gentleman from Illinois this morning, in a rather indirect way, sought to throw upon the President of the United States the responsibility for the failure of this bill to become a law within the next week or two on account of his necessary absence at the peace table in Paris. It should have been stated at that time that the House at the last session of Congress, with a Democratic majority on the Committee on Appropriations and in the House, passed a bill carrying an appropriation of $33,000,000 to take care of the sums due to the dependent families of soldiers. That bill went to another body at the other end of the Capitol, and an organized Republican filibuster there prevented its passage. Now, I think it is up to the gentleman from Iowa and to his party to remedy the wrong that has been done to the dependent families of soldiers and to pass this bill at the earliest possible moment. I repeat, I was very anxious for the gentleman from Iowa to ask unanimous consent to take it up now, rather than delay it.

Mr. GOOD. I will say to the gentleman that I presented this report not in any spirit of partisanship, and I hope it will not be considered in that way. Seven hundred thousand families are involved in this matter, and, while I have no sympathy with a legislative filibuster carried on by three or four men, I also have no sympathy with an Executive filibuster carried on by one man that has prevented the consideration of a matter of this kind so that the checks might have been sent out on the 1st day of May. [Applause on the Republican side.] I hope that the gentleman will not interject any partisan politics into the consideration of this very worthy measure.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. There is no disposition on the part of the gentleman——

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Iowa yield?

Mr. GOOD. Yes; I yield.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. There is no disposition on the part of the gentleman to interject any partisanship into this bill or any other appropriation that is necessary, and my remarks were only brought forth by the attempt this morning to inject partisanship into it by criticizing the President of the United States because he is necessarily absent in Paris attending to important business of the country. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. GOOD. I am sorry that the gentleman is so tender that he regarded the remarks of the gentleman from Illinois as partisan.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. And I will say further that if it had not been for the filibuster, to which I referred a moment ago, on the part of certain Republicans at the other end of the Capitol, the appropriation would have been made in March, when the President was here in Washington for the purpose of signing this and other bills. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOOD. I yield.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman referred to what might have been said this morning. It might also have been said this morning, and properly be said now, that if the President had observed the proper amenities of the situation he could have called Congress in session in April, and this bill could have become a law, whether he was in the United States or in Paris, before the 1st of May, without any difficulty at all, and the delay is wholly because the President neglected or refused for personal reasons to call Congress in session when it ought to have been called in session at an early date.

Mr. ASWELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. That does not relieve those conducting that filibuster of the responsibility of defeating this particular appropriation at the last session, when they knew that by doing so they would subject the dependent families of hundreds of thousands of soldiers to the conditions outlined in the gentleman's remarks this morning. [Applause.]

Mr. MANN. The filibuster which occurred before March 3 does not relieve the President of the United States of the responsibility for refusing to call Congress in session at an early date, because he was afraid somebody would discuss the league of nations. [Applause.]

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Iowa yield?

Mr. GOOD. I have yielded the floor.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The question was taken, and on a division there were—ayes 73, noes 77.

Accordingly the motion was rejected.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take this bill up for immediate consideration. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri asks unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill. Is there objection?

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I think never in the history of Congress has there been so much expedition in organization, at least on the part of the majority, and in bringing measures to the consideration of Congress as has occurred in the organization of this Congress.

When the Committee on Appropriations, acting immediately upon its organization, was prepared to report this bill, Members expected, of course, that the bill would be considered in the usual course—reported to-day and taken up to-morrow. Some Members, some on that side, expecting that the bill would be taken up in its regular course and dispatched in the usual way, are not here; but certainly we on this side are delighted that the gentlemen on the other side are anxious to help us in expediting business. Therefore we shall not object.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri for the immediate consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The bill is on the Union Calendar.

Mr. GOOD. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa asks unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the following sums are appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to supply urgent deficiencies in appropriations for the Bureau of War Risk Insurance and for the payment of pensions for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919, namely:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

BUREAU OF WAR RISK INSURANCE.

For salaries of officers and employees, $2,025,613.97; stationery and miscellaneous expenses, $100,000; furniture, equipment, and supplies, $195,000; printing and binding, $100,000; rental of quarters in the District of Columbia, $3,886.03; and traveling expenses, $5,000; in all, $2,429,500.

For the payment of military and naval family allowances as authorized by law, $39,615,000.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT.

BUREAU OF PENSIONS.

Army and Navy pensions: For invalids, widows, minor children, and dependent relatives, Army nurses, and all other pensioners who are now borne on the rolls, or who may hereafter be placed thereon, under the provisions of any and all acts of Congress, $3,000,000: Provided, That the appropriation aforesaid for Navy pensions shall be paid from the income of the Navy pension fund so far as the same shall be sufficient for that purpose: Provided further, That the amount expended under each of the above items shall be accounted for separately.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Speaker, the deficiency bill that passed the House and failed of enactment in the last Congress carried $7,220,000 for the Bureau of War Risk Insurance. Of that amount $4,220,000 was for salaries of officers and employees and incidental expenses and $3,000,000 was for compensation for the medical expenses, and so forth. Since then the work that was anticipated to be performed by the Bureau of War Risk Insurance in taking care of the sick and disabled of our soldiers has been taken over by the Bureau of Public Health. The additional work that was contemplated to be done out of this appropriation is provided for in that way, so the department is not asking anything for that service and has withdrawn the estimate, the Bureau of Public Health having sufficient funds to take care of it.

Of the amount that was then necessary for administrative expenses, the President advanced out of the national defense fund that was appropriated to him $2,868,000, leaving a balance of $2,429,000, which this deficiency bill carries.

The situation at present is that even if the deficiency bill had passed, not a single dollar would have been available on the 1st day of May, when it was necessary to send out 700,000 checks to that many dependent members of the families of soldiers, sailors, and marines. The amount necessary to disburse on the 1st day of May to the families of our soldiers, sailors, and marines amounted to $13,170,000. That amount is contained in 700,000 checks that have already been executed and are lying upon the desks down in the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, but which have not been mailed because of the lack of funds.

Mr. BRITTEN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. GOOD. Certainly.

Mr. BRITTEN. It occurs to me that beside the $13,170,000 that is being retained by the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, there is also being retained some $15,000,000 of salaries that have been allotted to the dependents of various soldiers and sailors, and those two amounts, the Government allowance and the allotment to the soldiers, appearing on one check, naturally holds in the Treasury $15,000,000 of salaries which ought now to be in the hands of these 700,000 dependents all over the United States. A total of thirty million should long since have been in general circulation in a much-needed direction.

Mr. GOOD. Then, too, on the 1st of June it will be necessary for this bureau to send out checks for a similar purpose for the allowances for the month of May. That amount is estimated at $11,505,000. For the month of June there will be disbursed for a like purpose an aggregate of $9,615,000, or a total of $34,290,000 that should be disbursed under the law before the 1st day of July.

In addition to that there are like payments, because of reviews, where the amounts have been allowed, aggregating $3,375,000, and then there are back payments on allowances that were due prior to May 1, 1919, of $1,950,000, making a total of $39,615,000 absolutely necessary for the Government to pay in the discharge of its obligations for allowances to the dependents of our soldiers, sailors, and marines before the 1st day of July, and there is nothing available at present out of which to pay it.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOOD. Yes.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Did I understand the gentleman to make the statement that if all the appropriation bills had passed at the last session there would have been no money available to pay these families?

Mr. GOOD. I did not say anything of the kind and nothing which could be construed in that way. What I did say was that if the deficiency bill had passed there would not be a dollar available for this purpose, and if the deficiency bill and all appropriation bills had passed as they passed the House, not a dollar would have been available to pay the $3,000,000 that will be due the 25,000 Civil War and Spanish-American War veterans.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. The gentleman knows that the sundry civil bill carried $33,000,000, which was made immediately available to take care of the allotments necessarily due dependent families of soldiers.

Mr. GOOD. Yes; $33,000,000 to take care of that; but how are you going to pay $39,000,000 out of $33,000,000?

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. That was all the Bureau of War Risk Insurance asked for, and that would have been more than sufficient to take care of the April and May checks and the greater part of the June checks.

Mr. GOOD. Yes; but what would the gentleman do if the bill had passed carrying $33,000,000 in the way of paying amounts due up to the month of December, 1919, when it takes $39,615,000 to pay the allowances up to the 1st of June? The sundry civil bill was intended to take care of deficiencies in this respect for the remainder of the fiscal year and for the entire fiscal year 1920.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. We have an extra session now to take care of that, but there would have been no such distress as the gentleman referred to this morning had the sundry civil bill passed at the last session, as it would have done if it had not been for the Republican filibuster.

Mr. GOOD. The gentleman assumes that there would have been an extra session of Congress before the first Monday of December if the appropriation bills had passed. Well, the gentleman may know about that; I do not. I know that the law does not provide for a regular session of Congress until the first Monday of December, but I do know that there would have been a deficiency of more than $6,000,000 in the estimates of the separation allowances due for the month of June, and there would have been nothing appropriated for separation allowances for the months of July, August, September, October, and November—in fact, for the rest of the fiscal year 1920.

Mr. ASWELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOOD. I will.

Mr. ASWELL. The gentleman was the ranking member of the Committee on Appropriations at the last session of Congress. Did he call that to the attention of the last Congress?

Mr. GOOD. I was not the ranking member and not a member of the sundry civil or deficiency subcommittee.

Mr. ASWELL. Did anybody call that shortage to the attention of Congress?

Mr. GOOD. I do not believe that the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, as it was then functioning and has since functioned, knew from one day to the other what any man in charge of it ought to have known in regard to the obligation resting on the Government to take care of the widows, wives, mothers and fathers, and dependents of our soldiers. There seems to have been no consideration of just what our obligations were, because no one had presented up to this time from that department an intelligent statement that could be relied upon as to what our obligations really were.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOOD. I will.

Mr. LONGWORTH. The head of that department has recently resigned?

Mr. GOOD. Yes.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Is the gentleman familiar with the circumstances connected with that resignation?

Mr. GOOD. Nothing further than what I have seen in the daily press.

Mr. LONGWORTH. It occurred to me that possibly the known shortage may have had something to do with the resignation.

Mr. BRITTEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOOD. I will yield to the gentleman.

Mr. BRITTEN. It is a well-known fact, however, that this deficiency was known for some two months, and might have been cared for before to-day if the desire to do so really existed.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Speaker, the smaller item, that of $2,429,500 carried for administrative expenses, for salary, and so forth, will make up the estimated deficiency in the administration of the office, and will provide for the purchase of such machinery and furniture as is necessary to make some changes that are under way in the matter of insurance policies and enable them to continue the employment of the present force in the administration of the department.

I think it also includes some additional force, but in considering the matter the committee gave notice to the department that by granting this appropriation it should not be construed that the committee or Congress indorsed the program of the department to increase the number of the employees; that that matter would be considered at a later date, but because of the urgency of the matter we felt that we could not segregate the items to determine the question.

Mr. FLOOD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOOD. I will.

Mr. FLOOD. Does the entire appropriation in this bill go to the War Risk Insurance Bureau?

Mr. GOOD. No. Forty-two million four hundred and forty-five thousand dollars go to the War Risk Insurance, and the sum of $3,000,000 goes to the Bureau of Pensions, under the Department of the Interior.

Now, Mr. Speaker, some objection has been made on this side of the House in regard to partisanship; some objection has been made that if there had been no filibuster at the other end of the Capitol the pensions of the old soldiers would have been paid. That is not the case. There was not contained in any appropriation bill that passed the House during the last session of Congress an item of $3,000,000, or for any sum, to pay the deficiency that exists in the Bureau of Pensions for the payment of pensions legally due to the Spanish-American soldiers and the soldiers of the late Civil War.

Twenty-five thousand of those soldiers would not receive pension checks which will be due them after the 4th of June and before the 30th of June, 1919, if all the bills which were enacted in the House at the last session of Congress had passed and become the law. This bill makes adequate provision, as we are advised by the Pension Department, to pay all the Nation's obligations to soldiers of the Civil War to June 30 of this year. Mr. Speaker, in a general way that explains the contents of this bill.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. GOOD. I will.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. An appropriation of $2,025,000, I think it is, is carried in this bill for clerk hire. Is that extra clerk hire?

Mr. GOOD. No; not extra clerk hire in the sense of their employment as extra clerks, but it is extra, of course, to the amount that has hitherto been appropriated and in addition to what the President allotted.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The President allotted how much out of his fund?

Mr. GOOD. Two million eight hundred and sixty-eight dollars out of his fund, and this carries about $2,429,000 for the same purposes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. It is reported they have 14,000 clerks in the War Risk Bureau. Is that about right?

Mr. GOOD. That is about correct.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Did the committee make inquiry in regard to the serviceability of those clerks or the necessity for them?

Mr. GOOD. This matter was brought to the attention of the committee only recently. We have had very brief hearings, and the matter of clerk hire, it is clearly understood with the bureau and the committee, will be taken up and gone into very thoroughly when the sundry civil bill will be under consideration in the near future, and we felt that we did not have time now to go into these little matters and did not consider them at all.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I will say to the gentleman there is a good deal of criticism throughout the country with regard to the clerks tumbling over themselves in the service of the War Risk Bureau. The last Congress, owing to the distress in which it found itself, evidently authorized the employment of a very large number of clerks, and the War Risk Bureau put them on; and it has been charged, generally charged by those who are employees and by some who have gone out of the service, that the work was duplicated, and that there was great waste in the matter of this expenditure. I wanted to know whether the committee had yet taken up the question to ascertain whether we can cut down that force, which seems to have stood in its own way and thus delays the payments to the soldiers and their dependents. I understand that was not taken up at this time?

Mr. GOOD. No; that was not taken up at all.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. May I ask this? The gentleman was asked a little while ago, I think, by the gentleman from Ohio, about the change in the head of the War Risk Bureau. Col. Lindsley, who was chief of that bureau and who was brought in to work a great reform, has been recently turned out by the Secretary of the Treasury, has he not?

Mr. GOOD. I think there is some controversy with regard to that. If I understand the correspondence correctly, Col. Lindsley claims that he resigned and the Secretary of the Treasury claims that he was summarily dismissed.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. But the Secretary of the Treasury was sufficiently belligerent to throw the colonel out. That is the fact, is it not?

Mr. GOOD. I do not know the facts in regard to it except as I have stated.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Is it not true, so long as the gentleman on the other side has raised this question, that Col. Lindsley stated publicly on his retirement, and in the letters which he wrote the Secretary of the Treasury and gave to the newspapers, that if things proceeded as they were going in the War Risk Bureau there would be complete chaos?

Mr. GOOD. Yes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. That is the substance of what the colonel stated?

Mr. GOOD. Yes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I hope the gentleman in due course will have his committee investigate the matter, because it might save the Government a great deal of expense on unnecessary clerk hire, and very much hasten the payment of the sums due to the soldiers and their dependents which seem to have been withheld.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOOD. I will.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Can the gentleman state when the President made this allotment of some $2,000,000 out of the special fund for that purpose?

Mr. GOOD. My understanding is that it was made shortly after the adjournment of Congress.

Mr. LONGWORTH. The reason I asked that is that I understood from the gentleman from Kentucky, Mr. Sherley, the former chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, that while he could not state accurately there was not probably more than about $4,000,000 left in that fund. If some $3,000,000 is now taken out, how is the President going to get back? [Laughter on the Republican side.]

Mr. GOOD. I will say to the gentleman we have not gone into that question. We find a great many intricate questions confronting us which we can not decide all at once.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MANN. If I understand the practice of the House, we are considering the bill in the House as in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and there is no general debate?

The SPEAKER. Yes; this is by unanimous consent.

Mr. MANN. I ask for the reading of the bill by sections.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the bill by sections for amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

For the payment of military and naval family allowances as authorized by law, $39,615,000.

Mr. DUPRÉ. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last word. I was unable to reach Washington until this morning. In view of my unavoidable absence during the consideration of the suffrage resolution, I desire to state that had I been present I would have voted against the resolution, as I did in a previous Congress. I am opposed, as are the people whom I represent, to Federal interference with suffrage, which is essentially and fundamentally a State matter.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I rise to inquire of the chairman of the committee whether he can give any detailed information with reference to this $195,000 which is appropriated for furniture?

The SPEAKER. The bill is now being read for amendment. Does the gentleman move an amendment?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I move to strike out the last word.

I was about to say, in this connection, I understand that some of the departments are now selling furniture.

Mr. GOOD. The bureau has a right to buy anything of this kind through the General Supply Committee. My understanding of this item is that most of this furniture is of a different class and not of the class the gentleman has in mind. The Secretary of the Treasury says that in order to provide equipment to be used in connection with the issuance of this convertible insurance it is estimated that $195,000 will be required, and that some of this equipment comes under the head of furniture. It is largely for special equipment. It is not of the ordinary kind. About $11,000 is for desks, chairs, and tables. The remainder is for addressograph equipment, filing equipment, safes, and labor-saving devices.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I will say to the gentleman it does indeed seem as if this furniture was clearly out of the ordinary in that it should cost that sum. I saw a statement in a paper the other day—one of the New York papers, I think it was—that for every dollar which the bureau has paid out it had cost 20 cents in the way of expense. If it buys furniture $200,000 at a time, I think this rate will be even higher.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. It strikes me that there is nothing surprising in the expenditure of $195,000 for furniture if that furniture is to be applied for the fitting up of a $4,000,000 building. The gentleman will recall that the War Risk Bureau was to go into a $4,000,000 building. There was some question as to the price, but it was war time. The President advanced the money for the building, which was subsequently to be refunded. At that time there was nothing to do but to pass any old bill the President wanted passed.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. The gentleman will remember that we did not even do that. There was never any authorization for taking over that building at all, but, on the contrary, Congress declined to authorize the purchase of a building, whereupon the money was expended, as I understand, out of the special fund granted to the President.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The President came to the rescue of his party and saved the situation at that time by lending $4,000,000 from his $100,000,000 fund, out of which he paid for his "necessary" trip abroad, quoting the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. As I stated, this New York paper contained the charge that there were about 20 cents paid out in the way of expenses for every dollar that went out to our soldiers. I do not know whether that is correct or not, but I do believe that there ought to be some inquiry as to the enormous expenses that are going on in connection with this bureau. Another statement was made that the Pension Bureau had succeeded in disbursing whatever funds it put out for the benefit of our soldiers at a comparatively trifling sum compared to the expenditures of the War Risk Bureau. I suppose the chairman of the committee is satisfied as to the necessity of $195,000 for special equipment, but it seems to me we have had no very satisfactory explanation in reference to it. Two hundred thousand dollars, or very nearly that, in equipment in connection with one of our departments seems to me to be an enormous sum.

Mr. BRITTEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I will.

Mr. BRITTEN. Is the gentleman suggesting that the Bureau of War Risk Insurance be merged in the Pension Bureau because of the economy established by the Pension Bureau in contrast with the other?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I am not making that suggestion, but I am suggesting that some investigation be made in reference to this, and I presume there will be before this session is over. It is time there was some check on this waste. The Republican Party will not be doing its duty unless measures are taken that will check it. It is notorious that notwithstanding the millions spent on this department it is not furnishing insurance cheaper than private concerns. We should turn the light on this department and force it to operate economically and efficiently.

The Clerk read as follows:

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT.

BUREAU OF PENSIONS.

Army and Navy pensions: For invalids, widows, minor children, and dependent relatives, Army nurses, and all other pensioners who are now borne on the rolls, or who may hereafter be placed thereon, under the provisions of any and all acts of Congress, $3,000,000: Provided, That the appropriation aforesaid for Navy pensions shall be paid from the income of the Navy pension fund so far as the same shall be sufficient for that purpose: Provided further, That the amount expended under each of the above items shall be accounted for separately.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word, in order to say that this proceeding in reporting this bill and asking the House to pass it is exceptional to the ordinary course of procedure. I was not in at the beginning of the consideration of the bill, but was in in time to vote not to adjourn.

It is a very plain matter. This bill, if it becomes a law, must be approved by the President. There is a large amount of certificates not being sent out from the War Risk Bureau, for the simple reason that there is no appropriation available to pay them. I apprehend that that was referred to by the gentleman in charge of the bill. I did not have the pleasure of hearing Mr. GOOD when he explained the bill.

Touching the paragraph just read, there are $3,000,000 necessary to pay the pensions of all the soldiers of all of the wars entitled under the law; that is, the Indian wars, the Spanish-American War, and the Civil War. It lacks a small amount of being sufficient to pay the pensions on the 4th day of June. There are about 25,000 soldiers in the soldiers' homes, including the Spanish War and others, that will be adjudicated between this and that time, as well as what are called the voucher claims—which gentlemen understand, and therefore I will not take time to explain—amounting, in round numbers, to about 25,000 people who can not be paid on the 4th day of June unless this bill is passed.

This will take care of the war-risk matter. This appropriation bill, as I understand it, will do that, and it will also take care of all other pensioners for all the wars who are entitled to care under that legislation.

Now, while this is hasty action, there was no quarrel about it in the consideration before the committee, because I think we all recognize, both Republicans and Democrats, that the bill should be passed, and passed promptly, not for any political capital—because there is no political capital in it that I know of—but for the dependents under the War Risk Bureau, and I suppose that takes in some black people and some white people and some Democrats and some Republicans and some independents. We do not want to be deluged with letters when these pensions are not paid for the want of money available. We have already got a pretty large correspondence. I think this should be avoided, and the people that need the money, when it has been adjudicated to them by the War Risk Bureau and in the Pension Bureau, ought to have it. I think the bill ought to pass to-day. I hope, if it does pass the House to-day, the Senate will take it up to-morrow and pass it by unanimous consent and let it take its flight—if not in an airplane, then in a fast-going steamer—to France, and I have no doubt the President will sign it. That is all I want to say about it. [Applause.]

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last two words.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from South Carolina moves to strike out the last two words.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, the situation as to this $3,000,000 for the Pension Bureau is simply this: By reason of the action of the last Congress the Pension Department was called upon to spend money which reduced its funds and brought about this deficit. Under the statement of the representatives of the Pension Bureau they have to-day sufficient funds to pay on June 4 every one of their regular pensions, or what they call their nonvoucher claims, which constitute 95 per cent of the amount paid out by the Pension Bureau. After June 4 they will be called upon to pay what they call voucher claims, which include, among other things, the first-payment pensions, and those pensions could not be paid until the 1st of July unless this bill is passed.

So far as the statement of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD] is concerned, and I will add the statement of my good friend from Illinois [Mr. CANNON], there never was any effort on this side of the House to inject partisanship into the consideration of any appropriation bill, or to indulge in partisan discussion during the consideration of an appropriation bill, while we were in control of the House. It was brought into the consideration of this bill this morning by that side of the House, and the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS] was simply answering statements made by the gentleman from Illinois. The fact is——

Mr. CANNON. The gentleman will pardon me. I was not present, and I do not know as to that; but if the gentleman will allow me, what difference does it make about this "leather and prunella"? We ought to appropriate this money.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. We are going to appropriate it, and we are going to appropriate it one day quicker than your side of the House expected to and would have done, if the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. BYRNS] and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] had not asked unanimous consent to take it up now.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Yes.

Mr. GOOD. I know the gentleman wants to be accurate. Can the gentleman tell us what bill failed to pass on the last day of the last session that made this bill necessary? What is the bill he refers to?

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. I did not catch the title of the pension bill when the chief of the Pension Office was before us, but I heard it stated across the table to the chairman of the committee that it was made necessary by reason of increased pensions provided by a bill in the last Congress.

Mr. GOOD. I want to call the gentleman's attention to the fact that he was practically reading from a restatement of a letter signed by Mr. Lane, referred to as House Document No. 5, and the only thing that was said was that on the hearing upon the pension appropriation bill for the year 1920 the opinion was then expressed that $220,000,000 would be sufficient, and there is no reference to any legislation that would have caused this deficiency or anything like it.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. There was such reference; I beg the gentleman's pardon. As the hearings are not yet printed, we can not settle the difference between us, but my recollection is very clear that that was the statement presented by the bureau chief when he was before us this morning. But I desire to answer the statement of the gentleman from Iowa that, regardless of the passage of the sundry civil bill or any other bill, this $3,000,000 could not have been taken care of. The fact is that if that filibuster had not taken place the appropriation bills would have been passed and the various departments of the Government would not have been forced to call upon the President's emergency fund to take care of the business of the Government for the last 60 days, and the President then could easily have furnished the $3,000,000 provided in this bill.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Yes.

Mr. GOOD. Will the gentleman refer to any particular item in the appropriation that caused this $3,000,000 deficit?

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. If the sundry civil bill and deficiency bill had been passed, the President would not have had to draw on his fund, and the President could have supplied $10,000,000 or $20,000,000 if there had been need, and there would have been no trouble in the financial affairs of this Government except for the filibuster on the part of Republican Senators. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. GOOD. Does the gentleman say that the President had at the close of the last session of Congress $10,000,000 or $20,000,000 in addition to what he needed for his mission abroad?

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. I do not know the exact amount the President had, but he had more than $3,000,000, and the gentleman from Iowa knows he had more than $3,000,000, which is the amount in question here.

Mr. GOOD. I know nothing about it.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. The gentleman knows that the War Risk Bureau had to get, and did get, more than $2,000,000 from that fund, and if the sundry civil bill had been passed, then the President would not have had to advance that $2,000,000, and he knows that various other departments received money from the President's fund.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Yes.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Does not the gentleman recall the statement made by the gentleman from Kentucky, Mr. Sherley, that in his judgment there was less than $5,000,000 left in that fund?

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. No; I do not recall that.

Mr. LONGWORTH. I recollect it very distinctly.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. I do know that the President has advanced more than $5,000,000, and that was made necessary because of the Republican filibuster in the closing days of the last session of Congress.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was accordingly read the third time and passed.

On motion of Mr. GOOD, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa asks unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of a resolution, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 46.

Resolved, That the Committee on Appropriations, or such subcommittees as it may designate, shall have leave to sit during sessions of the House during the Sixty-sixth Congress and during the recesses of that Congress.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The resolution was agreed to.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 3 o'clock and 53 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until Friday, May 23, 1919, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a communication from the Acting Secretary of the Navy submitting an estimate of appropriation to pay claims for damages by naval vessels adjusted by the Navy Department (H. Doc. No. 29); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

2. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting copy of a communication from the Secretary of the Interior submitting a supplemental estimate of appropriation required by the Bureau of Mines for investigations of petroleum and natural gas for the fiscal year 1920 (H. Doc. No. 30); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

3. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting copy of a communication from the Commissioners of the District of Columbia submitting supplemental estimates of appropriations required by the District of Columbia for the fiscal year 1920 (H. Doc. No. 31); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

4. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting report showing the number of documents received and distributed by the Treasury Department during the calendar year ended December 31, 1918, together with the number remaining on hand January 1, 1919 (S. Doc. No. 4); to the Committee on Expenditures in the Treasury Department and ordered to be printed.

5. A letter from the Assistant Secretary of Labor, requesting authority for the disposition as useless papers certain papers having no further interest or historical value (H. Doc. No. 33); to the Committee on Disposition of Useless Executive Papers and ordered to be printed.

6. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting copy of communication from the Secretary of the Interior submitting a supplemental estimate of appropriation required by the Alaskan Engineering Commission for construction of railroads in Alaska for the fiscal year 1919 (H. Doc. No. 34); to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

7. A letter from the Assistant Secretary of Labor, requesting authority to dispose of certain useless papers in that department having no permanent value or historical interest (H. Doc. No. 35); to the Committee on Disposition of Useless Executive Papers and ordered to be printed.

8. A letter from the Chief Scout Executive of Boy Scouts of America, transmitting report of the proceedings of the Boy Scouts of America for the year ending December 31, 1919 (H. Doc. No. 36); to the Committee on the Judiciary.

9. A letter from the Acting Secretary of the Navy, transmitting draft of bill to authorize the President to present certain ordnance and ammunition to the Portuguese Republic (H. Doc. No. 37); to the Committee on Foreign Affairs and ordered to be printed.

10. A letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting draft of amendment to section 2 of the act of February 13, 1893, relating to the healthful condition of vessels clearing or departing for a port in the United States (H. Doc. No. 38); to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce and ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. FORDNEY: A bill (H. R. 2021) to repeal section 904 of the revenue act of 1918, approved February 24, 1919; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, a bill (H. R. 2022) vesting in the Bureau of Pensions jurisdiction of all pension claims based upon service in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps of the United States subsequent to October 5, 1917; to repeal certain sections of article 3 of the war-risk insurance act, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. RAKER: A bill (H. R. 2023) to create a department of education, to authorize appropriations for the conduct of said department, to authorize the appropriation of money to encourage the States in the promotion and support of education, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Education.

SENATE.

FRIDAY, May 23, 1919.

The Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, every page of our national history has been written with a sense of divine obligation and an expression of our recognition of the fact that Thou hast a right to rule. During the tragic days through which we have passed we have fought and sacrificed because we have believed in the divine order in a world of government and of law. Every boy who lies sleeping in the fields of France is a pledge of our belief in God's power to raise the dead. To-day we come still trusting in the divine guidance, seeking Thy blessing, that we may discharge as Christian statesmen the duties that are upon us, and glorify Thy name in the advancement of the civilization that Thou hast given to us. We ask Thy blessing. For Christ's sake. Amen.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of the proceedings of Tuesday last, when, on request of Mr. LODGE and by unanimous consent, the further reading was dispensed with and the Journal was approved.

JAMES D. PHELAN, a Senator from the State of California, appeared in his seat to-day.

SENATOR FROM GEORGIA.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Hon. WILLIAM J. HARRIS, the Senator elect from Georgia, is now in the Chamber. His credentials have been duly filed, and I ask that the oath of office be administered to him.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the Senator elect will present himself at the Secretary's desk for the purpose of taking the oath of office.

Mr. HARRIS was escorted to the Vice President's desk by Mr. SMITH of Georgia, and the oath prescribed by law having been administered to him, he took his seat in the Senate.

NOTIFICATION TO THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. LODGE and Mr. MARTIN appeared, and

Mr. LODGE said: Mr. President, the committee appointed by the Chair to notify the President that a quorum of the Senate is assembled and ready to receive communications from him received the following reply to the cablegram which they sent:

Please express my appreciation to the Senate committee of its courtesy and say that I have communicated with the Congress in the usual manner through the message presented yesterday, and express the hope that I may soon be present in Washington to communicate to them full information with regard to international affairs.

INVITATION FROM THE SECRETARY OF THE NAVY.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair desires to lay before the Senate a letter from the Secretary of the Navy, which will be read.

The Secretary read the letter, as follows:

THE SECRETARY OF THE NAVY,
Washington, May 21, 1919.

The VICE PRESIDENT,
Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. VICE PRESIDENT: I wish to inform you that one of the former German submarines, the U–117, which has been brought to America, is now lying at the docks at the foot of O Street, in this city.

Thinking that a close-up view of the interior of this boat might be interesting, I wish to extend an invitation to you and the Senators to visit the boat, and I will be greatly obliged if you will take the necessary action to extend to the Senators the above invitation.

It is requested that visits to the boat be made between the hours of 9 a. m. and 11 a. m. and from 1.30 p. m. to 5 p. m., and that the commanding officer of the boat be informed of the visits, in order that proper arrangements may be made.

The commanding officer can be reached by telephone at Main 7510.

With kindest regards,
Yours, sincerely, JOSEPHUS DANIELS.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by D. K. Hempstead, its enrolling clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bill and joint resolution, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 2329. An act making appropriations to supply urgent deficiencies in appropriations for the Bureau of War Risk Insurance and for the payment of pensions for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919; and

H. J. Res. 1. Joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution extending the right of suffrage to women.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President, I ask, in accordance with subdivision 3 of Rule XIV, that the joint resolution just received from the House of Representatives may be read twice and then be placed upon the calendar.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, I understand it requires unanimous consent to have the joint resolution considered without going to the committee. I will say that I have no desire to unduly delay the consideration of the joint resolution at the proper time. It is a well-known fact that I am opposed to it, and I expect to vote against it. It should be considered in an orderly and proper way, and I shall certainly object to its consideration until it has been referred to a committee and properly considered.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. It is that it may be considered in an orderly and proper way that the motion is made, and it is made in conformity with subdivision 3, Rule XIV. The desire is not at all to press the matter with any undue haste, but that, in accordance with the rule, the joint resolution may be read twice and then be placed upon the calendar and ultimately may be taken up on motion.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. As I understand it——

The VICE PRESIDENT. This is the rule, of course. Without objection, unless the Senate otherwise orders, the first and second reading of a bill may be by title only; and there having been no objection, it will be read the first and second times by title and will go to the Committee on Woman Suffrage.

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 1) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States extending the right of suffrage to women was read twice by its title.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, it seems to me that the Senate has it within its power by order to direct that it shall go to the calendar instead of to the committee, if the question of reference is raised. That, I understand, the Senator from California raises. The rule does not say that it shall go to the committee automatically, but unless otherwise ordered it goes to the committee.

The VICE PRESIDENT. There has to be unanimous consent.

Mr. JONES of Washington. It can not go to the committee without unanimous consent.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair has ruled a number of times, and the precedents of the Senate are unvarying upon the proposition, that unless there is unanimous consent a bill or resolution has to go to a committee.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I ask unanimous consent that the joint resolution may go to the calendar, not to be taken up for consideration to-day, but that it go to the calendar.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I think I made it clear a moment ago that I am not willing to consent that the joint resolution shall be taken up in the Senate until it has been carefully and fully and deliberately considered by the appropriate committee. Therefore, of course, I object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The joint resolution goes to the Committee on Woman Suffrage.

URGENT DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. LODGE. I ask that the bill received from the House be laid before the Senate.

The bill (H. R. 2329) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in appropriations for the Bureau of War Risk Insurance and for the payment of pensions for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919, was read twice by its title.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, the bill covers appropriations which were passed upon by our committee at the last session of Congress. All the checks are ready to go out now—some 3,000,000 checks, I am informed—to cover these pension and allotment payments. There is no Committee on Appropriations able at this moment to deal with it. I have asked the Senator from Virginia [Mr. MARTIN], who was chairman of the committee in the previous Congress, and he agrees with me in the request I am about to make.

I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

Mr. MARTIN. I desire to say that these items were at the last session carefully considered and reported favorably by the Committee on Appropriations. The money is urgently needed. The Secretary of the Tresury says the checks are made out and the families are very much in need of this money. In my opinion they ought to have it and have it immediately.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, and it was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the following sums are appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to supply urgent deficiencies in appropriations for the Bureau of War Risk Insurance and for the payment of pensions for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919, namely:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

BUREAU OF WAR RISK INSURANCE.

For salaries of officers and employees, $2,025,613.97; stationery and miscellaneous expenses, $100,000; furniture, equipment, and supplies, $195,000; printing and binding, $100,000; rental of quarters in the District of Columbia, $3,886.03; and traveling expenses, $5,000; in all, $2,429,500.

For the payment of military and naval family allowances as authorized by law, $39,615,000.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT.

BUREAU OF PENSIONS.

Army and Navy pensions: For invalids, widows, minor children, and dependent relatives, Army nurses, and all other pensioners who are now borne on the rolls, or who may hereafter be placed thereon, under the provisions of any and all acts of Congress, $3,000,000: Provided, That the appropriation aforesaid for Navy pensions shall be paid from the income of the Navy pension fund so far as the same shall be sufficient for that purpose: Provided further, That the amount expended under each of the above items shall be accounted for separately.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment.

Mr. KENYON. I wish to inquire what is the amount carried by the bill?

Mr. LODGE. Forty-five million dollars, in round numbers.

Mr. KENYON. Is that the same amount as before?

Mr. LODGE. For invalids, widows, minors, and dependent relatives under the Army and Navy, $3,000,000; for payment of military and naval family allowances as authorized by law, $39,000,000; and for pensions in the Army and Navy, $3,000,000.

Mr. KENYON. That is the identical amount in the bill reported at the last session?

Mr. LODGE. I understand it is the same amount.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, in reference to the joint resolution which came from the House, I wish to call the attention of the Chair to a further provision in Rule XIV. Paragraph 4 of that rule reads as follows:

Every bill and joint resolution introduced on leave and every bill and joint resolution of the House of Representatives which shall have received a first and second reading without being referred to a committee—

This joint resolution has received its first and second readings—shall, if objection be made to further proceeding thereon, be placed on the calendar.

The matter of reference is a further proceeding on a bill or joint resolution. Objection is made to the reference, and under the rule, it seems to me, it should go to the calendar.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair can not change the ruling that has been made at this time. It has to go to the committee.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I shall not appeal from the decision of the Chair, but I am of a contrary opinion.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, in view of the request made by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE], I think it advisable to make an inquiry of the Chair. The Senator from Massachusetts just stated that there is no Committee on Appropriations to which the bill recently passed by the House could be referred. I take it the Senator meant by that to announce the position that all the committees heretofore existing have ceased to exist. I should like to ask the Chair whether the committees which existed during the last session of Congress would be recognized for the transaction of business?

I desire to state as the reason for the inquiry that the joint resolution which has just come from the House is one which we are all anxious to see passed, and which I am satisfied will be passed as soon as a vote can be had upon it. I have hesitated thus far in proceeding as a member of the Committee on Woman Suffrage and as its chairman at its last session of Congress in taking any action on the joint resolutions which have been heretofore introduced in the Senate upon that subject, and out of deference to my successor, whoever he may be, I should not be disposed to take action at this time were it not for the fact that there seems to be some apprehension that quite a time will elapse before any committees are organized. This joint resolution, it seems to me, should be acted upon without any great delay, and if the old committees are still in existence, and the members feel justified in acting, as far as I am concerned, I do not want to delay action on the joint resolution. However, I am willing as a matter of courtesy to defer action if that is thought best by the members on the other side of the Chamber.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair has some very definite views on this question. Anticipating some controversy about it some sessions ago, the Chair made an examination. The Chair is satisfied that the Senate of the United States is a continuing body, and the Chair is satisfied that the old committees are in full force and effect and have power to proceed with the consideration of business, if they choose, until the new committees are organized by the Senate.

In addition to that, the Chair has a recollection, which he hopes to verify in a moment, that the Senator from Virginia [Mr. MARTIN] presented and there was adopted either on the last day or the day preceding the close of the last session of the former Congress a resolution that all the committees of the Senate should remain in full force and have power to act until the new committees were appointed. The Chair will verify that as soon as he can get the record. I do not think the Senator from Massachusetts said there was no Committee on Appropriations. He said there was not one which could act just now.

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. President, I simply desire to say that the Chair is correct. I offered the resolution and was present and saw it adopted. I have a copy of it in my committee room. It was adopted unanimously.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, the committees, of course, expire with the Congress which created them, but it has been the custom in the Senate for many years to continue them by special resolution. I want to see the exact wording of the resolution, which, it seems to me, it is difficult to find.

The VICE PRESIDENT. This is the resolution:

Resolved, That the standing committees of the Senate as constituted at the end of this session be, and they are hereby, continued until the next session of Congress or until their successors are duly elected.

Mr. LODGE. Ah, that is just as I thought—"until the next session of Congress or until their successors are duly elected." Their successors have not been duly elected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair is going to say that this is either a continuing body or it is not. If it is a continuing body, it is a continuing body in all its functions.

Mr. LODGE. I dislike to differ with the Chair, but it does not seem to me to follow that with the Senate a continuing body, the committees, the temporary character of which is recognized every two years by resolution, are also continuous.

The VICE PRESIDENT. We will get rid of it in very short order, and I do not think we will have any trouble about it.

Mr. LODGE. I do not know whether there is a quorum of that committee. I do not know whether there are any vacancies to fill. Certainly the Committee on Appropriations is not yet organized.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. A further parliamentary inquiry, Mr. President. I am a member of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, or at least I was so during the last Congress. I desire to inquire whether that committee now has the power to inquire into the Ford-Newberry contest, which was referred to it a few days ago?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair can only express one opinion; and that is that the committees are in force and have power until they are changed.

Mr. LODGE subsequently said: In connection with the matter of the standing committees of the Senate, I should like to call attention to what was said at the time the subject was under consideration on February 25, 1919:

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 466), as follows:

"Resolved, That the standing committees of the Senate as constituted at the end of this session be, and they are hereby, continued until the next session of Congress or until their successors are duly elected."

Mr. LODGE. I am entirely in favor of that resolution. We have always passed a similar resolution. I only wanted to speak to the Senator from Virginia as to his understanding being the same as mine, that none of these committees, with the exception of the Committee on Contingent Expenses, exists by statute, and none of them, of course, would transact any business whatever between the expiration of this Congress and the assembling of the new Congress. The Senator from Virginia agrees with me entirely about that.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I do. When this Congress expires all these committees expire, except the vitality given by this resolution. I ask that the resolution may have present consideration.

Mr. LODGE. I will just ask the question. Of course, if there is a special session of the Senate, the committees are reorganized.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Whenever there is a special or a regular session this resolution ends.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President I desire to enter a motion to discharge the Committee on Woman Suffrage from the consideration of the House joint resolution No. 1 that was referred to that committee to-day, and I ask that the motion lie over for one day under the rules.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts in the chair). That action will be taken.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. FLETCHER presented a petition of sundry citizens of Merritt, Fla., praying that in the consideration of the league of nations treaty, the sovereignty of God be recognized and that His name be ever before the proposed league of nations, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a memorial of the Florida East Coast Growers' Association of Miami, Fla., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation prohibiting immigration for a period of four years, which was referred to the Committee on Immigration.

Mr. NUGENT presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Idaho, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE OF IDAHO,
DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

I, Robert O. Jones, secretary of state of the State of Idaho, do hereby certify that the annexed is a full, true, and complete transcript of house concurrent resolution No. 5, by Adamson, which was filed in this office on the 25th day of February, A. D. 1919, and admitted to record.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State. Done at Boise City, the capital of Idaho, this 26th day of February, A. D. 1919, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and forty-third.

[SEAL.] ROBERT O. JONES,
Secretary of State.

House concurrent resolution 5.

Whereas the people of the State of Idaho desire to honor the soldiers, sailors, and marines who entered the service from this State to fight in the war with Germany by bestowing upon each of them an appropriately designed badge of honor; and

Whereas it is proposed in an act providing for such badge of honor that same shall be made of metal taken from cannon captured from German troops in battle in which Idaho soldiers were engaged: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of Idaho (the Senate concurring), That the Senators and Representatives from Idaho in the United States Congress are hereby requested to procure from the War Department as a grant or gift to this State cannon captured from German troops in battle in which Idaho soldiers took part sufficient to manufacture badges of honor for all and every soldier, sailor, and marine who at the time of entering the service was a citizen of Idaho and who has been honorably discharged from such service or who may be now serving therein.

Resolved further, That the secretary of state of the State of Idaho be, and hereby is, instructed to forward copies of this resolution to our Senators and Representatives in Congress at Washington.

This house concurrent resolution passed the house on the 14th day of February, 1919.

House joint memorial 4.

A joint memorial urging the Congress of the United States to pursue a constructive policy in reclaiming lands in Idaho for the purpose of employing returned soldiers and sailors and preparing lands for settlement by the same.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the House of Representatives and the Senate of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent that—

Whereas there are thousands of acres of tillable land in the State of Idaho that may be reclaimed by irrigation and development; and

Whereas our soldiers and sailors have served in the Army and Navy of the United States and have offered to sacrifice all that our country and our Commonwealth might be safe from peril and danger, and that we might live in peace and security; and

Whereas a large number of these soldiers and sailors are out of employment and desire to establish homes and obtain farms whereby they may make a livelihood: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, your memorialists, urgently recommend that you pursue a broad and constructive policy in reclaiming lands in our State, and that our returned soldiers and sailors be given employment on such reclamation projects, and we, your memorialists, further urge that you give soldiers and sailors the opportunities to obtain land from areas reclaimed and under easy conditions with long-time payments; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this memorial be sent to each of the members of the congressional delegations from the State of Idaho to the Congress of the United States and to each body of said Congress.

This memorial passed the house on the 16th day of January, 1919.

M. A. KIGER,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

This memorial passed the senate on the 21st day of January, 1919.

C. C. MOORE,

STATE OF IDAHO,
DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

I, Robert O. Jones, secretary of state of the State of Idaho, do hereby certify that the annexed is a full, true, and complete transcript of house joint memorial No. 8, by committee on irrigation, reservoirs, and reclamation, which was filed in this office on the 8th day of February, A. D. 1919, and admitted to record.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State. Done at Boise City, the capital of Idaho, this 26th day of February, A. D. 1919, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and forty-third.

[SEAL.] ROBERT O. JONES,
Secretary of State.

House joint memorial 8.

To the Congress of the United States:

Your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent that—

Whereas there is a nation-wide demand to stimulate industry and furnish work to returning soldiers and sailors by encouraging public improvements of all kinds;

Whereas there is also a great demand to make permanent homes available to such soldiers and sailors out of the public lands of the United States;

Whereas there are in the State of Idaho upward of 2,000,000 acres of arid lands capable of being reclaimed by the construction of large irrigation projects, some of which have been surveyed and declared feasible by the United States Reclamation Service;

Whereas the magnitude of such projects is such that only the Federal Government can undertake their construction; and

Whereas the War Department owns large numbers of horses and mules with harness and equipment, tractors, motor trucks, and electric cranes, which can be converted into ditching machinery: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, your memorialists, do hereby recommend that Congress immediately authorize the United States Reclamation Service to proceed with the construction of the feasible irrigation projects in Idaho designed to reclaim public lands and make the necessary appropriation for such reclamation. Also that the above-mentioned equipment be turned over by the War Department to the Reclamation Service for use in said reclamation, and upon completion of said work that it be sold on liberal terms to the settlers on said tracts.

The secretary of state is hereby instructed to forward copies of this memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, and copies of the same to our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

This house joint memorial passed the house on the 2d day of February, 1919.

Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives.

Mr. NUGENT presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Idaho, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE OF IDAHO,
DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

I, Robert O. Jones, secretary of state of the State of Idaho, do hereby certify that the annexed is a full, true, and complete transcript of senate joint memorial No. 7, by Pettibone, which was filed in this office on the 11th day of February, A. D. 1919, and admitted to record.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State. Done at Boise City, the capital of Idaho, this 26th day of February, A. D. 1919, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and forty-third.

[SEAL.] ROBERT O. JONES,
Secretary of State.

Senate joint memorial 7.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent that—

Whereas within the county of Idaho, State of Idaho, there is an area of unsurveyed public land which when surveyed will be approximately the north half of township 26 north, range 6 east; the south half of township 27 north, range 6 east; the southwest quarter of township 27 north, range 7 east; and the northwest quarter of township 26 north, range 7 east, Boise meridian, and which is now entirely surrounded by lands of the United States set aside and withdrawn for national forest purposes under the name of the Nezperce National Forest; and

Whereas said area is rich in timber, water power, minerals, forage, and game, and practically devoid of land having any possible agricultural value; and

Whereas the said area has been subjected repeatedly to the ravages of fire, which imperils the remaining timber land against which under existing conditions it is impossible to guard the area; and

Whereas wild life on said area is being rapidly exterminated and the forage resources destroyed by overgrazing and unregulated use; and

Whereas the development of the mineral resources of the said area is retarded by its present lack of transportation facilities; and

Whereas the inclusion of said area within a national forest would protect the great natural resources of said area from damage by fire and other destructive agencies and make such resources a contributing factor to the development and prosperity of the State of Idaho: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, your memorialists, earnestly request and recommend that your honorable body take such action as may be necessary to make the area first in this memorial described, to wit, approximately the north half of township 26 north, range 6 east; the south half of township 27 north, range 6 east; the southwest quarter of township 27 north, range 7 east; and the northwest quarter of township 26 north, range 7 east, Boise meridian, a part of said Nezperce National Forest and subject to the laws governing the same.

The secretary of state of the State of Idaho is hereby instructed to forward a copy of this memorial to the Senate of the United States, to the House of Representatives of the United States, and to each member of the congressional delegation from the State of Idaho.

This joint memorial passed the senate on the 3d day of February, 1919.

C. C. MOORE,
President of the Senate.

This joint memorial passed the house of representatives on the 7th day of February, 1919.

M. A. KIGER,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

I hereby certify that the within joint memorial No. 7 originated in the senate during the fifteenth session of the Legislature of the State of Idaho.

PAUL DAVIS,
Secretary of the Senate.

Mr. NUGENT presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Idaho, which was referred to the Committee on Immigration and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE OF IDAHO,
DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

I, Robert O. Jones, secretary of state of the State of Idaho, do hereby certify that the annexed is a full, true, and complete transcript of enrolled house joint memorial 14, which was filed in this office on the 13th day of March, A. D. 1919, and admitted to record.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State. Done at Boise City, the capital of Idaho, this 28th day of April, A. D. 1919, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and forty-third.

[SEAL.] ROBERT O. JONES,
Secretary of State.

House joint memorial 14.

To the Congress of the United States:

Your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Idaho, respectfully represents that—

Whereas during the great war the action of certain aliens in surrendering their first papers for the purpose of claiming exemption from military service and of other alien residents of this country who claimed exemption from military service on the ground of noncitizenship was such as to brand them as undesirable residents of this country; and

Whereas many of these same aliens, after having evaded the duties of citizenship, are now seeking its benefits and are continuing to hold positions which should be open to returned soldiers, sailors, and marines; and

Whereas many foreign-born residents, some of whom had become naturalized, have openly shown their disloyalty to this country and been convicted under the espionage act; and

Whereas Congress is considering a bill to restrict immigration, we, your memorialists, respectfully petition that Congress enact the necessary laws to deport all aliens who claimed exemption from military service on the ground of noncitizenship, and to cancel and rescind the naturalization papers of and to deport all foreign-born citizens of this country who have been convicted under the espionage act.

That the secretary of state of the State of Idaho is hereby instructed to forward this memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, and that copies be sent to the Senators and Representatives in Congress from this State.

Senate joint memorial 9.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Idaho, represent that—

Whereas since our Nation has entered the great conflict for the high purpose of preserving throughout the world the blessings of democratic government and to make the world safe from the dangers of autocratic governments, bent on military rule, and victory has blessed our aims; and

Whereas aliens bearing no allegiance to our Government, but sharing its benefits and having every opportunity to labor on terms of equality with our citizens who are bearing arms for its defense, while these aliens risk neither life nor property; and

Whereas, taking advantage of this Nation's peril, many of said aliens have become dangerous and undesirable residents of this country, joining treasonable and seditious organizations of unpatriotic origin, have publicly proclaimed contempt for the flag that shelters and protects them, preaching and practicing sabotage, destruction of property, and the overthrow of our Government, and establishing a government of Bolshevism and red-flag type, and have committed acts resulting in the arrest and conviction of many of this element, together with their disloyal associates, and are growing bolder in their opposition to law and order and our established form of government: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the Senate of the State of Idaho, and the House of Representatives concurring therein, do hereby memorialize the Congress of the United States of America to enact drastic laws for the prompt arrest, detention, punishment, and deportation of all such aliens, and that the citizenship of all naturalized aliens in this country be made to depend on their loyalty and good citizenship, and that no alien be naturalized who cherishes any disloyal sentiments or views or ideals antagonistic to our form of government.

The secretary of state of the State of Idaho is hereby instructed to forward certified copies of this memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, and copies of the same to our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

This joint memorial passed the senate on the 3d day of March, 1919.

House joint memorial 20.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the House of Representatives and Senate of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent that—

Whereas section 2, Article II, of the Constitution of the United States gives the President power to make treaties by and with the advice and consent of the Senate; and

Whereas there is now in progress the greatest peace-negotiating conclave in the history of the world, the United States being one of the members of said convention; and

Whereas the President of the United States has, contrary to the wishes and desires of the majority of the people of the United States of America, and without the advice or consent of the Senate of the United States, attempted to force through said convention and to foist upon the American people as one of the essential elements of the treaties of peace to be promulgated by said convention, a proposition favoring and organizing a so-called league of nations; and

Whereas the substance of the proposed draft of the so-called league of nations is obscure, vague, ambiguous, and tending to bring about greater confusion and distrust and hostility among the various nations of the world; and

Whereas the theory of said league of nations is impracticable, visionary, and subversive of the international principles heretofore controlling in the foreign relationships of the United States of America; and

Whereas the President of the United States has defied Congress and the people of the United States to oppose the organization of such a league of nations; and

Whereas some 37 Senators have pledged themselves to oppose the ratification of a treaty adopting said league of nations: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the House of Representatives of the State of Idaho, the Senate concurring, do earnestly request and recommend that the Senate of the United States oppose absolutely the theory as indicated by the constitution of the league of nations and oppose said constitution of the league of nations becoming a part of or being in any way included in the peace treaties to be made or entered into by the United States; and be it further

Resolved, That they hereby ratify and give their unqualified approval to, the stand and position taken by the above-mentioned 37 Senators in recording themselves as opposed to said league of nations at the present time; and be it further

Resolved, That they resent the defiant and dictatorial attitude of the President of the United States in his recent statements in which he has attempted to force his personal views and opinions upon the people of the United States, irrespective of their desires in the matter.

The secretary of the State of Idaho is hereby instructed to forward this memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, and to send copies of the same to our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

This house joint memorial passed the house on the 6th day of March, 1919.

I, Robert O. Jones, secretary of state of the State of Idaho, do hereby certify that the annexed is a full, true, and complete transcript of enrolled senate joint memorial No. 11, which was filed in this office on the 11th day of March, A. D. 1919, and admitted to record.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State. Done at Boise City, the capital of Idaho, this 28th day of April, A. D. 1919, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and forty-third.

[SEAL.] ROBERT O. JONES,
Secretary of State.

Senate joint memorial 11.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Senate and the House of Representatives of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent that—

Whereas there is at the present time need of furnishing employment to our brave soldiers, sailors, and marines who are daily returning from the battle fields of Europe; and

Whereas there is also need of providing arable lands upon which many of them may find homes; and

Whereas the State of Idaho has many acres of lands admirably adapted to farming and to furnishing homes for our soldiery, such land lacking only the water necessary for its irrigation; and

Whereas the Government has already started the Fort Hall project, in Idaho, which project embraces 50,000 acres of land, only 23,000 of which are now irrigated, which irrigated area last year produced over $800,000 worth of foodstuffs; and

Whereas the enlargement and completion of this project would put under cultivation 27,000 acres of land, which enlargement and completion would require no preliminary investigations or surveys, but would require an appropriation of $550,000, as provided in a bill introduced by the late Senator James H. Brady in the Fifty-fifth Congress (Senate No. 3226); and

Whereas there is adjoining said project, between Pocatello and American Falls, Idaho, an area of between 30,000 and 40,000 acres of additional land capable of similar production when properly irrigated; and

Whereas an extension of the Fort Hall project could be made to cover such area at a cost of approximately half a million dollars: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, your memorialists, the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Idaho, earnestly recommend that Congress make an appropriation of $1,000,000 to cover the cost of such completion and extension of the Fort Hall project.

The secretary of state of the State of Idaho is hereby instructed to forward this memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America and to send copies to the Senators and Representatives in Congress from this State.

This joint memorial passed the senate on the 24th day of February, 1919.

Secretary of State.

Senate joint memorial 6.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent that—

Whereas our Nation suffered a sense of bereavement personal to every American when the Maker of Men recalled the intrepid soul of Theodore Roosevelt, the most virile, most brilliant, best-loved, and typical American of his time, whose remarkable career and accomplishments as athlete, plainsman, soldier, author, explorer, President, and apostle of undiluted Americanism have made him a figure to touch and inspire the imagination of youth for generations; and

Whereas one of his many great achievements is represented by the canal between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, which his constructive and practical genius, brushing aside the bickerings, debates, and delays of 50 years, made possible; Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, your memorialists, urgently recommend that the Congress of the United States, by proper enactment, change the name of the Panama Canal from the Panama Canal to the "Roosevelt Canal," so that the same shall stand in name as well as in historical fact an enduring monument to his greatness, a constant reminder that the canal is like the great President who started it—unqualifiedly American; and be it also

Resolved, That a copy of this memorial be sent to each of the members of the congressional delegation of the State of Idaho to the Congress of the United States and to each body of said Congress.

This joint memorial passed the senate on the 30th day of January, 1919.

C. C. MOORE,
President of the Senate.

This joint memorial passed the house of representatives on the 5th day of February, 1919.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State. Done at Boise City, the capital of Idaho, this 28th day of April, A. D. 1919, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and forty-third.

[SEAL.] ROBERT O. JONES,
Secretary of State.

Senate joint memorial 13.

A joint memorial to Congress requesting reimbursement to citizens of Idaho for sacked grain shipped at the direction of the United States Food Administration Grain Corporation for which no allowance was made for sacks.

Your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent that—

Whereas the United States Food Administration Grain Corporation agreed in the beginning of the season of 1918 to allow a premium of 9 cents per bushel over the bulk price for wheat delivered in sacks to all Pacific coast terminals; and

Whereas at the express direction of the United States Food Administration grain was diverted and shipped to Chicago with the understanding on the part of the shipper that he would receive the same price as at Pacific coast terminals; and

Whereas the United States Food Administration at the Chicago terminal refused to allow a premium for sacks and charged the shipper 2 cents per bushel additional for bulking the grain, offering him the alternative of selling the sacks on the open market for what they would bring or returning them at his expense; and

Whereas such arbitrary action on the part of the Food Administration resulted in substantial loss to a large number of shippers and growers in the State of Idaho.

Now, therefore, your memorialists petition Congress to direct the Food Administration to reimburse growers and shippers for the loss so incurred.

The secretary of state of the State of Idaho is hereby instructed to forward this memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, and to forward copies to the President of the United States, the United States Food Administration Grain Corporation, and to the members of the Idaho congressional delegation.

This joint memorial passed the senate on the 8th day of March, 1919.

Secretary of State.

House joint memorial 9.

A joint memorial memorializing the Congress of the United States to make an appropriation of $25,000 for the improvement of star routes on the Coeur d'Alene Indian Reservation and running through Indian allotment.

We, your memorialists, the House of Representatives and Senate of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent that—

Whereas the improvement of public highways on the Coeur d'Alene Indian Reservation from St. Maries to the Washington State line near Tekoa, Wash., and from the Washington State line to Tensed, thence to the Desmet mission, thence to the Sanders post office, is a public necessity; and

Whereas the two public highways are both star routes, with a mileage of 45 miles; and

Whereas one-half of said roads are through Indian allotments and are not taxable but are farmed by renters, making it necessary for Benewah County to construct roads and maintain schools; and

Whereas the Coeur d'Alene Indian Reservation is half the area of Benewah County, and the said Indians do not contribute in taxes or otherwise to said roads: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, your memorialists, do recommend that $25,000 be appropriated, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to assist in construction of above-mentioned roads; be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this memorial be sent to each of the members of the congressional delegation from the State of Idaho to the Congress of the United States and to each body of said Congress.

D. 1919, and admitted to record.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State. Done at Boise City, the capital of Idaho, this 26th day of February, A. D. 1919, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and forty-third.

[SEAL.] ROBERT O. JONES,
Secretary of State.

House joint memorial 3.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent that—

Whereas it is desirable that each State have a record of all of the persons resident therein who were mustered into any branch of the service of the United States during the war with the German Empire and its allies; and

Whereas the records of the Army and Navy Departments of the United States are the only sources from which such information can be obtained in complete and accessible form: Now, therefore,

Your memorialists urgently request and recommend that Congress enact a law requiring the Departments of the Army and Navy to furnish such information upon requisition therefor to the respective States.

That the secretary of state of the State of Idaho is hereby instructed to forward this memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, and that copies be sent to the Senators and Representatives in Congress from this State.

This memorial passed the house on the 24th day of January, 1919.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State. Done at Boise City, the capital of Idaho, this 28th day of April, A. D. 1919, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and forty-third.

[SEAL.] ROBERT O. JONES,
Secretary of State.

House joint memorial 10.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent that—

Whereas there are 35,000 acres of meadowland in the Kootenai Valley within Boundary County, in the State of Idaho, subject to annual overflow from the said Kootenai River; and

Whereas there are 60,000 acres of meadowland in Kootenai Valley within British Columbia, Canada, subject to annual overflow from the said Kootenai River, said Kootenai Valley meadowland in British Columbia being contiguous to and adjoining said Kootenai Valley meadowlands in Idaho; and

Whereas the said meadowlands can be made valuable for farming purposes by draining same, and by reason of said overflow said lands are rendered valueless for farming purposes; and

Whereas by reason of a gravel bar having formed at the outlet of the west arm of Kootenai Lake, which outlet is located in British Columbia, thereby causing the waters of Kootenai River to rise to the height of about 25 feet annually, thus overflowing about 95,000 acres of meadowland, 35,000 acres of said overflowed land being in Boundary County, Idaho, and about 60,000 acres of said overflowed lands are in British Columbia, Dominion of Canada; and

Whereas if said gravel bar is removed from the said outlet of Kootenai Lake the water in said lake and river will not rise to a height so as to cause said overflow; and

Whereas the said obstruction of said outlet of said Kootenai Lake and River is wholly within British Columbia, Dominion of Canada, and it is impossible for the State of Idaho to remove said obstruction from said outlet without cooperation of British Columbia; and

Whereas the Government of British Columbia has signified its intentions to assist the United States in removing said obstruction from the outlet of Kootenai River and Lake; and

Whereas the Government of British Columbia proposes to take charge of the removal of said obstruction, and has made a careful and accurate survey of the waters of Kootenai Lake and River, and said Government of British Columbia proposes to do said work, providing the Government of the United States will cooperate and appropriate their proportionate share of the cost of said work of reclamation; and

Whereas the Government of British Columbia, in the Dominion of Canada has already expended in British Columbia for surveys and preliminary work the sum of $60,000, the Government of the United States has expended in making surveys in the Kootenai Valley in Boundary County, Idaho, the sum of about $6,000; and

Whereas it will necessitate the further expenditure of the sum of $1,000,000 as the proportionate part of the total cost of such reclamation on the part of the United States Government; and

Whereas the Government of British Columbia proposes to expend the further sum of $1,000,000 or more as its proportionate part to complete said drainage project; and

Whereas it is desired by your memorialists that the Congress of the United States make the necessary appropriation to complete the proportionate part of the work to be done in British Columbia, Dominion of Canada, on such a drainage project on the part of the United States: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Congress of the United States is hereby petitioned to appoint a commission to confer with a like commission to be appointed by the Government of Canada, and the said joint commissions to formulate a treaty between the United States of America and the Dominion of Canada in regard to the proposed reclamation work to be done in British Columbia, and to make an appropriation of the amount necessary to complete its proportionate part of said drainage project and to instruct the Secretary of State of the United States to enter into all necessary contracts with the Government of British Columbia to complete such drainage project.

The secretary of state of the State of Idaho is hereby instructed to forward this memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, and copies thereof to the Secretary of State of the United States and to our Senators and Representatives in Congress immediately upon its passage.

This house joint memorial passed the house on the 17th day of February, 1919.

House joint memorial 18.

A joint memorial memorializing the Congress of the United States to pass Senate bill 313.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the House of Representatives and Senate of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent that—

Whereas the people of the State of Idaho have for many years in the past suffered under a most unjust and oppressive discrimination in transcontinental railroad freight rates because the transcontinental railroads have been permitted to charge or assess higher rates upon freight traffic originating in the eastern portion of the United States destined for Idaho than were charged or assessed upon freight traffic originating in the same territory and destined for the more distant cities on the Pacific coast, such as Portland, Oreg., and have also been permitted to charge higher freight rates upon freight traffic originating in the State of Idaho and consigned to the markets in the eastern cities of the United States than was charged on similar shipments from the more distant cities and localities on the Pacific coast; and

Whereas said discriminatory and preferential system of freight charging has been defended upon the theory that the same was forced and compelled because of the presence of water competition at Portland and other Pacific coast terminal points, and such defense has been found to be without merit; and

Whereas said system of charging higher freight rates for a hort haul than is charged for a longer haul can not be predicated upon any principle of just or fair dealing to the people of Idaho and this intermountain country; and

Whereas the effect of said higher charging for the short haul to and from said less-distant points has resulted in retarding the growth and development of Idaho's industrial and commercial prosperity and in restricting the State's growth, population, and wealth; and

Whereas the methods now provided by law for obtaining relief from such an unjust situation before the Interstate Commerce Commission are uncertain, exceedingly slow, expensive, and unsatisfactory; and

Whereas there is now pending in the United States Senate a bill designated Senate bill No. 313, introduced by Senator POINDEXTER, of the State of Washington, designed to prevent said discriminatory and preferential system of freight-rate charging with reference to long and short hauls, and designed to give some measure of relief to the intermountain country: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the House of Representatives of the State of Idaho, the Senate concurring, do earnestly request and recommend that the above-mentioned bill be taken up and voted on at the earliest possible date, to the end that said bill may as soon as possible become a law; and be it further

Resolved, That the Senators and Representatives in Congress from the State of Idaho are requested to support said bill and work earnestly for its passage.

The secretary of state of the State of Idaho is hereby instructed to forward this memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America and to send copies of the same to our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

This house joint memorial passed the house on the 3d day of March, 1919.

Secretary of State.

House joint memorial 17.

A joint memorial to the Congress of the United States protesting against the action of the Secretary of War in granting honorable discharges to conscientious objectors.

Your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent that—

Whereas by a recent order of the Secretary of War conscientious objectors, general prisoners at the United States Disciplinary Barracks, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., who refused to wear the uniform of our country, have been honorably discharged from the service with full pay:

Now, therefore, we, your memorialists, do hereby protest, in the name of our loyal sons and in the name of thousands of loyal homes, against this discrimination by our Government against our heroic soldiery.

The issuance of new clothes and the payment of wages to conscientious objectors encourages disloyalty and dishonors patriotism. The action of the Secretary of War in paying the conscientious objectors, who have been snug and safe and well fed, a soldier's wage is an incentive to discontent and is a reflection on every man who wore the uniform. We resent such a policy, for it exalts slackerism and pacifism by making them both safe and profitable. Our soldiers and sailors risked all for the Nation and should be honored. Their wage, though small, should be a wage of honor. An honorable discharge from the United States Army will, under legislation pending both in State legislatures and in Congress, entitle its holder to preferred rights, which should under no circumstances be granted to those who evaded the duties of citizenship.

That the secretary of state of the State of Idaho is hereby instructed to forward this memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, and that copies be sent to the Senators and Representatives in Congress from this State.

This house joint memorial passed the house on the 24th day of February, 1919.

M. A. KIGER,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

This house joint memorial passed the senate on the 27th day of February, 1919.

C. C. MOORE,
President of the Senate.

This house joint memorial received by the governor on the 5th day of March, 1919, at 4 o'clock p. m., and approved by him on the 6th day of March, 1919.

D. W. DAVIS, Governor.

I hereby certify that the within house joint memorial No. 17 originated in the house of representatives during the fifteenth session of the Legislature of the State of Idaho.

DAVID BURRELL,
Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives.

Mr. NUGENT presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Idaho, which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE OF IDAHO,
DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

I, Robert O. Jones, secretary of state of the State of Idaho, do hereby certify that the annexed is a full, true, and complete transcript of enrolled house joint memorial No. 13, which was filed in this office on the 24th day of February, A. D. 1919, and admitted to record.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State. Done at Boise City, the capital of Idaho, this 28th day of April, A. D. 1919, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and forty-third.

[SEAL.] ROBERT O. JONES,
Secretary of State.

House joint memorial 13.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent that—

Whereas the title to lands embraced in allotments to Indians on former Indian reservations in the State of Idaho, under the act of ——— ———, and agreements made with different Indian tribes pursuant to that act, is held in trust by the United States for a term of 25 years from the date of allotment; and

Whereas the State of Idaho, in harmony with the policy of the United States expressed in the Federal aid road act (act of July 11, 1916), has approved the construction of numerous highways of great public importance, appropriated large sums of money therefor, and entered into agreements with the Secretary of Agriculture for the building of said highways in accordance with the cooperative procedure prescribed by the Secretary of Agriculture in that regard; and

Whereas such highways so agreed upon, authorized, and appropriated for, when located on most desirable routes and where construction can be most economically effected, will in various localities pass through and across said allotted lands for considerable distances; and

Whereas such highways when completed will confer great and lasting benefits upon the allotted lands through which they pass, and upon the allottees, the wards of the United States; and

Whereas the securing of necessary rights of way for such highways through and across said allotted lands is, because of the paramount title of the United States, exceedingly difficult by ordinary methods and seriously retards the prompt accomplishment of the purposes of said Federal aid road act; and

Whereas said allotted lands, so held in trust by the United States are not subject to taxation during the trust period, and therefore can not be made to contribute toward the construction of such highways in return for or recognition of the direct benefits derived from such construction:

Now, therefore, your memorialists, the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Idaho, respectfully request and urgently recommend that the Congress take such action as may be deemed fit to cause highways contemplated by the provisions of the Federal aid road act, when such highways pass through and across Indian allotments the title to which is held in trust by the United States, to be built and constructed wholly at the expense of the United States and without charge against the State or other agency cooperating in the general construction of such highways.

This house joint memorial passed the house on the 17th day of February, 1919.

M. A. KIGER,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

This house joint memorial passed the senate on the 18th day of February, 1919.

C. C. MOORE,
President of the Senate.

This house joint memorial received by the governor on the 21st day of February, 1919, at 2 o'clock p. m., and approved by him on the 24th day of February, 1919.

D. W. DAVIS, Governor.

I hereby certify that the within house joint memorial No. 13 originated in the house of representatives during the fifteenth session of the Legislature of the State of Idaho.

DAVID BURRELL,
Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives.

Mr. NUGENT presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Idaho, which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE OF IDAHO,
DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

I, Robert O. Jones, secretary of state of the State of Idaho, do hereby certify that the annexed is a full, true, and complete transcript of house joint memorial 16, by Carpenter, Hugo, Jones, Browning, and Givens, which was filed in this office on the 6th day of March, A. D. 1919, and admitted to record.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State. Done at Boise City, the capital of Idaho, this 7th day of March, A. D. 1919, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and forty-third.

[SEAL.] ROBERT O. JONES,
Secretary of State.

House joint memorial 16.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent that—

Whereas the course of the Clearwater River and its tributaries traveled by Lewis and Clark in their early explorations of the Pacific Northwest afford a logical water-grade route for a State highway across the north central portion of Idaho; and

Whereas the construction of a suitable wagon road on a water grade over which auto trucks and general travel can be operated up the main Clearwater River in Nez Perce, Clearwater, Lewis, and Idaho Counties, State of Idaho, beginning at the city of Lewiston and extending to the town of Kooskia, and thereby connecting with a proposed road beginning at the town of Kooskia and extending thence up the South Fork of the Clearwater River to the gold-mining districts of Elk City, Dixie, and Buffalo Hump, is a public and national necessity; and

Whereas a suitable wagon road on water grade up the Clearwater River and between the city of Lewiston and the town of Kooskia would be a great convenience to a large section of country devoted to agriculture, lumbering, and mining; and

Whereas such highway would serve the three national forests of Clearwater, Selway, and Nez Perce and render accessible productive but sparsely settled communities in the vicinity thereof; and

Whereas where said route has been designated by the State Highway Commission of the State of Idaho for the location of a State highway, to be known as the Lewis and Clark State highway; and

Whereas such a highway is a necessary link in a thoroughfare extending from Missoula, Mont., to the Pacific coast, on which construction work is now under way at various points; and

Whereas such highway would serve the Nez Perce Indian Reservation and nontaxable lands included therein and now held in trust for the Indians by the Federal Government; and

Whereas said proposed highway on water grade up the main branch of the Clearwater River between the city of Lewiston and the town of Kooskia would serve the towns and communities located around Lapwai, Arrow Junction, Myrtle, Lenore, Agatha, Peck, Ahsahka, and all country lying up the South, Middle, and North Forks of the Clearwater River, in which particular sections there are vast areas of most valuable timberland belonging to the State of Idaho and unpatented lands belonging to the Federal Government, comprising the largest compact body of white pine in the United States; the town of Orofino and all the country located around Weippe, Pierce City, Greer, Pardee, Woodland, Kamiah, and Kooskia, all known to be agricultural, timber, and mining sections, and with transportation yielding a large output of all of these commodities and would furnish added means of employment to our returning soldiers, sailors, and marines; and

Whereas the development of mining, lumbering, and agricultural pursuits along said main Clearwater River requires the construction of a standard highway, and the cost thereof, for the reason aforesaid, would be a heavy burden upon the taxpayers of the several highway districts and counties along said route without State and Federal assistance in the construction thereof; and

Whereas such a highway would not only be a great benefit in the opening up of the several districts mentioned, but would ultimately be extended and be another artery or highway extending into the heart of one of the largest sections of the country in the northern part of the State of Idaho, connecting with the north and south State highway, and would be of great benefit to the Government in its forest protection and operation, and would also open up vast timberlands and would be a great accommodation to thousands of citizens of Idaho along said route or adjacent thereto: Now, therefore, be it hereby

Resolved, That we, your memorialists, do recommend that $500,000 be appropriated by the Congress of the United States, to be expended through the Office of Public Roads, in cooperation with the State highway commission of the State of Idaho, toward the cost of construction of said Lewis and Clark State highway; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this memorial be sent to each of the members of the congressional delegation from the State of Idaho to the Congress of the United States and to each body of said Congress.

This house joint memorial passed the house on the 21st day of February, 1919.

House joint memorial 12.

To the Congress of the United States:

Your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent that—

Whereas the stock buyers and packers operating in the Pacific Northwest in their purchases from farmers and stockmen before the war made a distinction in the price of cow beef and steer beef from 75 cents to $1 on the hundred in favor of the latter and sold the same to the consuming public without distinction of price, and since the commencement of the war have paid to the producer a difference of $5 per hundred in the two classes of beef, but have continued to sell cow beef to the consumer at the price of steer beef; and

Whereas we condemn this form of profiteering among the many other forms practiced by the packers and stock buyers: Now, therefore,

Your memorialists respectfully petition that Congress authorize an investigation with a view to correcting this evil so that the producer may not be unjustly discriminated against, and that the consumer will not have to pay the top price for inferior grade.

The secretary of state is hereby instructed to forward copies of this memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, and copies of the same to our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

This house joint memorial passed the house on the 17th day of February, 1919.

Senate joint memorial 12.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United State of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent that—

Whereas during the year 1910 N. B. Pettibone entered into a four-year contract with the Government of the United States for the carrying of the mails from Stites, Idaho, to Elk City, Idaho, a distance of approximately 60 miles; and

Whereas sometime after the entering into said contract the parcel-post system was established by the Government, thereby rendering the sending of packages by mail much cheaper than by freight or express for the distance involved; and

Whereas the mails were so increased by reason of the cheap parcel-post rate, the mines even sending out their ores and concentrates by mail and shipping in their supplies in the same way, thus compelling N. B. Pettibone to more than double his equipment and service in order to carry out his contract; and

Whereas in spite of this great financial burden forced upon him by circumstances over which he had no control, a burden so great that it entailed a loss of many thousands of dollars, N. B. Pettibone did not repudiate his contract with the Government, but faithfully carried it out, the Government reaping the benefit of his personal sacrifice:

Now, therefore, your memorialists urgently request that the Congress of the United States pass a relief bill for the benefit of N. B. Pettibone to the amount of the loss sustained by N. B. Pettibone in the carrying out of his contract with the Government.

That the secretary of state of the State of Idaho is hereby instructed to forward this memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, and that copies be sent to the Senators and Representatives in Congress from this State.

This joint memorial passed the senate on the 3d day of March, 1919.

I, Robert O. Jones, secretary of state of the State of Idaho, do hereby certify that the annexed is a full, true, and complete transcript of house joint memorial No. 7, by Givens and Featherstone, which was filed in this office on the 1st day of March, A. D. 1919, and admitted to record.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State. Done at Boise City, the capital of Idaho, this 4th day of March, A. D. 1919, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and forty-third.

[SEAL.] ROBERT O. JONES,
Secretary of State.

House joint memorial 7.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent that—

Whereas postwar and reconstruction conditions have brought these United States of America many problems of great import, and perhaps one of the greatest importance is the question of Government control or ownership of the railways of the United States; and

Whereas our President has turned to Congress for counsel on this momentous subject, admitting his inability to solve the problem; and

Whereas the management of the railroads by the Government under the present arrangement has not been productive of efficient service to the public, and would not be satisfactory in times of peace, and a continuation of the present course would create and continue unsatisfactory economic conditions throughout the United States; and

Whereas we feel that the Congress of the United States will, by being informed by public sentiment, be better able to solve and direct the course of the problem, and recognizing the necessity of relinquishing control of the railroads as quickly as possible, and the certainty of conditions that said release of the railroads by the Federal Government would immediately establish: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Idaho, That we favor the return of the railroads to their owners as immediately as it can be accomplished without confusion or losses; be it further

Resolved, That we believe and think private ownership, under strong Government control and regulation, in service, income, and disbursements is desirable, and we do not believe Federal Government ownership of railroads is for the better interests of the people at this time; be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of state of the State of Idaho forward properly authenticated copies of this resolution to each United States Senator and Member of Congress for their consideration, and a copy to the chief clerks of the house of representatives and the senate of each State.

This house joint memorial passed the house on the 17th day of February, 1919.

Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives.

Mr. NUGENT presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Idaho, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE OF IDAHO.
DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

I, Robert O. Jones, secretary of state of the State of Idaho, do hereby certify that the annexed is a full, true, and complete transcript of house joint memorial 6, by Patterson and Weeks, which was filed in this office on the 18th day of February, A. D. 1919, and admitted to record.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State. Done at Boise City, the capital of Idaho, this 26th day of February, A. D. 1919, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and forty-third.

[SEAL.] ROBERT O. JONES,
Secretary of State.

House joint memorial 6.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the House of Representatives and Senate of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent that—

Whereas the area within the county of Valley, State of Idaho, commonly known as the Thunder Mountain country, consisting of approximately 1,120,000 acres of unreserved and unappropriated public land, of which not to exceed 1 per cent is agricultural in character, the balance being rich in natural resources, consisting of extensive bodies of commercial timber, ore deposits, water-power possibilities, wild game, and grasses and other forage suited to the growing of live stock; and

Whereas nearly 350,000 acres of this area have been swept by forest fires during the past 14 years, destroying approximately 700,000,000 feet of timber; the mineral and water power possibilities of the region are lying dormant and unproductive through lack of transportation facilities and means of communication; the wild life is being exterminated; grazing lands devastated by nomadic herds to the detriment of the property owners and residents of this State, and the area is contributing little or nothing to the support of the county or State government or to the wealth of the surrounding communities; and

Whereas the inclusion of the said area within a national forest would eliminate the annual destruction of timber by forest fire; make it possible for homestead settlers to secure title to their lands under the forest homestead act of June 11, 1906, without expense to them other than entry and final proof fees and without the necessity of awaiting public wagon roads, trails, bridges, and telephone lines; give adequate system of regulated range use, thus conserving and perpetuating the forage resources for the benefit of the local residents and taxpayers; make it possible for the State to realize upon its equity in the lands by relinquishing the unsurveyed school lands (sections 16 and 36) and selecting more valuable lands elsewhere; increase the revenues of the county and State through the receipt of 35 per cent of the gross receipts collected by the Forest Service; enlarge the power of the State to share in the benefits of the Federal aid road act, and otherwise assist in opening to development and use the vast natural resources of the Thunder Mountain region: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, your memorialists, earnestly request and recommend that action be initiated by your honorable body to create a national forest from the following-described area within the county of Valley, State of Idaho, commonly known as the Thunder Mountain region: Beginning at a point where the Middle Fork of the Salmon River crosses the south line of section 29, T. 14 N., R. 10 E., base meridian, unsurveyed, and extending thence west to the southeast corner of section 28, T. 14 N., R. 8 E., base meridian, unsurveyed; thence south 1 mile; thence west on the third standard parallel north, unsurveyed, to the southeast corner of section 33, T. 14 N., R. 7 E., base meridian, unsurveyed; thence north to the township line between Ts. 18 and 19 N.; thence west 3 miles; thence north 6 miles; thence west 3 miles; thence north 12 miles to the fifth standard parallel north; thence east on said parallel to the Middle Fork of Salmon River; thence up the Middle Fork of Salmon River to the place of beginning.

The secretary of state of the State of Idaho is hereby instructed to forward a copy of this memorial to each of the members of the congressional delegation from the State of Idaho to the Congress of the United States.

This house joint memorial passed the house on the 8th day of February, 1919.

M. A. KIGER,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

This house joint memorial passed the senate on the 14th day of February, 1919.

C. C. MOORE,
President of the Senate.

This house joint memorial received by the governor on the 18th day of February, 1919, at 10 o'clock a. m. and approved by him on the 18th day of February, 1919.

D. W. DAVIS, Governor.

I hereby certify that the within house joint memorial 6 originated in the house of representatives during the fifteenth session of the Legislature of the State of Idaho.

DAVID BURRELL,
Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives.

Mr. ROBINSON presented a petition of the Phillips County Teachers' Association, of Arkansas, and a petition of the Commercial Club of Marianna, Ark., praying for the establishment of a department of education, which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. TOWNSEND presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Michigan, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House concurrent resolution 11.

A concurrent resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States to cooperate with the Dominion of Canada in the enlarged canalization of the St. Lawrence River for the passage of ocean going vessels into the Great Lakes, thus connecting the heart of the continent with both the coastwise and foreign commerce of the high seas.

Whereas the public's right to have the waterways so improved and so used as to return the fullest benefit to the people, in the reduction of distribution costs, is a natural right that should be developed by the improvement of the waterways systems so far as such improvement is economically wise;

Whereas the connection of the Great Lakes with tide water so as to admit the passage of ocean going vessels to the heart of the continent enabling the empire of the Central West to reach the markets of the world without breaking bulk would in the opinion of this body be of inestimable value and economic importance;

Whereas the extent to which the Great Lakes region and those rich vast sections are to serve the world in ores, grain, butter, meats, live stock and manufactures, depends upon reaching the markets of the world at a minimum cost and her ability to load her products at ports on the Great Lakes and send them to every market of the world without breaking bulk;

Whereas in view of the serious experiences of our country with congestion of traffic upon our railroads and at Atlantic seaports during the stress of war, and now under the strain of peace, any movement to bring the "Atlantic to the heart of the continent" becomes a matter of vital economic importance;

Whereas the Government of Canada has now under construction, and well along toward completion, a ship canal extending from Port Colburn on Lake Erie, a distance of 25 miles, to Port Weller on Lake Ontario, with locks of sufficient capacity to accommodate ships of 30 feet draft, 800 feet in length, and 80 feet wide;

Whereas work on this canal, which was suspended during the war has now been resumed, and will be carried on to completion as rapidly as possible;

Whereas the remaining link in the chain to be completed necessary to admit ocean-going vessels to the ports of the Great Lakes is the enlarged canalization of the St. Lawrence River from Montreal west; and

Whereas the improvement of the St. Lawrence River, as aforesaid, can only be done through cooperation with the Dominion of Canada: Now, therefore, be it Resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of Michigan (the Senate concurring), That we earnestly and urgently petition the Congress of the United States to take such steps as may be deemed best and most expeditious looking to the early enlarged canalization of the St. Lawrence River by joint arrangement with the Dominion of Canada, so as to admit the passage of ocean going vessels, thus connecting the Great Lakes with tidewater via the St. Lawrence River and Welland Canal, now being completed by the Government of Canada.

Mr. TOWNSEND presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Michigan, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House concurrent resolution 14.

Concurrent resolution requesting the Congress of the United States to enact legislation preventing the return to the United States of any German or Austrian who has been engaged in opposition to the United States or its Allies; and that all alien enemies interned in this country be deported and forever debarred from returning.

Whereas many thousands of Germans and Austrians formerly living in the United States, some of whom had already become citizens of this country, returned to Germany and Austria to fight with the armies of those countries against the allied forces, and against the principles and ideals for which our Government stands;

Whereas it is reported, and it is the common belief, that many of these same Germans and Austrians are already planning to return to this country, now that they can no longer fight in those foreign lands in opposition to this Government and its institutions; and

Whereas we believe it to be a gross injustice to our own loyal citizens, and a most serious menace to society, to permit the unrestricted return of men who are alien in thought, in word, and in deed to every good thing for which our Government stands: Therefore be it

Resolved by the house of representatives (the senate concurring), That the Congress of the United States is hereby earnestly requested promptly to enact legislation which will effectually prevent the return to the United States, for any purpose whatever, of any German reservist or any other person who has been in any manner engaged in opposition to the United States or to any of its Allies; and be it further

Resolved, That we hereby request also the enactment of legislation providing that all alien enemies interned in this country for pernicious activity against the United States shall, as soon as possible, be deported and forever debarred from returning to this country.

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be transmitted to the Senate and to the House of Representatives of the United States and to the Michigan Members of Congress.

Mr. TOWNSEND presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Michigan, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House concurrent resolution 16.

Concurrent resolution respectfully urging the Congress of the United States to enact legislation providing for the payment of each discharged soldier, sailor, and marine of a bonus in addition to his regular pay and allowance.

Whereas the soldiers, sailors, and marines now in the service of the United States are being demobilized in large numbers, and large numbers of them are and will be temporarily out of employment, owing to the readjustment of industrial conditions: Therefore, be it

Resolved by the house of representatives (the senate concurring), That we respectfully urge the Congress of the United States to pass, with all possible speed, legislation providing for the payment of each discharged soldier, sailor, and marine now in the service of the Nation of a bonus in addition to his regular pay and allowances; and be it further

Resolved, That these resolutions be transmitted to the respective clerks of the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States Congress and also to each of the Members of the Michigan delegation therein.

Mr. TOWNSEND presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Michigan, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House concurrent resolution 17.

Concurrent resolution calling upon the Senators and Representatives of the State of Michigan in the Congress of the United States to favor an appropriation sufficiently large to secure the early eradication of the European corn borer in the State of Massachusetts.

Whereas a destructive insect known as the European corn borer has appeared in eastern Massachusetts, where it is confined to an area of some 340 square miles;

Whereas this insect, which is not known to exist in any other section of the United States, attacks not only the corn crop but oats, potatoes, beets, beans, tomatoes, and nearly all of the vegetables, and which, if allowed to spread to the potato, corn, bean, and beet fields of Michigan and other Western States, will cause incalculable damage, there being no effectual way of protecting the same; and

Whereas a commission selected by the Massachusetts State Board of Agriculture has reported that the sum of $500,000 will be required to exterminate this pest, which amount has been approved by the American Plant Pest Committee and by the national conventions of entomologists and of the State commissioners and secretaries of agriculture: Therefore be it

Resolved by the house of representatives (the senate concurring), That we respectfully request and urge the Members of Congress from Michigan to favor an appropriation of $500,000, as called for by Senate bill No. 5290, to be used for the purpose of exterminating this insect before it has time to spread from its present limits; and be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of the senate and the clerk of the house are hereby instructed to transmit to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress a copy of this resolution.

Mr. TOWNSEND presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Michigan, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House concurrent resolution 19, memoralizing the President of the United States, the Congress of the United States, and the United States Railroad Administration relative to the matter of freight rates on materials for public works.

Whereas many public improvements for which there is an imperative need have been postponed on account of the existence of a state of war between the United States of America and the Imperial German Government, and in order that the energies of the people might be directed unreservedly toward the winning of the war;

Whereas one of the greatest problems confronting the State and Nation at the present time is the furnishing of immediate employment to a large amount of idle labor released from other activities by the victorious termination of the war;

Whereas the national administration has urgently requested the resumption of the construction of public works on a large scale, the Congress of the United States is proposing to appropriate large sums of money for such purpose, the governors of many States have recommended and are engaged in procuring other large appropriations for the same purpose, and minor political subdivisions are preparing to liberally finance public improvements of great magnitude;

Whereas in the judgment of the Legislature of the State of Michigan the problem of furnishing immediate and profitable employment to idle labor can best be solved by immediately embarking upon the construction of the many much-needed public improvements which have been delayed by war conditions;

Whereas in the judgment of the Legislature of the State of Michigan freight rates on materials designated for use in constructing public works should be immediately reduced, and any increase in the same will defeat its own purposes by forcing a curtailment of shipments, and at the same time, by discouraging the movement for a program of public improvements, render futile all efforts to give employment to idle labor; and

Whereas one of the greatest and most serious obstacles to the immediate resumption of activity in the construction of public work is the present high freight rates on materials, and, more especially, certain proposed revisions and readjustments of such freight rates, which proposed revisions and readjustments create a situation of uncertainty, making it impossible for engineers to intelligently estimate the cost of public works, and making it impossible for contractors to bid thereon: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the house of representatives (the senate concurring), That the President of the United States, the Congress of the United States, and the United States Railroad Administration be, and they are hereby, memorialized, and respectfully but most urgently requested to take such action as will immediately and effectively prevent any upward revision in the freight rates upon materials entering into the construction of public works; and

Resolved, That if in the judgment of the proper authorities of the National Government charged with the administration of such matters the employment of idle labor in the construction of public improvements is a matter of importance, and if in the judgment of such officials it be not incompatible with the general welfare, there be forthwith made a reduction in the freight rates upon all materials transported over the railroads of the United States for use in connection with the construction of any public improvement carried forward by the Federal Government or any department thereof, or any State, county, township, city, village, school district, or other political subdivision; and

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be forthwith forwarded to the President of the United States, the presiding officers, and Members from Michigan of both branches of the Congress of the United States, and the Director General of Railroads.

Mr. TOWNSEND presented a resolution adopted by the Legislature of the State of Michigan, which was referred to the Committee on Civil Service and Retrenchment and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House concurrent resolution 21.

Concurrent resolution indorsing the McKellar-Keating civil-service retirement bill in the Federal Congress.

Whereas a bill known as the "McKellar-Keating civil-service retirement bill" was pending in Congress at the time of the adjournment of the sixty-fifth session;

Whereas had such bill become a law the United States Government could, in the interest of humanity, provide a retirement system for its faithful employees who have grown feeble from age in the public service;

Whereas we believe that such relief should be afforded those upon whom the weight of a lifetime of arduous service has materially impaired their further usefulness in the public service; and

Whereas the said bill will be reintroduced in the Sixty-sixth Congress: Therefore be it

Resolved by the house of representatives (the senate concurring), That we heartily indorse the above-named bill, or one drawn along similar lines, making adequate provisions for the retirement of civil-service employees of the Federal Government; and be it further

Resolved, That the United States Senators and Representatives from Michigan in the Sixty-sixth Congress be, and are hereby, respectfully requested to give such measure their hearty support; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the President of the Senate and Speaker of the House of Representatives and to each Senator and Representative in Congress from this State.

Mr. TOWNSEND presented a petition of Springwells Lodge, No. 1620, Loyal Order of Moose, of Detroit, Mich., praying for an increase in the salaries of letter carriers, which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

Mr. SHERMAN presented a petition of sundry citizens of the State of Illinois, praying for the repeal of the so-called daylight-saving law, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. NEWBERRY. I present a petition signed by Charles W. Ryan, mayor, and a large number of citizens of Battle Creek, Mich., requesting that the American soldiers in northern Russia be immediately returned to the United States. I move that the petition be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. COLT presented a resolution adopted at a meeting of the Rhode Island Congregational Conference at Providence, R. I., favoring the enactment of legislation providing for the enforcement of the constitutional amendment for national prohibition, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. LODGE presented petitions of sundry citizens of Salem, Cambridge, South Braintree, and Fitchburg, all in the State of Massachusetts, praying for the self-determination of Ireland, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented petitions of sundry citizens of Pittsfield, Springfield, Mattapan, Milton, Acushnet, Bedford, Greenfield, Buckland, Fall River, Cambridge, and South Yarmouth, all in the State of Massachusetts, and of the New England Labor Conference, praying for the ratification of the league of nations treaty, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. WADSWORTH presented a petition of sundry citizens of Jamestown, N. Y., praying for the repeal of the so-called luxury tax, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. McLEAN presented petitions of Bridgewater Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, of New Milford; Ministers' Alliance of Hartford; Brooks Club of Trinity Church, of New Haven; the First Universalist Church of New Haven; East Hampton Grange, of East Hampton; St. Paul's Rectory, of Willimantic; St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church, of New Haven; congregation of St. John's Church, of Pine Meadow; Bakersville Methodist Episcopal Church, of Bakersville; Mansfield Grange, No. 64, of Storrs; of the Lithuanian Society of Naugatuck; St. Paul's Episcopal Church, of Southington, St. Thomas Parish, of Bethel; congregation of Trinity Episcopal Church, of Collinsville; Higganum Grange, No. 124, Patrons of Husbandry, of Higganum; East Hartford Grange, No. 37, of East Hartford; of Washington Council, No. 7, Order of United American Mechanics, of New Haven; Woman's Club of Windsor; the Civic Federation of New Haven; St. Andrew's Episcopal Society of Thompsonville; Federation of Churches of Middletown; Local Union No. 79, of New Haven; board of directors of the West Haven Chamber of Commerce, of West Haven; Methodist Episcopal Church of Woodbury; council of the Connecticut Federation of Churches, of Middletown; of the Congregational Church of North Woodbury; and of the New Haven Association of Kindergartners, of New Haven, all in the State of Connecticut, praying for the ratification of the league of nations treaty, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

POSTAGE RATES ON NEWSPAPERS.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, I have here a copy of resolutions which were adopted by the Publishers' Association of New York City, representing the daily newspapers of New York and Brooklyn. They are very brief, and I ask that they be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Finance.

There being no objection, the resolutions were referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Resolutions adopted by the Publishers' Association of New York City, representing the daily newspapers of New York and Brooklyn, Wednesday, May 21, 1919.

Resolved, That Congress be urged to repeal the act of October 3, 1917, fixing postage rates on newspapers and other publications. It was advanced as a war measure. The urgency of any revenue-producing measure at the time the bill was considered prevented its careful consideration. Haste was requisite, and in consequence the law is faulty, burdensome, discriminating, and against public welfare.

The act is an injustice to publishers. It is not intelligently framed and does not serve the purpose of the Government or of the people. It is particularly a hardship upon the newspaper industry. The rates and regulations imposed are a burden to newspaper publishers and harass them in the conduct of their business. Many long-standing rules, trade customs, traditions, and precedents of the newspaper business are overridden and opposed by the law. The provision taxing advertising has resulted in what has long been regarded as editorial matter being labeled advertising and taxed. The enforcement of the law has embarrassed the relations between publishers and readers, and constant annoyance has been caused by the decisions of the Post Office Department in this and other respects.

The zoning provision of the law as framed has hampered and embarrassed newspapers in the dissemination of news, the distribution of which should be facilitated in every particular as a matter of public education and welfare. Newspapers published in the larger cities, with their facilities for gathering and printing the news, can adequately meet the demand of the public for important information of the events of the day. The provisions of the law restrict the distribution of daily newspapers of large circulation and shut off from millions of people the news of important events of the world.

The American Expeditionary Forces abroad, under the ruling of the Post Office Department, are placed in the eighth postal zone. As a result newspapers sent to our soldiers in foreign service carry the heaviest postage that can be imposed under the law. Newspapers thus distributed are sent out without profit, and the rate of postage on such newspapers should be at the minimum figure. Publishers make special arrangements for wrapping and dispatching newspapers to soldiers of the American Expeditionary Forces and are glad to do so as an act of patriotism, but the law has imposed a penalty upon publishers, forcing them to pay extra postage on news of home events sent to United States soldiers and sailors.

Resolved, That Congress be asked to appoint a committee to investigate rates, the transportation and distribution of second-class mail matter, the actual cost of the second-class mail service and the proportion which should be charged to newspaper distribution and to transportation, the inefficient space system now in vogue in the Railway Mail Service, the irregularity and late running of newspaper mail trains.

The present system of transportation and distribution is inadequate for the requirements of the newspaper business. It imposes burdens upon publishers and subscribers and involves unnecessary delay in the distribution of newspapers throughout the country. The physical conditions of the Post Office Department prevent prompt and efficient distribution and delivery, the systems prevailing for many years still being in operation, with few and in many cases no improvements.

The late running of mail trains results in dealers not receiving their bundles of newspapers in time for delivery, and as a consequence publishers are forced to allow heavy credits to out-of-town newsdealers for unsold copies because of loss of sales. Subscriptions are discontinued for the same cause. The Publishers' Association suggest a plan similar to parcel-post insurance to protect publishers against this unwarranted loss for which they are not responsible. Newspapers have become indispensable to the community, and the present inefficiency of the Railway Mail Service in the delivery of newspapers should and can be improved. The use of mail bags for outside mail delivery to newsdealers is suggested. This would save large credits now allowed by publishers to newsdealers for newspapers damaged in transit on postal cars, due frequently to the necessity of hasty work on the part of mail clerks and often to carelessness.

Resolved, That Congress be requested to make a particular investigation of the conditions in the New York territory, where, more than elsewhere in the United States, conditions are greatly congested because of the enormous circulation of New York newspapers and the inadequate machinery provided at railway terminals. The distribution from New York is around but little more than half a circle, owing to the situation of New York on the Atlantic Ocean, being confined to the northeast, north, northwest, west, and southwest.

Resolved, That Congress be asked, after the investigation requested in these resolutions, to enact legislation providing for the postal requirements of newspapers, which have far outgrown the transportation and distributing facilities now provided under the law.

VOCATIONAL AGRICULTURAL SCHOOL.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, I present a letter from the president of the board of education of Floyd County, Ga., discussing and making valuable suggestions with reference to the application of our educational training in America to the rural schools. I think the letter will be very useful, and I ask that it be printed as a public document.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection it is so ordered.

INTERVIEW BY HENDRIK CHRISTIAN ANDERSEN.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, I present, and ask to have printed in the RECORD without reading, a news dispatch from the New York World of March 17, 1919, with reference to a visit by the President to the Vatican and an interview by Hendrik Christian Andersen following that visit.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Illinois? The Chair hears none.

The matter referred to is as follows:

[New York World, Monday, Mar. 17, 1919. By Beatrice Baskerville, staff correspondent of the World. Copyright, 1919, by Press Publishing Co. Special cable dispatch to the World.]

ROME, March 16, 1919.

What passed between the Pope and President Wilson when he was received at the Vatican has been the subject of much speculation. Hendrik Christian Andersen, the famous American sculptor, to-day told me of the impression President Wilson made on the Pope as described by his holiness.

"I was surprised by President Wilson's keen interest in his league of nations," said the Pope to Mr. Andersen. "He was so simple and frank that I liked him immediately. I must say that when I first heard talk about the league of nations I did not feel enthusiastic, but President Wilson put the matter so clearly that my doubts began to melt, and before our interview closed I agreed with him on the main lines of his plan. The President struck me as being far more interested in his league of nations than in fixing the frontiers of the newly created States. He could talk of nothing else and converted me to his ideals."

Mr. Andersen conceived the idea more than 20 years ago of an international city as the nucleus of a league of nations and of world peace. Now he has every detail of the city's plans perfected, even to the heating and lighting. President Wilson, Col. House, and Premier Lloyd-George have expressed great interest in Mr. Andersen's international city, which he proposes should be erected in Belgium. The Pope was anxious to see Mr. Andersen, to whom he presented a gold medal after two and a half hours' talk. The Pope then said:

"This plan of yours interests me more because of my meeting with President Wilson."

CONDITIONS IN PANAMA.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, at the last session of Congress I had printed in the RECORD, through the then Senator from Kansas, Mr. Thompson, a letter from Brig. Gen. R. M. Blatchford, stationed on the Canal Zone, relating to alleged immoral conditions in the city of Panama. This drew from the President of the Republic of Panama a reply directed to former Senator Thompson in relation to the matter, which, in the spirit of justice for which this body stands, and to promote amity, which it is desirable to cultivate with the Republic of Panama, I think should also be inserted in the RECORD. I offer it for that purpose.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The communication referred to is as follows:

REPUBLICA DE PANAMA,
PRESIDENCIA,
Panama, April 2, 1919.

Senator WILLIAM HOWARD THOMPSON,
Washington, D. C.

MR. SENATOR: The publication in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of a letter addressed to you by the commanding general of the Canal Zone, Brig. Gen. R. M. Blatchford, and of a statement by Maj. Wells, Judge Advocate General, about alleged immoral conditions in the Canal Zone and in the cities of Panama and Colon has been received by all residents, native and foreign alike in this Republic, as the most unfair insult that this country could possibly receive from any source.

The indignation caused by such action is not principally due to Gen. Blatchford's comments on the morality of the people of Panama, since his remarks on the subject have already merited the protest of the leading bodies, political, social, and commercial, of the places affected, but because those remarks aggravated by Maj. Wells's report have been published at your request in the official organ of the Congress of the United States, placing them on record, and thus giving them a world-wide notoriety. Such action on your part simply means the most humiliating disregard for the position that Panama, although a very small nation, indeed, has assumed as a friend and ally of the United States, placing at that nation's disposition her territory, together with all her resources. The war has taught that nations need not be large nor powerful from the military point of view in order to be treated with the courtesies prevalent in international relations.

However high might be the position in the Government of the United States of Gen. Blatchford and Maj. Wells, their opinion as to the morals of the whole people of my country should have been received with the reserve demanded by the gravity of the imputations. It is, you will admit, no small talk to say that from an investigation made along the main thoroughfare of the capital city of the Republic of Panama only three women declined offers to sell their bodies, one of whom only did so on account of her husband being at home, thus reducing the number of honest women on that street to two. That statement is so stupendous that it can only be taken as another proof of the ignorance of Americans in general with reference to everything related to conditions in Latin America, and to the prejudices of certain high-seated officials whose positions should render them more diplomatic and discreet.

The main street of Panama in the section mentioned by Maj. Wells's report is lined by some of the best buildings in the city, occupied both for residential and commercial purposes. Among the people who occupy those houses are many of the best families of Panama and many foreigners of good standing. That section of the city can not be differentiated from any other main thoroughfare of any large city in the world, and being an artery of traffic in the day and a boulevard in the afternoon and evenings, naturally women of doubtful character frequent it just as they do the fashionable watering places, and the hotels, avenues, and boulevards of the great cities of America and Europe.

To judge by the presence of such women, who keep an orderly conduct, that 98 per cent of the women living along Central Avenue are prostitutes is a very uncalled for insult and shows lack of judgment in those who make such a statement.

Gen. Blatchford is perfectly right in his efforts to surround his soldiers with the most pure environments, but it must be borne in mind that Panama and Colon are two cities where travelers from all parts of the world arrive daily, and that the cosmopolitan population of those cities can not be kept within the bounds and regulations of an army camp. The native residents of these two cities never knew before 1903 what the use of drugs meant, and even with the deplorable sanitary conditions of the time, syphilis was not included in the epidemics that periodically visited them.

I wish to believe that it has only been your zeal for the welfare of the Army of your country that made you accept with such easiness the information that the portion of that Army stationed in the Canal Zone is living in an atmosphere of vice of the lowest sort, produced mainly by the women of Panama and Colon who are 98 per cent prostitutes. That is the only excuse that can be found for your readiness in putting on record communications that are a mark of infamy against a country where vice is found in common with the virtues that characterizes humanity all over the world.

If your motives have not been of an inexplicable hatred against Panama—and I can not possibly believe that this is the case—I am sure that a sentiment of chivalry and generosity will force you to request the Senate that, as a reparation, this letter to you be also placed on record, or that at least some mention should be made of my country's protest against the infamy so lavishly thrown on her.

My action in addressing myself to you is more than justified, and I am confident that my words will merit your impartial consideration.

BELISARIO PORRAS.

JAPANESE CLAIMS IN CHINA, ETC.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I ask to have printed in the RECORD, without reading, certain dispatches which I have received from Chinese students, from certain Italian societies, and from some of our Jewish citizens in regard to massacres in Poland.

There being no objection, the dispatches were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SACRAMENTO, CALIF., May 18, 1919.

Senator HENRY CABOT LODGE,
Washington, D. C.:

We humbly request that you will use your good offices in the next opening of Congress to urge the United States Government to demand a reconsideration of the Chinese and Japanese claims to the territories of Tsingtau and Kiaochow and the acquisition of valuable privileges in the Province of Shantung. The unjust settlement of the claims to said territories and privileges in favor of Japan by the peace conference was not only a wrongful but also an outrageous act as well. It will tend to cause unending unrest and dissatisfaction in the Far East, which will eventually disturb the peace of all nations. We deeply regret that America was one of those countries who passed such a judgment on China. America has always taken the stand as champion of and guardian of the integrity of China, and has always been China's right-hand friend. Will America, after enjoying for so many years the faithful trust and confidence of the Chinese people, relinquish her hold on the Chinese hearts and repudiate her traditional stand by joining hands with other nations to make presents of Chinese territories? We did not go to war against Germany's militarism in order to help establish Japanese militarism, but to make the world safe for democracy. Will America, the champion of liberty, then, give her sanction to the aggressive wishes of Japan? We humbly ask that you will voice our sentiments before the coming Congress and use your good offices to help us out in this struggle.

SACRAMENTO CHINESE STUDENTS' ASSOCIATION,
By WILLIAM H. FONG, President.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., May 20, 1919.

Senator HENRY C. LODGE,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

Fifty thousand sons of Italy, residents of Pennsylvania, always faithful to their adopted country, ask the American Senate to recommend the peace conference to recognize Italian Adriatic claims, won with half a million lives given on the battle field for the great cause of justice and freedom. All Italians of America look to the American Congress for justice to their former country.

JOSEPH A. DI SILVESTRO,
Grand Venerable,
Seventh and Christian Streets.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., May 21, 1919.

Senator HENRY C. LODGE,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

The blood of a million Italians fallen on the battle field for the cause of freedom and justice demands that the peace conference would recognize Italy's Adriatic claims. Will not American countries support a valiant, faithful ally?

ETTORE MARTINI,
President Italia Irredenta,
925 Pine Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

ANN ARBOR, MICH., May 21, 1919.

MEMBERS OF THE SENATE,
Washington, D. C.

GENTLEMEN: We, the undersigned citizens of China, hereby protest against the contemplated disposal of Kiaochow and the rights thereof as expressed in section 5 of the treaty of peace just presented to Germany as a step that commits an outrage against the sovereignty of China and which strikes a vital blow against the interests and national rights of 400,000,000 people. We most earnestly appeal for your concerted opposition to the project in the name of international justice and for the everlasting friendship of our country and the United States.

CHINESE CITIZENS' ALLIANCE OF MICHIGAN AND CHINESE STUDENTS' CLUB OF UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN.

BURLINGTON, VT., May 21, 1919.

HENRY CABOT LODGE,
Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee,
Washington, D. C.

In the name of God, and for the sake of humanity, we beseech you, Mr. LODGE, to say a word of protest that may stop the murderous and savage atrocities of the Polish, Slovaks, and Roumanians against the Jewish people in their land. Will America meet the Governments of these nations on equal basis of fellowship without a word of justice against their—Polish, Slovaks, Roumanians—aiding, permitting, and instigating organized robbery and murder of the Jews?

BETHEL LODGE, K. OF P.,
HENRY BURMAN,
G. GAFINOWITZ, and
F. BAYARSKY,
Committee.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., May 19, 1919.

Senator LODGE,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

Pursuant to an unanimous resolution passed at a conference of 175 organizations representing 200,000 Jews of Philadelphia, held at the Continental Hotel on Sunday evening, May 18, we appeal to the American Congress upon the beginning of its important labors to protest against the massacres of great numbers of Jews in over 100 cities and villages in Poland. Every day brings harrowing news of fresh massacres. The very existence of the entire Jewish population is threatened. We appeal to the American Congress to voice its protest with the existing Polish Government and the peace conference, so that these outrages cease now and be prevented in the future.

PHILADELPHIA CONFERENCE FOR THE DEFENSE OF JEWS IN POLAND.
M. KASS, Chairman.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, in connection with the request made by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE], I ask to have printed in the RECORD an interview with Viscount Ishii, the ambassador of Japan to the United States, as published in the Christian Science Monitor on the same subject.

There being no objection, the interview was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

JAPAN'S ATTITUDE IN CHINA DEFENDED—VISCOUNT ISHII IN INTERVIEW DECLARES ACTION OF THE PEACE CONFERENCE ACCORDS WITH THE RIGHTS EXISTING BY TREATY.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Viscount Kikujiro Ishii, Japanese ambassador to the United States, capped the flow of opinions and sentiment recently expressed by Baron Goto and other prominent Japanese here and elsewhere in this country by explaining in an interview yesterday why, from the Japanese standpoint, the peace conference had sustained their position, and announcing that Japan is in accord with the United States with regard to the policy of the open door and equal opportunity in China and in Siberia also.

"I am an optimist about the relations between Japan and the United States, whatever may be the tone of the press, because there is no real conflict of interest," said Viscount Ishii. "The only important question now is with regard to China, especially in regard to the so-called Shantung question. The best way to treat this question is to expose before the American public the true facts of the case, as the facts explain themselves.

"In 1898 China granted to Germany a 99-year leasehold of Kiaochow, in the Province of Shantung. The lease included the Bay of Kiaochow and its surrounding district, together with mining concessions along the Tsing-tau-Tsinan Railway, which railway also was granted to Germany. Thus Germany acquired from China two kinds of concessions: First, the territorial leasehold; and, second, some concessions of an economic character.

"After Japan had driven the Germans from the Shantung Peninsula following a two months' siege, Japan took the initiative and offered to surrender to China the German leasehold upon the transfer to Japan, by right of conquest, of the said leased territory, being consented to by Germany in the peace conference. Japan's voluntary offer to restore it to China was, of course, of the greatest advantage to China, as China was entirely powerless to recover by her own means her territorial sovereignty in Shantung for 75 years more.

"The treaty of 1915 placed China in a position to recover this important advantage without sacrificing either blood or treasure. Therefore the treaty of 1915 was not an unfair transaction, but was exceptionally advantageous from China's point of view. So far as the territorial integrity of China is concerned, it is for these reasons entirely in favor of China.

"There remains the second kind of concession—the economic concession, which Japan was to retain in her hands, as in the days of German occupation. Here again Japan's good will toward China went so far as to offer to withdraw her civil and military administration from the railway zone by withdrawing troops and police forces and making the Shantung-Tsinan Railway a joint enterprise of Japan and China, instead of an absolutely foreign administration, as it was under the German occupation.

"That was the purport of the accord of September, 1918. Thus China acquired by the treaty of 1915 the recovery of her entire participation in the administration of the former German railway from Kiaochow to Tsinan.

"When Japan took possession of Kiaochow by force of arms in 1914, China remained neutral. Japan's action in Shantung even met with protest from China Since November, 1914, Japan has occupied Kiaochow and the railway zone from the port to Tsinan, the capital of the Province, by right of conquest. Three years afterwards, that is, in 1917, China declared war against Germany. But the declaration of war could not possibly change the state of things which had existed since 1914. Therefore the Chinese argument that China's declaration of war against Germany had, ipso facto, annulled the leasehold treaty of 1898 had no legal ground, in view of the fact that Japan had three years before China's declaration of war replaced Germany in Shantung. These are the plain facts, and I leave it to the American public to judge from these facts whether there was the least trace of unfairness on Japan's part in this perhaps overgenerous transaction with China.

"With the principle of the open door and equal opportunity, not only in China but in Siberia also, Japan is in hearty accord with the United States, and with the sincere and hearty cooperation of these two powers I can see no possible cause of conflict between them in the affairs of the Orient.

"Many Americans who have been in Korea have testified to the success of the Japanese administration in that country. Of course, in these days of the so-called self-determination of peoples there are some Koreans who aspire to independence. Japan is prepared to continue the good-hearted and benevolent administration in Korea, and with the development of the Koreans they will freely participate in the administration of their own country."

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, in reference to the telegrams presented by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE], as I understand, they are telegrams which are signed by foreigners.

Mr. LODGE. Not at all. They are all from citizens of this country——

Mr. JONES of Washington. Are they all from citizens of this country?

Mr. LODGE. They are, with the exception of the Chinese students.

Mr. JONES of Washington. We have a rule that—

No petition or memorial or other paper signed by citizens or subjects of a foreign power shall be received, unless the same be transmitted to the Senate by the President.

I think that that rule ought to be enforced.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair was about to call the attention of the Senator from Massachusetts to that rule, but he supposed the Senator knew of it, and was only presenting the memorials of citizens of the United States.

Mr. LODGE. The rule, of course, applies to the two telegrams from Chinese students in this country; they are not citizens of the United States; but it does not apply to our Italian or Jewish fellow citizens. Those telegrams are from citizens of the country. Of course, the telegrams from Ann Arbor from the Chinese students who are gathered there is obnoxious to the rule, if it is desired to enforce it.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, the rule would also apply to the printing in the RECORD of the interview with the ambassador from Japan, I think, which was presented by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HITCHCOCK].

Mr. HITCHCOCK. No; I think not. The rule is against the introduction of a petition from an alien, but I only asked for the publication of a newspaper interview with the ambassador from Japan, resident in the United States, relative to a matter in Japan.

ADDRESS OF JUDGE VON VALKENBERG.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I ask to have printed in the RECORD an address of Judge Arba S. Van Valkenberg, judge of the United States court for the western district of Missouri, in which he discusses the constitutionality of the league of nations.

There being no objection, the address was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

Address of Judge Arba S. Van Valkenberg, judge of the United States court for the western district of Missouri, delivered before the Kansas City Bar Association on May 17, 1919.

"I am impelled to enter upon this discussion of the cardinal and controlling features of this proposed constitution for a so-called league of nations by what I deem to be the imperative duty of American citizenship that when grave and fundamental changes in our organic law and radical departures from established and accepted policies and traditions of our Government are not only in contemplation but in imminent process of consummation no man should remain passive. No question more fateful, no matter more pregnant with grave consequences for our future has ever been presented for the consideration and determination of the people of this Republic. In such crises we must think for ourselves. We must summon to our aid all the powers of analysis and discrimination of which we are capable. We may not, if we are sincere in our love of country, if we are devoted to the blessings of liberty, if we are loyal to the sacrifices of the past and mindful of the welfare of the future, yield blind acquiescence to the opinion and judgment of others. No man now living has disclosed such prescience, such prophetic vision, and such infallible judgment that we may rely implicitly upon his decision without the exercise of our own God-given faculties in a matter which concerns us more vitally than anything in this life. Undoubtedly we should not disregard advice and information proffered, but we ourselves must apply the acid test for soundness and accuracy.

"Near the close of the eighteenth century our fathers emerged from the travail of revolution against the unwarranted exercise of arbitrary power. We established upon this continent a Government of free and independent States, absolved from all allegiance to and all political connection with any other government upon the face of the globe. In due time we adopted a Constitution whereby we established a Republic, in which the Government is vested in the people through representatives chosen by them. This was no blind experiment. It was an expression of the mature judgment and experience of the founders of this Nation, experienced in the ills of autocracy as they existed then and now and the opposite and equally objectionable extreme of mass rule undisciplined and unrestrained by legal sanctions and limitations; men imbued with an ardent love of individual freedom, of life, liberty, property, and the pursuit of happiness. And so we imported into our institutions as part of our patrimony religious liberty, freedom of speech, right of petition, right to bear arms, privileges and safeguards of liberty, wrested in past centuries by the English people from unwilling monarchs. We crystallized these blessings in our organic law, and we provided that these fundamental things could not be changed, except under such formalities and restrictions as should preclude hasty and ill-considered judgment.

"In that organic law or Constitution we declared that—

"We, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America.

"And in furtherance thereof we provided that—

"All legislative powers shall be vested in a Congress, consisting of a Senate and House of Representatives.

"The executive power shall be vested in a President.

"The judicial power shall be vested in a Supreme Court and in such inferior courts as the Congress may from time to time ordain and establish.

"These three departments of government were made distinct and supreme in their several spheres of action.

"We ordained that the Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises, to pay the debts, and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States.

"To regulate commerce with foreign nations.

"To establish an uniform rule of naturalization.

"To declare war.

"To raise and support armies.

"To provide and maintain a Navy.

"To make rules for the government and regulation of the land and naval forces.

"To make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers and all other powers vested in the Government of the United States.

"These powers are exclusive.

"The Executive shall have power, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to make treaties, provided two-thirds of the Senators present concur.

"It will not be denied that this Constitution was made exclusively for the government of this Republic; that no other people or peoples have either express or implied authority to change or abrogate it, nor to participate in its interpretation or application; nor have the people of the United States themselves, nor any officer thereof, except in the manner prescribed by its terms.

"The first administration of this Government under this organic law was intrusted to the man who has well been called the Father of his Country, because to him, more than to any other man, was due the final establishment of our liberties. He, more than any other, knew from experience and an almost divine inspiration the spirit and scope of our institutions and the need of this infant among the nations of the world. To him fell the duty of interpretation, guidance, and counsel, and under him and through him sprang up sound policies and traditions which have been accepted, treasured, and honored until this hour. If to any man, not of divine origin, may be attributed the gift of prophecy and of inspiration more than human that man is George Washington. We should never cease to return thanks for the care and watchfulness that he has exercised over this Nation, even in the spirit. His portrait should be hung in every American home as a reminder of the principles upon which this Government is founded and the duty of all who would protect their birthright. In his farewell, delivered at a time when he could possibly, as he says, have no personal motive to bias his counsel, he admonished us to support with strict loyalty the form of government created by the Constitution; to correct imperfections, if any, by amendment in the way designated therein; to permit no change by usurpation, although conceived to be the instrument of good, because such is the customary weapon by which free governments are destroyed, and the precedent must always greatly overbalance in permanent evil any partial or transient benefit which the use can at any time yield. He further counseled us against the insidious wiles of foreign influence; that we should have with foreign nations as little political connection as possible; that we should fulfill with good faith engagements already formed, but should not extend them; that taking care always to keep ourselves, by suitable establishments, on a respectable defensive posture, we may safely trust to temporary alliances for extraordinary emergencies.

"Under the beneficent guidance of this inspired wisdom this Nation has been governed for more than a century; through it and by it has risen to a plane of unexampled and acknowledged prosperity, power, and happiness. The ocean is not now so wide, our isolation is not so pronounced, the complexities of human life and interests are greater. But the underlying principles of this address, in so far as their application is possible, are as commanding and immutable as on the day when they were declared.

"A few years later, in fact nearly a century ago, there came into being a declaration of national policy, upon which this people have ever since insisted with unyielding tenacity, through all vicissitudes, under all circumstances, and in all negotiations and covenants with foreign Governments. I refer to the Monroe doctrine, first enunciated by President Monroe, December 2, 1823. He said:

"The occasion has been deemed proper for asserting, as a principle in which rights and interests of the United States are involved, that the American continents, by the free and independent condition which they have assumed and maintain, are henceforth not to be considered as subjects for future colonization by any European power. * * * We owe it, therefore, to candor and to the amicable relations existing between the United States and those powers to declare that we should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety. With the existing colonies or dependencies of any European power we have not interfered and shall not interfere. But with the governments who have declared their independence and maintain it, and whose independence we have, on great consideration and on just principles, acknowledged, we could not view any interposition for the purpose of oppressing them or controlling in any other manner their destiny by any European power in any other light than as the manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States.

"This policy, obviously adopted to protect us from foreign encroachment, the possibilities and imminence of invasion, the necessity for greater vigilance, and the establishment and maintenance of burdensome armaments and instrumentalities of war, has appealed so strongly to our sense of national security that no administration and no party till now has been inclined to minimize its importance, nor depart from it in letter or in spirit.

"Laying aside for the moment for future consideration the question of the treaty-making power so to do, I think this proposition will go undisputed and unchallenged, that we should not depart from any of these established and approved constitutional guaranties and traditional policies without the strongest reason; that we should abandon no national safeguard except under stress of dire necessity and the practical certainty of compensating benefit. I have purposely stated this proposition so broadly that I believe none who has the true interests of his country at heart can fail to accede to the statement. But we are about to surrender certain constitutional rights, and we are about to depart from cardinal traditional policies. The former I shall presently demonstrate, and the latter is substantially admitted.

"In his Metropolitan Opera House address of March 4 Mr. Taft said:

"Objection is made that the covenant of the league is a departure from the traditional policy of the United States following the advice of Washington in avoiding entangling alliances with European nations. The European war into which we were drawn demonstrates that the policy is no longer possible for the United States.

"Again, in speaking of the Monroe doctrine, he says:

"Objection is made that the covenant destroys the Monroe doctrine. * * * All will probably agree that the sum and substance of the Monroe doctrine is that we do not propose, in our own interest, to allow European nations or Asiatic nations to acquire, beyond what they now have, through war or purchase or intrigue, territory, political power, or strategical opportunity from the countries of this hemisphere.

Article 10 of the constitution of the league is intended to secure this to all signatory nations, except that it does not forbid purchase of territory or power.

"The ex-President makes a very good and comprehensive statement of the practical intendment of the Monroe doctrine, and he admits that the constitution of the league does not safeguard it in a very important particular. He does not add, what is patent upon the face of his own statement, that it does not protect from the acquisition of territory by foreign nations through intrigue, political power, and strategical opportunity. This statement was made preceding the address of President Wilson from the same platform. These and other statements of Mr. Taft received, presumably and actually, the favor and approval of the President. So that we may take these quotations as official utterances of the league sponsors. Other advocates and apologists have treated the Monroe doctrine as a scrap of paper, worthy only of consignment to the international wastebasket. Their utterances may not be accorded the same official significance, but all have the same practical effect. That the doctrine was marked for slaughter at the peace table is further evidenced by dispatches of March 28 that an amendment, inspired by American criticism, and offered to preserve our Monroe doctrine, in substance, if not in name, was not accepted, and that its future incorporation into the league constitution was improbable. Even Mr. Taft, in his practical abandonment of the doctrine, did suggest that he would favor its recognition by specific words in the covenant. If the Monroe doctrine, in its integrity, has been preserved in this proposed instrument, such action will be obviously due to the criticism which the proposal and its advocates have either invited or provoked and the conviction that has resulted therefrom.

"As I have said, our traditional policies, which have made and preserved us a Nation of commanding prosperity and power, should not be surrendered except for compelling, substantial, and unassailable reasons. The same is true of our constitutional guaranties and the power confided to the legislative department of this Government. This further, however, must be said of constitutional provisions: We may legally, even though unwisely, depart from or modify our political policies. We can not, except in the forms prescribed, take liberties with the Constitution. Not only would such action be unwise in principle and unsound in law, but it would be, in effect, an abandonment of the Constitution itself. Washington warned us steadily to discountenance irregular oppositions to its acknowledged authority and to resist with care the spirit of innovation upon its principles, however specious the pretexts. He said:

"One method of assault may be to effect, in the forms of the Constitution, alterations which will impair the energy of the system and thus to undermine what can not be directly overthrown.

"He said further:

"But let there be no change by usurpation, for though this in one instance may be the instrument of good, it is the customary weapon by which free governments are destroyed. The precedent must always greatly overbalance in permanent evil any partial or transient benefit which the use can at any time yield.

"One of the greatest dangers that can attend us is lightly to set aside a fixed provision of the Constitution at the suggestion of possible, or even probable, temporary advantage. It furnishes a plausible precedent and is the initial step toward a mental attitude which can result only in the ultimate repudiation and destruction of our entire political system.

"I take it that this much will be conceded: If the present plan, or any plan that may be advanced, contains features that are vitally and fatally defective, such features should be entirely removed or rendered harmless by modification and amendment; that if such features are not indispensable to the plan they should under no circumstances be retained; and that if the system can not exist without them, then the system itself must be abandoned, because no plan which offers only a doubtful, visionary, and, at best, meager and partial remedy for existing evils, if otherwise vicious and menacing, should not be allowed to stand.

"Practically all who have given this covenant thought and analysis, and who have approached the subject with a mind open to calm and dispassionate consideration, have agreed that substantial amendment is necessary. It was presented to us practically as an immaculate conception, and the great mass of its advocates have so treated it. I shall attempt merely an informal discussion, touching only upon such matters as seem to me to be determinative of a logical and patriotic attitude toward the entire subject matter. That anyone should approach such a subject in the spirit of dogmatism and intolerance seems inconceivable; and yet such has been the temper of the champions of this league. My own attitude is one of dual constraint. I am deeply sensible of the respect to be accorded to the views of men of undoubted ability and purity of motive, and I am reluctant to advance suggestions which may run counter to the yearnings and aspirations of humanity. Nevertheless he who would subordinate his convictions to such considerations brings nothing of value to the council. The question is in no sense one of political parties. As a distinguished speaker in this city recently said: 'The man who has no argument in favor of this league except that he is a Democrat, and the man who has no argument against it except that he is a Republican, is on the verge of mental bankruptcy.' So, also, the man who places sentiment above reason, and who reaches a conclusion solely upon the judgment of another but poorly discharges the obligations of citizenship.

"First, I wish to dispose of the argument—if it can be called an argument—advanced, perhaps, more than any other by league enthusiasts, namely, that no critic of the league has offered a single constructive suggestion to meet the situation. Mr. Taft states this as a poser. Coming from a lawyer, the suggestion is amusing. Disregarding the burden imposed upon the proponent of a system almost revolutionary in its nature, Mr. Taft would seem to undertake to establish his own title merely by the alleged weakness of his opponent. Of course, I take it, all will agree that the league must stand or fall by the soundness or unsoundness of its own provisions; whether it can accomplish, or is adapted to the accomplishment of, the only object which excuses its existence, and that is the prevention of war without disproportionate sacrifice to its component parts. It is not enough that the whole world hates war, as such, and longs to banish it. For that reason we should not take up with any nostrum or defective formula that may be urged as a remedy. The question is not whether anyone else has found a remedy. The burning query is whether the proponents of the league have found one. A moment's reflection exposes the absurdity of this type of argument.

"But I have no purpose to content myself with a negative position. The crisis to be met, as stated by Mr. Taft and others, is the unsettled conditions resulting from the late war, the establishment and maintenance of new nations carved out of old ones, the threat of Bolshevism and kindred evils, all endangering the present peace of the world and threatening to produce a recurrence of the contest unless some machinery may be invented by which Europe may be steadied and the peace agreed upon in the peace treaty shall be secured. I make no claim to inventive genius nor to extraordinary vision in matters of this nature, but it requires no unusual talent to discover in the situation as it exists and has existed since our entrance into the war that we have now, ready-made to our hand and already in operation, all the machinery we need to deal with the problems presented and to safeguard the present peace of the world quite as well as the proposed league, or any league, of nations could do it. We have already an association of the nations that won this war. That association is as close, as confidential, and as effectual as it could well be. Throughout the war we have persistently referred to England, France, Italy, and so forth, as allies, and to ourselves as an associate. No doubt this was done out of deference to the time-honored suggestion of Washington against alliances, which is now marked for the wastebasket. It matters not, however, by what name the relationship is called. The United States, Great Britain, France, Italy, and Japan, among the major powers, are and have been associated, allied, and leagued together to put down our enemies and win this war, and our job is not yet finished and will not be until we have settled terms of peace acceptable to us, deserved by the Central Powers, necessarily acceptable to others incidentally affected, and until we have taken such measures as will insure that those terms of peace will be carried out and duly observed. I am not one who believes that our mission was ended practically when the armistice was signed, and that the only action remaining to us is the repatriation of our troops, the demobilization of our forces, leaving to Europe the settlement of all matters incidental to the establishment of peace. This was our war. We were in it as a primary party. We were fighting for ourselves, not merely to help somebody else. Whatever sentimental reasons may have been assigned to appeal more strongly to the conscience and to the immagination, no matter that we may have welcomed the opportunity to relieve distress and advantage mankind as an incident to the struggle, the fact remains that we entered the war because Germany had invaded our rights and threatened our future safety, and that we would not have entered it otherwise. The preamble to the joint resolution of Congress begins thus: 'Whereas the Imperial German Government has committed repeated acts of war against the Government and the people of the United States of America.' That is the official statement of the grounds upon which we entered the contest. Furthermore, we had been awakened to the fact that the European conflict, as it then existed, was but the first step on the part of Germany to break through all initial resistance to her program, and ultimately, in defiance to the Monroe doctrine, to colonize South America at will and otherwise to encroach upon our sovereignty and imperil our safety as a nation. We fought in belated self-defense; all other considerations were but corollary to this. Now that the battle has been won, or, at least, was won when the armistice was signed, it remains to reap the fruits of victory, not in the way of aggrandizement in territory and in money, but in compensation for wrongs done and injuries inflicted and in the establishment of safeguards against further unpleasant experiences from the same source. As a first consideration, at the earliest opportunity, we should have made peace, and now, at the earliest opportunity, we should make peace, the terms of which should fix the price which Germany and her allies should pay for the havoc she and they have wrought. The penalty imposed should be so great not only that it will be compensatory to the nations that have suffered, but also that it may operate, and will operate, as a deterrent to all the world against entering upon future like enterprises. So far as we are able to judge from present advices, the terms submitted to Germany and the obligations thereby imposed should accomplish this result.

"The peace treaty is the final judgment, and the armies of the victors are the forces by which that judgment may be rendered tangible and real; so, I say, we have an organization already in existence and in operation. I care not whether it be called an association, an alliance, or a league; but whatever it is, it is tangible, real, and effective. It is builded upon no unsubstantial foundation. It is not a creature of theory or imagination. It has a duty to perform, and it has not discharged its functions until its objects are attained. It violates no constitutional prohibition and no traditional policy of this Government. It falls squarely within the admonitions and directions of Washington when he said:

"Let me not be understood as capable of patronizing infidelity to existing engagements. I hold the maxim no less applicable to public than to private affairs that honesty is always the best policy. I repeat it, therefore, let those engagements be observed in their genuine sense. But in my opinion it is unnecessary and would be unwise to extend them.

"Taking care always to keep ourselves, by suitable establishments, on a respectable defensive posture, we may safely trust to temporary alliances for extraordinary emergencies.

"But this requires no league of nations, no permanent alliance. No league of nations could accomplish more than the league which already exists, and if it should accomplish less it would fall that much short of equal efficacy. But they say, What guaranty have we in this against future wars? More certainty than can be secured from the proposed plan, with none of its compromising features. We have the same mutual interests and the same moral obligations. The proposed league, as we shall presently see, is, in substance, founded only upon such. We shall have demonstrated to the world that no longer may any nation or combination of nations enter upon a war of world conquest and aggression and escape without paying the hard penalty of such infamy. Therein lies the surest guaranty of future good conduct.

"Again, the President is quoted as having said that if Germany had known or believed that England would have entered the war, the war would not have taken place. Assuming this to be true, what more does it prove than that Germany, well knowing England to be a member of the Entente, to be vitally affected by disaster to the other members, and to be bound also by moral obligations to them and to Belgium, still did not believe that England would consult her own welfare and respect her solemn engagements. Is the league which we are now offered more binding and more effective? Has it behind it more physical power, with its contemplated restrictions and reductions, than the Entente had under the then existing system?

"But still further, the President might have added that if Germany had known or believed that the United States would ultimately have entered this conflict, then certainly she would have paused before entering the war. Germany knew that unless we were totally without intelligence we would know, or would speedily ascertain, that our most vital interests, if not our very existence, were threatened in the last analysis. But Germany knew us as a supposedly pacifist Nation, one that would purchase peace at any price, even at dishonor; that we had no Military Establishment worthy of the name; she thought we would not fight under any possible circumstances; and that we could not fight effectively, even if we would. The whole world knows that this country, unless it is invited again to lapse into fatty degeneracy, is keenly alive to its material interests; that it will fight if those interests are threatened or invaded; that it can fight most effectively, because it has the man power and the courage and is richest in resources of all the nations in the world. It knows that it is our traditional policy to stand aloof from all entangling alliances, to embarrass ourselves and our initiative by no association that will abridge our independence of action and commit us, perhaps, to policies in conflict with our ideals; that if a situation arises which threatens its own stability, because it threatens the world's stability generally, this country will be free to and will align itself upon the side of right, justice, and humanity. Thus a new safeguard of peace has arisen upon the ruins caused by this war, and in my opinion no greater bulwark than this can be erected.

"Inasmuch as it is freely conceded that the proposed league constitution will not prevent war, but at most is hoped only to retard and obstruct it, the foregoing considerations certainly afford a remedy quite as constructive in this feature as the plan we are asked to adopt. But Mr. Taft says this is the doctrine of despair, and leads necessarily to the conclusion that our only recourse to avoid war is competitive armament. We are thus charged with being apostles of pessimism as opposed to oracles of optimism. To recognize an acknowledged fact, to admit the inevitable consequences of the operation of natural law, to govern one's self by the teachings of the unvarying experience of mankind in all ages, involves no element of despair. It is but the practice of a rational philosophy of life. We know that we must die; life is sweet, but death is certain. We do not contemplate death with sensations of despair, and this independently of our future hope. But if we are wise we do take all known physical precaution against death. We prepare for it; we put our houses in order and we insure our families against some measure of its bitterness. In our present attitude we are the true exponents of intelligent confidence. We have confidence in this American Nation. If ours be the doctrine of despair, so, undeniably, the league constitution is a declaration of distrust. We do not trust others; we say so by this instrument. We say to the other nations of the world we doubt your motives; we doubt your sincerity; we question your constancy; we distrust your morality and your honesty; your word is not as good as your bond, and so we want your signature to this scrap of paper, that we may have future written evidence of your probable infidelity. No doubt, in the light of past experience, our misconfidence is well placed. Then, does prudence counsel that we should relax our vigilance? Abolish our constabulary, and our faith in humankind would receive the rudest shock and the severest test to which it could be subjected. We should have a veritable orgy of lawlessness and crime, and this though the disbandment should be preceded by universal individual disarmament. For armament is only a relative thing. It may, as in Germany's case, be a symptom; but it is not the disease itself. The malady, if one is present, lies in human perversity, in the undisciplined passions and unbridled ambitions of men. While these remain untamed and unsubdued we shall have battles in this world, whether they be fought with arrows and spears and catapults and war canoes and flame, or with cannon and bombs and airplanes and submarines and poison gas. We had conquest and devastation, enslavement, and slaughter, unparalleled in proportion to numbers engaged, ages before modern devices and instrumentalities of war were even dreamed of. Civilization has been saved by power coupled with purpose, wielded by the most enlightened nations of the globe. If we are still living in a world of barbarians and beasts, let us keep the rifle hanging on the antlers above the fireplace. Unless we can trust the world, let the guardians of peace retain the weapons which alone can insure their supremacy.

"I am aware that these suggestions run counter to a view that has become well nigh a settled conviction in the minds of many people. Nevertheless I state them confidently and emphatically, although they are not essential to the solution of the problem we are discussing. We have accepted as true the proposition that armaments—armies, fleets, and their appurtenances—are provocative of war, and for this reason, chiefly, the necessity for disarmament has been taken for granted as the first and most effective step in the establishment of permanent peace. No doubt this idea was born of supposed conditions existing prior to 1914. We know now that our knowledge and theories respecting that situation were inaccurate and fallacious. We placed all European nations upon the same plane. We ascribed to them the same motives and the same political ambitions. We saw, or thought we saw, that all were supporting top-heavy and burdensome military establishments solely out of national pride and ulterior design; that all alike cherished dreams of imperialism and conquest and were itching to put their untried equipment to the test. So, when the war broke out, we who entertained these conventional notions indulged in much learned speculation as to which had the most of right or the least of wrong on its side and deplored the readiness of kings—all kings being equally disreputable—to plunge their devoted subjects into the cataclysm of war, all for their own glory and through pride of armament. And so we said again, as many well-meaning people had said all along, that armaments were to blame for the whole wretched business and must be abolished, and straightway certain estimable gentlemen began to invent panaceas and devise remedies and have talked of little else ever since.

"But we soon learned, as we know now, that among these nations Germany had long been nursing her scheme of pan-Germanism and world conquest—that she had formed alliances and made combinations, financial, industrial, and political, for that purpose. We know now that France was compelled to such preparedness as she had by a knowledge of the danger that would ultimately threaten her. We know that Italy, both from her unnatural entanglement in the triple alliance and from distrust of Austria, maintained a military establishment less for aggression than for protection. We find that Great Britain, contrary to accepted belief, was practically unarmed, except for the navy, which she had been compelled to maintain because of her insular existence, the limited area of the kingdom in proportion to population, and the remoteness of her possessions and her sources of supply. We found the Russian military power was a hollow shell, as Germany well knew. We ourselves, with the exception of a navy, admirable in personnel but insufficient in units and equipment, had nothing. It took England practically a year to put an effective force in the field. Even the armament of Belgium, certainly not established for purposes of aggression, proved an indispensable blessing in that it almost certainly enabled France to hold the central powers until England could prepare. Without the protecting dike erected by our European allies we ourselves would have fallen an easy victim to the tidal wave of German invasion both on sea and on land. It required 16 months of protected preparation on our part to get to the beginning of substantial effectiveness. This brief rehearsal of what all men know illustrates the vital distinction between the proper and improper uses of armaments. Not all the allied preparation, such as it was, was sufficient to deter the central empires from launching their war of aggression. All of it put together, increased by what could hastily be supplied through tremendous and greatly enhanced and extravagant expenditure, was scarce enough to withstand the onslaught. Had it been less, the invitation and temptation to attack would have been correspondingly greater. Had there been none at all, the conquest would have been easy. The lesson is that no nation which values its safety and its independence should ever permit its power of defense to fall below the demand of prudence, and that no nation can safely commit to others the determination of this vital question.

"But, of course, the ready rejoinder is that universal disarmament does away with the necessity for individual armament and that the league constitution contemplates that each government shall retain what military equipment and armament is fair and reasonable in proportion to the scale of forces laid down in the program of disarmament. As I said before, armament is only a relative thing, and any plan of disarmament which does not in fact disarm down to the point of negative effectiveness is a misnomer. The dominant nations have maintained themselves by the superiority of their equipment and resources. Disarm all alike, and they are weakened equally with those whom they fear; not only so, but the balance is shifted to the other side, because the physical power of more populous nations becomes increasingly threatening. I have said before that all the elements of aggression, conquest, slaughter, and devastation have been present in the past, before the advent of modern instruments of war. History may readily repeat itself, and we now have added reason to expect such a happening. All our preconceived notions respecting the progress of civilization, the influence of religion, and the growth of international intercourse and good will as guaranties against war were overturned and destroyed in the summer of 1914. None of us believed that wars of this nature could come again to the world, but they did come, with greater fury and greater savagery than ever known before. There is nothing in international psychology to promise better things for the future. We have had experience, it is true, but it is the experience that points to greater national vigilance and preparedness, rather than to a still blinder faith in the good intentions of mankind. I do not by any means counsel abandonment of striving for all that is best and noblest in human nature. I believe, however, in taking that human nature as we find it and adapting our needs in vital things to known conditions.

"Suppose we have a league of nations such as is contemplated, with disarmament which is disarmament in a concrete sense, and suppose we find growing up in future years—not at first, probably—such renewed ambitions, with their accompanying combinations and associations, as threaten the peace of the world? With the relative means then available it would be impossible to check the progress of the enterprise and ultimately to thwart it with the necessary speed and effectiveness. We have seen what time is necessary to supply the equipment for such purposes, what means of transportation, what ships of convoy are required, what a problem of supplies is presented before such world forces can be called into being and dispatched to their remote destination. Even a pastoral nation with natural weapons, if strong enough in man power, can overrun its neighbors and accomplish its designs. May Germany in ensuing years reorganize and control Russia, at least through mutual understanding, if not by force? May present elements of the former Central Powers lean toward such an association? May such a combined influence creep gradually and almost imperceptibly into and through parts of Asia, including Siberia and China? May intrigues and disaffection arise even in the ranks of the dominant nations of the present league plan? If so, what would be the relative man power and resources of such a combination, and what instrumentalities and facilities would be necessary to deal with such a situation? But it is said armament may be increased at any time. Yes; after once established, only by permission of the executive council, which may itself have become changed in sentiment and susceptible to like influences and intrigues as the years go by. Shall we feel safe if we have committed our unqualified guardianship to such a body, from which we can withdraw, if at all, only upon notice for a period within which our undoing may be made complete or by summary action tantamount to an act of war?

"But to what extent can practical disarmament be insured? As this war has demonstrated, future offensive and defensive equipment will not be confined to warships and high-power cannon. These, however, are essential, and they take a long time in manufacture, as recent experience has shown. A distinguished naval authority states:

> "During the next 30 years the use of chemicals and aircraft, not only separately but also jointly (especially jointly), is going to alter the whole face of war. They will alter also the matter of preparation for war, because preparation can be made with practical secrecy, since both are agencies of peace but can instantly be made into agencies of war.

"This is in part confirmed, if we can trust the news dispatches to any extent, by the expressed opinion of French aviation experts, who are agreed that it is impossible to prevent Germany or any other nation from building commercial airplanes in time of peace which can be used as bombing planes in case of war. The difference between a bombing plane and a commercial plane is so slight at the present time as to be practically negligible. Germany can be forbidden to manufacture bombs and explosives, say the experts, but she can hardly be forbidden to make airplanes. It is even doubtful, adds one French engineer, if such prohibition is desirable. The true means of avoiding danger is, therefore, said to be not forbidding the Germans to manufacture airplanes, but developing this industry to such an extent in France, England, and America that if the Germans should ever again be tempted to bomb French towns they would be deterred by fear of truly terrible reprisals. This is a very forceful statement of the value of effective preparation as a deterrent from war. But a deeper significance lies in the fact that if airplanes effective for war can be developed and manufactured without restriction—as, of course, they can and will be—then, even though the making of aerial bombs be prohibited, their necessary parts can be prepared for ready combination with comparative expedition when the time for their use arrives. And who can prevent invention and manufacture in the field of chemistry? We have already seen what destructive chemical agencies may be devised and how little men have scrupled to use them. Can we exercise such supervision over the world's laboratories as to render them appreciably harmless? Manifestly not. Maj. Reed Landis, a distinguished American ace, in a recent address before the Knife and Fork Club in this city, pointed out the future obvious importance of airplanes in world wars. Their present development justifies expectation that the Atlantic Ocean may now be crossed and recrossed without stopping; that high-power engines, already in process of manufacture, will enable increased tons of explosives to be carried by a single plane. Thus equipped, multitudes of planes, with almost unlimited radius of flight, would neutralize the effectiveness of fleets and jeopardize the convoy of troops by sea. Great Britain, appreciating the potentialities of the air service, has added a secretary of aviation to her cabinet. In the light of human ingenuity and of invention already existing and indicated for the future, what practical substance remains to our dream of disarmament?

"Article 8 provides that the members of the league shall interchange full and frank information as to the scale of their armaments, their military and naval programs, and the condition of such of their industries as are adaptable to warlike purposes. No provision is made for inspection. Reliance is placed upon the good faith of nations, which have so little respect for each other's moral responsibility that they insist upon this covenant for assumed mutual protection. No provision is made even for voluntary information from those outside the league. Obviously, effective supervision would be impracticable, even if possible. The army of inspectors necessary to uncover secret activities and hidden places of concealment would involve an expenditure in salaries and expenses alone more than sufficient to maintain any necessary scale of armament. Any attempt to demand or enforce such supervision would provoke resentment and hostility and could produce no dependable result, and without certainty we could not afford to relax our own attitude of preparation. It will not do to say that confidence must be reposed somewhere. By the very act of creating this league, with its provisions of disarmament, the nations have declared that they repose confidence nowhere.

"One of the tragic dangers of this proposed league is that it is calculated to lull us into the sense of false security; that by reliance upon the league for protection against war we may neglect to keep ourselves in a proper defensive posture. The great lesson of this war which we thought was learned, and which was learned until the advent of this league plan with its deceptive allurements, is that war can and will come even when thought impossible, and that this Nation never again should present such a spectacle of pitiful unpreparedness as it did in 1917. Up to six months ago all but a negligible few of our people proclaimed this obvious truth. Now, in this more plausible guise, we find the same old pacifist heresy, peace at any price, even with dishonor and national ruin, anything whatsoever so it be labeled peace—a doctrine which it was supposed the experience of this war had discredited for all time—we find this heresy, I say, creeping forth into the light again to threaten our future safety.

"In the nature of things, a war of great magnitude is not to be expected for a generation at least, league or no league. It would take that long to gather the strength and resources and to make the necessary alignments essential to such a struggle, just as William of Germany himself took about 30 years to make ready, all the time pointing to the long reign of peace as proof that he was at heart a peace-loving monarch. But in the end war will come. No one has the temerity to deny it. We may not then have a strong battle line of allies behind which to make our tardy preparation. It seems incredible, after the events of the past five years, that we should deliberately enter upon a policy of suicidal unconcern. But such is the policy to which this league invites us.

"The other members of the league are obviously placing little or no reliance upon its protection. That Britain will maintain her full naval establishment is universally accepted. Her standing army will be increased, it is said, approximately to 900,000 men. France retains her original military establishment with two army corps added, one for each of the recovered lost Provinces. Besides, France further discloses and emphasizes her distrust by seeking the creation of a buffer area between herself and Germany, and by demanding, and it would seem obtaining, guaranties from Britain and the United States of specific aid in case of invasion and attack from the north and east. Italy, confronted by the menace of the Jugo-Slavs, will increase rather than decrease her defensive posture, and has demanded and practically secured protective ports and territory on the eastern shore of the Adriatic. Japan is launching the greatest naval program in her history. War threatens or is in active operation in many fields, involving Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, the Ukraine, Roumania, Hungary, and others, not to speak of the eruptive condition throughout Germany and Russia as a whole. A high official of the Jugo-Slavs is reported to have declared recently that his country would fight Italy within 10 years unless all its demands were granted. Serbia announces that she did not enter the war to become the slave of greater powers, and if her rights are not fully recognized she will resist with arms. The old intolerable Balkan situation instead of being relieved is more threatening than ever before. According to Mr. Taft, we are attempting to hem in the Bolshevism of Russia and the revolutionary tendencies of Germany by newly created nations, most of which are at the point of starvation, all of which are reputed to be too weak to stand alone, and all of which cherish an undying hatred toward most, if not all, of their colleagues. Surely this is an inauspicious time to entertain thoughts of disarmament, but manifestly disarmament is not seriously considered outside of this country. It is a talking argument addressed to the imagination and the susceptibilities of philanthropy and humanitarianism.

"What is this league anyway? Examination discloses that it is not in reality a league at all, but, in effect, a proposed permanent alliance between the five major powers which won the war. Speaking for the present only, no serious objection could be made to such an association if temporary and confined only to the solution of present war problems, which I have shown already exist and are essential. This, however, is not the avowed object of the so-called league. But it is apparent from article 4 of the covenant, as now said to be amended, that the executive council, which is in reality the governing body of the league, shall consist of nine members irrespective of the number of States which may ultimately become members of the league, unless, by unanimous consent of the council and a majority of the body of delegates, the number of powers of each class represented in the council be increased; and of these nine, five, or a majority, shall always be representatives of the United States of America, the British Empire, France, Italy, and Japan. Even in the body of delegates, of course, the league will start off with a membership dominated by these five powers, and admission thereafter requires the assent of not less than two-thirds of the States already members. It has been pointed out that this country is in overwhelming minority in both council and body of delegates. It has but one vote in each. No amendment to this covenant can take effect until ratified by all the States whose representatives compose the executive council and in addition by a majority of the States whose representatives compose the body of delegates. So that one State represented in the council can block all amendment or change in this covenant. Before we rush into such an ironclad agreement we should at least pause and consider.

"A league which is not universal, or approximately so, in its application, which by its organic law, subject to amendment only by unanimous consent of the powers dominating it, retains control in five out of all the nations in the world, admits to membership only those whom it chooses, and then only by a two-thirds vote, is, as I say, not a league at all, but an alliance masquerading as a league, and by its terms not only an alliance but a permanent alliance. In addition to its autonomy within its own organization, it assumes in many particulars to exercise control and supervision over all nonmembers. Such an organization can exist ultimately, if at all, only by the maintenance and at times the exercise of superior physical power. It is not within the bounds of human nature that the rest of the world, when it has passed through its present stages of political sickness and succeeding convalescence, when the horror of the present situation has become dim, when it has been restored to comparative health and feels again the impulses of ambition, self-confidence, and self-respect, will submit tamely to the exercise of such a feudal condition. Mind you, I do not say this in condemnation of the present association for temporary purposes and to wind up the business in which it is now engaged. I am addressing myself solely to its character as a proposed permanent organization. If it were all embracing, when we consider the divergent interests involved, the races and nationalities incapable of assimilation and amalgamation of which it is composed, we could not hope for harmony and agreement for any extended period. Thereupon the very provisions of the covenant would provoke uneasiness, distrust, jealousies, intrigues, and secret understandings which must ultimately lead to secession, dissolution, and war. The widely differing peoples of this world with irreconcilable antagonism of race, religions, aspirations, and political conceptions, were never meant to dwell together practically as one family, and it is undesirable that they should. I for one desire no closer relationship with many of these peoples, and I am sure the people of this country do not. I want no united states of the world of which this Nation occupies the position of a mere subordinate State. We want no partnership with Bolshevists any more than with imperialists. Nothing but ill can result from such unnatural political marriages.

"But suppose a considerable and substantial part of the world shall not be invited to membership; we know that certain ones will not be for some time to come. Or suppose, although invited, they do not choose to join; then ultimately, if not at once, jealousy, distrust, and hostility will spring up between the members of the league and those on the outside. The latter will inevitably be drawn closer together through sympathy, environment, and common interests, developed and encouraged by calculation and design. We shall soon have two hostile camps; perhaps not at first with equal power and resources, but ultimately such a situation will be presented that a clash will be unavoidable. Suppose, further, that such local conditions, such special interests, and such internal dissensions and estrangements, all probable rather than possible, should spring up between the league members themselves, and suppose secret understandings, arrangements, and agreements, whether in the form of prohibited treaties or not, shall be formed between some league member or members and those beyond its inclosure, what then would be the result should the league seek to enforce some of the irritating provisions of its assumed guardianship? Does it not appear, beyond cavil or dispute, that this entire arrangement is provocative of future discord rather than of permanent quietude and peace? Meantime the individual nation, such as the United States, instead of preserving that uncompromising and uncompromised position which leaves it a free moral agent to act according to the dictates of its own best judgment, unaffected by the distrust and hostility created, rather than dissipated, by the chafing and distasteful bonds of this union, must be drawn into the general maelstrom of conflict against its interests and contrary to its choice.

"Oh, it is said this is nothing more than an international partnership, and partnerships are familiar things in our everyday life. We are also familiar with the traditional partnership between the man with money and the man with experience. At its close the one who had the experience has the money and the one who had the money has the experience. What more attractive candidate for world partnership could be found than a great big, rich, unmilitary nation, with practically no experience in world politics? We are told that Europe is sitting on the verge of despair and hysteria, fearing lest the United States may break faith with her and disappoint her hopes and aspirations for the universal brotherhood of man. I apprehend Europe's emotions are of a far more practical and material kind. She wants our money, she wants our resources, and she wants our men to assist her in policing her own estate. I say this in no spirit of unfriendliness. Her attitude is entirely natural and reasonable from her standpoint. The only question is whether with no corresponding interests of our own to subserve we shall make the sacrifices, governmental and individual, that are demanded. Again, we are reminded that our attitude is a selfish one. This is a matter of definition. It would be selfish were we to withhold our wealth, our moral influence, and all other wholesome aid and good offices which are consistent with humane impulses and independence of thought and action; but does a true measure of generosity and good will demand that we should place an entire nation, its lifeblood, and its material resources at the disposal of those with whom we have no intimate relationship and no community of interests? That would be carrying philanthropy beyond the bounds of rational self-preservation.

"We are reminded that we have reached a point where we must assume our share of world responsibilities, and to that end that we must surrender some powers incidental to sovereignty. We do not object to the surrender of nominal powers of sovereignty. We are sticklers not for the letter but for the substance. Our criticisms are neither capricious nor technical. So long as no principle of independent government is involved, no restriction of absolute control over internal affairs, no abandonment of our organic law and of our traditional policies, evolved for the safety of our national existence, we shall not complain if we are asked to refrain from the exercise of various powers which otherwise might inhere in sovereignty. We have no disposition to shirk our world responsibilities. They are relatively no greater than they have always been. They do not demand that we should intermeddle in the affairs of others, nor permit others to intermeddle in affairs peculiar to ourselves, with the necessary result of creating, rather than abating, international friction and unrest. Again, we are told that we must choose between this league and war. Of course, this is a glaring misstatement of the issue, intended to appeal to emotion and sentiment and to befog and confuse the judgment. If the allied powers now impose and enforce the terms of peace demanded and expected, no world war threatens. There is ample time within which to make calm survey of the situation before hasty and ill-advised action is taken, after more stable conditions have been secured, and after the minds of men, now more or less affected by the hysteria of war, by the shock and revulsion of feeling produced by its horrors, shall have resumed their normal functions. In the very nature of things, from the standpoint of experience and reason, we shall be confronted by no war with which this league should be concerned, perhaps, for another generation, unless, indeed, civilization is compelled to fight for existence against the forces of Bolshevism, anarchy, and social chaos; and if this is, indeed, the issue, the sooner that conflict comes and is decided the better for the future of the world. We want no covenant with such elements nor with any nation dominated by them. If we fought to make the world safe for democracy, it was a democracy of sanity and morality. We did not fight merely to create new democracies that might embrace the tenets of social heresy, nor to permit ourselves to cooperate with or become subject to evils worse than the autocracy which we have overthrown. Virulent and destructive agencies such as these are not successfully combated by compromise, concession, recognition, or affiliation. The slightest indulgence is an advantage seized and held, and the propaganda, well defined and systematic, proceeds with augmented power and influence from the new coign of vantage. We can fight this monster which threatens to destroy and abolish all social order, the principles of religion, the sacredness of the marriage relation, rights of property, the very pillars upon which rests the structure of society, if we fight it localized, isolated, and concentrated as a distinct national entity. The task will be more difficult if by pacifism and indecision we allow it to invade our own body politic.

"This leads to another consideration. This device of a league of nations is based upon the assumption that the elimination of war will accomplish the practical banishment of evil from the world. But war, bad as it is, is not the worst thing with which we have to contend. It is, after all, but a manifestation and a symptom. Wars of aggression indicate national malevolence in the aggressor, and against such wars the face of civilization is set in fixed determintion; but war in itself is only the exercise of national force. When employed to compel obedience to just demands it is but the enforcement of police regulations on a large scale. At the beginning of this world conflict we often heard expressions like this: 'I do not see why they could not find some other way of settling their disputes.' But Germany did not wish to find another way, and France had no alternative. In such case, as in many cases that may arise, no other way will be found than a resort to force to prevent injustice and compel peace; and that ultimate resort is nothing less than war. Those who would have prevented the supply of munitions to the nations assailed by Germany's war machine might thereby have stopped the war, but the result would have been the triumph of Germany and wrong. Such a course would have put a premium upon war-like tendencies and unworthy ambitions. It was as right for the Allies to defend as it was wrong for Germany to attack. When all peaceful means have failed, when no alternative remains, wars must always come unless we counsel abject surrender to unscrupulous ambition coupled with superior power. We gained our independence through war. We banished the tyranny of Spain from this continent by war. History is filled with examples of peoples who have achieved liberty and thrown off the yoke of oppression through the righteous exercise of that force which we call war. No nation and no combination of nations should ever knowingly and willingly surrender their freedom of action when questions of this character come up for determination. War is always better than meek submission to intolerable and dishonorable conditions.

"But, in any view, this league of nations will not prevent war. That seems indisputable from considerations already presented. But we do not have to rely upon theory to sustain this proposition, because it is admitted. At his dinner to the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate upon his return from Paris, the President is said to have stated with finality:

"1. The league of nations will not prevent war.

"2. The United States must surrender vital points of sovereignty.

"3. Ireland is to be left to the mercy of England.

"4. Chinese and Japanese exclusion go out of American control into the hands of the league council.

"5. The Monroe doctrine will be extended to the whole world.

"6. The present constitution is British made, the French, American, and Italian drafts having been rejected.

"7. American troops could be compelled at need to participate in purely European wars.

"8. The United States could withdraw from the league at any time.

"Those who attended the dinner are said to have agreed unanimously that the foregoing statements or admissions were made. The report was given nation-wide currency and provoked discussion. But one of the foregoing statements was denied, and that was the third, to wit: That Ireland would be left to the mercy of England. We may therefore accept the first statement as admitted beyond dispute. Other apologists for this covenant have made similar admissions. No one, to my knowledge, has contended to the contrary. If the contention has been made, it is of course unworthy of consideration. If, then, the league will not accomplish the only thing that justifies its existence, it seems hardly worth while, in view of its manifold objectionable features, to give it serious countenance. But its friends urge that it is hoped it will postpone and discourage war, and is therefore worthy of trial. But so, we confidently assert, will the various considerations that I have already presented more effectively and with less provocation to a multitude, at least, of lesser wars in remote quarters of the globe where our interests do not lie. It would seem that the burden of suggesting some more constructive method rests upon Mr. Taft and his associates rather than upon those who criticize and oppose.

"I believe I have considered and answered all the arguments that are advanced in favor of this league. They are all of the same tenor. They admit imperfections, omissions, and ambiguities; they ask us to accept, before such are remedied, supplied, or classified, a solemn international covenant from which we can escape only by broken pledges involving charges of bad faith and national perfidy, and leading possibly to war itself—a covenant which can be subsequently amended practically only by unanimous consent. We are regaled with constant and conflicting apology, demurrer, disclaimer, and explanation which does not explain, by exhortation and appeal to the yearnings of humanity, from which they solicit blind acceptance without resource to reason or logic.

"Recurring again to this constitution, we find, as I have said, that it is a mere alliance between five controlling nations, and not a proper league at all; that it fixes no time limit for its existence, and is therefore on its face permanent. In the opinion of Mr. Taft, a period of about 10 years should have been fixed, but this has not been done; instead, his suggestion of permission to any member to withdraw by giving a reasonable notice of from one to two years has been accepted by providing a two years' notice. Until such two years shall have elapsed after notice given the member wishing to retire is bound by all the obligations of its covenant. During such two years it may be placed at a prohibitive disadvantage if its associates, or even outsiders, so elect. The very giving of the notice will tend to isolate it from the others and to make it an object of suspicion. As I have said, the terms of the covenant are admittedly vague and indefinite. This renders it susceptible to construction according to the varied interests of the several contracting parties, and is in itself a menace to continued good relations. Mr. Root, in his admirable analysis, draws the distinction between the treatment of questions of legal right and questions of political policy. The former may well be submitted to some international court or tribunal of equal dignity and power; the latter must be reserved to the individual nation and abandoned, if at all, only upon full satisfaction that a sufficiently affirmative reason exists for setting such policies aside. Under this constitution the executive council or body of delegates undertakes to bring about settlement upon terms of what they deem to be international expediency instead of terms of right. A concrete illustration of this may be seen in the matter of immigration. No country is so much interested in this subject as the United States. It is a matter vital to the integrity of the Nation in the administration of its internal affairs. It is a matter which we never intended to leave to foreign arbitrament. It is contended by the advocates of this amended covenant that it does not affect our internal affairs.

"Article 11 provides:

"Any war, or threat of war, whether immediately affecting any of the members of the league or not, is hereby declared a matter of concern to the whole league, and the league shall take any action that may be deemed wise and effectual to safeguard the peace of nations. * * *

"It is declared and agreed to be the friendly right of each of the high contracting parties to draw the attention of the body of delegates or of the executive council to any circumstance affecting international intercourse which threatens to disturb international peace or the good understanding between nations upon which peace depends.

"Article 15 declares that:

"If the dispute between the parties is claimed by one of them and is found by the council to arise out of a matter which by international law is solely within the domestic jurisdiction of that party, the council shall so report and shall make no recommendation as to its settlement.

"But the council is given the right to make this finding, and, in any event, it is further provided that:

"The members of the league reserve to themselves the right to take such action as they shall consider necessary for the maintenance of right and justice.

"This reserved right is supreme and unaffected by any failure of arbitration or conciliation, no matter what the nature of the controversy may be.

"These are very broad and comprehensive sections. They embrace practically every sort of disagreement or contention which could arise between nations. Article 17 relates to similar disputes between members and nonmembers of the league. Vague provisions are made for enforcement of settlement through league agencies, which may be construed to have greater or less efficacy and binding power, according to the interests involved. We are conscious that the matter of foreign immigration is one of the most vital questions affecting the welfare of this Nation, now more than ever before in its history. We have decided with finality that certain peoples shall be admitted, if at all, only under drastic restrictions and regulations. We reserve the sovereign right to control this purely political policy; nor does the difficulty lie with oriental races alone. We have lately been submerged by the refuse and offscourings of certain European nations. We find ourselves at this moment with a large alien population without eligibility to naturalization nor intending to seek naturalization, many of whom are in open defiance of our laws and system of government, and all of whom are a menace to our national safety. We have declared our intention to expel undesirables and to restrict future admission within our boundaries. This may be resented. It may readily be construed as action within the purview of the articles of this covenant. We can not trust to the unofficial opinion of the sponsors of this league. We want no uncertainty and no quibbling about the matter. If reference of such a question to league tribunals be insisted upon by other parties, those tribunals, in the interest of expediency, might take cognizance of them, and in the further interest of expediency might decide against us. Then nothing would remain to us but open resistance, with its accompanying threat of war or passive submission, which would involve the abandonment of vital national interests. This very question is not remote in our past experience nor absent in more recent discussion.

"Our national policy has ever been consistently in favor of a rational system of arbitration. This leads to a brief consideration of the true principle of any such system. Matters involving strictly legal rights under international law are the legitimate subjects of arbitration, and should, of course, be arbitrated in lieu of war. Matters of a purely political nature, involving the fundamental and inherent rights of national sovereignty, essential to its existence and safety as such, can never be subjects of arbitration nor of disposition by other powers, whether operating in combination or otherwise. To illustrate: Two nations have undoubted legal rights to certain territories, but the boundaries between such territories are not defined or are in dispute, much as in the case of boundaries between the lands of individuals in our own country. A survey must be made and the documentary evidences of title must be examined. Each nation claims only what legally belongs to it, but the facts may be obscure or the interpretation of some treaty or other muniment of title may be in dispute. A strictly legal question is presented. So also questions may arise respecting rights of fishing in waters adjacent to international boundaries, respecting trade and commerce, all commercial in their nature and involving international law only in its application to commercial law. When such disputes arise they are manifestly legal questions which are the legitimate subject of arbitration and which never justify a resort to arms in the first instance. I have not attempted by this statement to cover the entire field of matters within the cognizance of arbitration tribunals. I have pointed to obvious examples as distinctive of a class.

"On the other hand, questions of vital importance to national integrity, national safety, and internal government can never be subjects of arbitration—at least, as to final decision. I refer now to such purely political matters as the Monroe doctrine, immigration and naturalization, and provisions for the national defense and measures affecting the form of government. Here again I have confined myself to the suggestion of distinctive illustrations. We can not delegate to others the right, express or implied, to pass upon such matters so vital to our existence as an independent sovereign people. But this constitution, by its general terms, except where expressly modified, leaves all such matters to the consideration of the league as a political body, with provisions so vague and indefinite as to invite dispute and contention under the most favorable construction that can be placed upon them.

"Reference has already been made to the Monroe doctrine. In view of the reported later action in Paris it may, perhaps, be deemed academic and superfluous to consume time in further discussion upon this point. However, the importance of this question is so great, and the general misunderstanding regarding it so widespread, that the subject should not be dismissed without full appreciation of the tremendous significance to us of what is spoken of as a trivial and almost unimportant concession to league criticism, made not because it was necessary and reasonable, but in order to disarm opposition. The impression has been studiously created that the sole practical function of the Monroe doctrine is to prevent European powers from interfering with governments and nations already established in this hemisphere for the purpose of oppressing them or controlling their destiny in any other manner. It is generally understood that the entire doctrine is summed up in our guardianship of these smaller nations solely to protect them from European encroachment. It is argued that article 10 of the constitution of the league undertakes 'to respect and preserve as against external aggression the territorial integrity and existing political independence of all States members of the league,' and that this secures all the benefits of the Monroe doctrine and extends it to all the nations of the league. If, as is deceptively implied, the primary object of the Monroe doctrine is to guarantee the territorial integrity of these American States, the argument would have in it something of plausibility, although there is a wide distinction between the physical protection of the United States and a mere paper promise to respect on the part of the very powers against which the Monroe doctrine was raised in the first instance. But the fact is that this argument entirely misstates the fundamental principle of the Monroe doctrine, which is involved in the following language:

"We owe it, therefore, to candor and to the amicable relations existing between the United States and those (European) powers to declare that we should consider any attempt on their part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety.

"Our peace and safety, mind you, not the safety of other States upon the American Continent. We undertook to protect and preserve the integrity of such States merely as an incident to our own peace and safety, and to that end we declare that not only shall European powers not secure further foothold upon this continent, but that we shall regard any attempt on their part so to do as an unfriendly act.

"We have no desire to assume gratuitous burdens of guardianship and protection over the sovereign States of the American Continent. In the absence of the danger that would otherwise confront us, we should be glad to leave them to the dictates of their own fancy with respect to submission to, or acquisition by, foreign powers if they did not wish us to intervene in their affairs. We have given sufficient proof to our own people, and to the world, in our policies announced at the close of the Spanish-American War and adhered to through decades that we have neither the desire nor the purpose ourselves to encroach upon the territory of any other nation nor to interfere in the administration of its internal affairs.

"But we knew that unless we were willing to interpose our power between these States and European aggression a pronouncement against the extension of the systems of Europe to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety would be an empty phrase; and so we undertook this responsibility, not as a primary object, but as a pure incident to the protection of our own national life. And this danger which we feared is not imaginary. It is real and substantial. There can be little doubt that insistence upon this doctrine has preserved South America from wholesale German colonization, if not from conquest and absorption. The reason for the Monroe doctrine is disclosed in the apprehension of France to-day over the settlement of boundaries between herself and Germany. She knows what it is to have but an imaginary line between herself and a powerful, hostile, and ambitious neighbor. The whole world has seen in the devastation of northern France the possibilities that exist for effective and destructive invasion when frontiers join, although protected with all the skill and all the extravagant outlay known to military science. Suppose Germany had been permitted to absorb or control Mexico or the States of Central America; suppose she had had well-established submarine bases even across the Carribean Sea, how many of our cities might have shared the fate of the industrial centers of northern France? Our people, individually, need fully to understand and appreciate the underlying principle of the Monroe doctrine, and when they do they will never listen even to the suggestion of its abandonment. It was practically abandoned in the first draft of this league plan, and its subsequent incorporation has been brought about only by tremendous effort upon the part of those who have ventured to express their criticism. How many more important American safeguards are exposed to similar peril?

"We do know that this proposed plan sets aside and runs counter to important provisions of the Constitution of the United States. All argument to the contrary is disingenuous and sophistical. It begs the question. First, with respect to the matter of disarmament. Here article 8 of the covenant provides that—

"The executive council shall also determine for the consideration and action of the several governments what military equipment and armament is fair and reasonable in proportion to the scale of forces laid down in the program of disarmament, and these limits, when adopted, shall not be exceeded without the permission of the executive council.

"And now, by amendment, it is said that the action of the executive council must be unanimous. Heretofore it might have acted by majority vote. This takes away the exclusive constitutional right and power of Congress to provide for the common defense, and to make rules for the government and regulation of the land and naval forces incidental to raising and supporting armies and providing and maintaining a navy. The feeble answer to this is that although determined by the executive council for the consideration and action of the several Governments, such determination is not binding until adopted, presumably by the Congress. But this answer leaves out of consideration the further provision that 'when adopted it shall not be exceeded without the permission of the executive council.' In the last analysis the judgment and determination of the executive council is supreme. No matter what changed situations may arise, succeeding Congresses are sought to be deprived of their exclusive constitutional power and duty to provide for the common defense by increasing the military equipment and armament of the Nation, if deemed necessary. No Congress has power to bind succeeding Congresses in this respect, nor is there any constitutional power to delegate this prerogative to any other body, such as this executive council; and in that council the vote of one member State is sufficient to block action on the part of the United States. It is no answer to say that such obstructive tactics are improbable; it is enough that they are possible, if we are to adhere to the covenant; and, should the emergency arise, it is obvious that objection to increase would probably be interposed.

"In an attempt to meet this criticism Mr. Taft, in his Convention Hall speech, referred for precedent to what he termed a 'treaty' between this country and Great Britain in 1817, by which it was agreed to put no warships on the Great Lakes, forming part of the boundary between Canada and the United States. I find this so-called treaty to occupy an inconspicuous position in volume 8 of the United States Statutes at Large, where it is called merely an 'arrangement,' put into effect by proclamation of the President April 28, 1918. If we are to judge by the formalities attending the publication of treaties generally in the same volume, this arrangement does not arise to the dignity of a treaty, nor does it appear to have been placed before the Senate in the usual manner. It is subject to discontinuance upon notice, and, of course, affects only the two nations involved. Whatever may have been the circumstances attending its adoption, and whatever may be said of its validity, if it were assailed it is obvious that it bears no analogy to the point under discussion. Great Britain and the United States simply arranged to regard that portion of the boundary between the two countries as a sort of neutral or noncombatant area; but this arrangement did not restrict the power of Congress in the provision of a single ship for the Navy or a single man for the Army of this Nation. It had no effect whatever upon the size or quality of our military and naval establishments.

"Again, the proposed constitution contemplates that we may automatically under its terms be placed in a state of war against some other nation without the action of the Congress, to which is confided the exclusive power of determination. This is provided by article 16 in case of disregard by any contracting party of the provisions of articles 12, 13, or 15. Article 16, aforesaid, if adopted by us, is a delegation to the league of the power to declare that a state of war exists. Substantive elements of war, to wit, the severance of all trade or financial relations, the prohibition of all intercourse between nationals, and the prevention of all financial, commercial, or personal intercourse between nationals, become effective at once. It is next provided that 'it shall be the duty of the council in such case to recommend to the several Governments concerned what effective military or naval forces the members of the league shall severally contribute to the armaments of forces to be used to protect the covenants of the league.' In the summary of these amendments sent out in advance of publication, presumably under the authority or, at least, with the acquiescence of the peace conference, it was stated 'the council is to recommend what amount of force, if any, should be supplied by the several Governments concerned, but the approval of the latter is necessary.' If that was not true under the original draft, it is difficult to understand what different meaning has been added by the amended section. Mr. Taft vociferates that 'recommend' does not mean 'command,' and strictly, by the dictionary, he is unquestionably right. Equally, also, 'shall' is not the equivalent of 'should.' Article 16, as I have said, automatically throws us into war and provides for the immediate application of substantial preliminaries. It apparently then delegates to the council, as the executive body, the 'power' of the league, as Mr. Taft calls it, the administrative function of designating the quotas which the several members of the league 'shall' severally contribute. This is followed and strengthened by the undertaking that the members of the league 'will mutually support one another in resisting any special measures aimed at one of their number' and will afford passage through their territory, etc. Significantly the following new paragraph is added:

"Any member of the league which has violated any covenant of the league may be declared to be no longer a member of the league by a vote of the council, concurred in by the representatives of all the other members of the league represented thereon.

"Even a penalty clause is present. Reading this section in its entirety and in the light of the spirit and purpose of the league organization, can we reasonably escape the conclusion that this section is intended to impose upon the various league members the obligation to respond, as to a command, to the recommendation of the council respecting contributions of military and naval forces? Of course, the article contemplates that such forces will be employed and will be sent to the various quarters of the earth whenever the league and its governing body so recommends; and whether or not this be the unavoidable construction from a legal standpoint, we know it will be so construed when occasion arises. Any contention that this does not constitute a suspension of the constitutional powers of Congress and a delegation of the power to declare war is special pleading and a palpable fallacy. The vice in these two attempted evasions of the letter and spirit of our Constitution is dual in its nature. On the other hand, it impairs our capacity for self-defense, and may involve us in war against the dictates of our individual judgment; and, on the other, it is a step in the process of undermining our strict adhesion to the mandates of the Constitution by countenancing departure and modification by indirect methods. It establishes a most unwholesome precedent and weakens the respect in which our organic law has always been held.

"The fact that this covenant may be incorporated in the peace treaty adds nothing whatever to its validity. Even Mr. Taft admits that no treaty rises above the Constitution. The Supreme Court has said that—"It would not be contended that it extends so far as to authorize what the Constitution forbids, or a change in the character of the Government, or in that of one of the States, or a cession of any portion of the territory of the latter, without its consent.

"The courts, however, uniformly leave such considerations to the political powers of the Government. It would, of course, be competent for such political powers to abrogate the treaty, and it would be possible for Congress to enact legislation in conflict with the terms and provisions of such a treaty. In such case the courts would accept the judgment of Congress. In the absence of such congressional action it is rare that a justiciable question is presented to the courts. It is pointed out by the advocates of this league that the Supreme Court has never yet declared a treaty invalid, and that it is unlikely that any question would arise within the cognizance of the courts. This is almost equivalent to saying that if the courts can find no opportunity to invalidate this treaty, no valid objection is urged to its adoption, although it may contravene the terms of the Constitution. That again means that the political powers of the Government are at liberty at any time to disregard the Constitution and its prohibitions, provided they do so in such manner as to prevent judicial review of their action. No stronger demonstration could be presented of the wisdom which ordinarily lodges such power of construction in the courts. To say that any department of the Government is permitted thus arbitrarily to ignore the Constitution of the United States upon any pretext whatsoever is a practical and fatal abandonment of our form of government. It is an almost unthinkable recognition of political infidelity and disloyalty. Its advocates do not mean that, of course, and yet such is the ultimate result of this novel doctrine.

"We have become accustomed to regard imperialism as the only enemy of republican government to be feared. We are now confronted by a menace, if anything, more imminent and grave. The result of this war and the theory upon which it has been waged has practically removed, for the present at least, the danger to be apprehended from emperors and kings. But an autocracy quite as threatening, quite as destructive, and more insidious lurks in the irresponsible form of so-called democracy which has succeeded it. Bolshevism and anarchy, which is but another degree of socialism and communism, is not democracy, although it parades itself as such. It is administered by irresponsible committees, self-established and maintained by armed forces. They issue decrees which differ in no respect from imperial edicts. Attempts at popular expression are suppressed by the military arm of these committees if they are not in accord with the action of such committees. The stable government guaranteed by our Constitution stands as the one dependable safeguard against the encroachment of this new autocracy and imperialism masquerading in the guise of democracy and popular government. Any departure from its prohibitions and its sanctions but paves the way for the breaking down of organized government and stable social conditions. This alone ought to deter us from any step manifestly hasty, unnecessary, and ill-advised which would tend in this direction. Such will be the ultimate effect of this indirect but no less significant surrender of our constitutional guaranties. These constitutional objections have been sought to be ridiculed and evaded, but they have never, to my knowledge, been squarely met.

"It may then be asked why we object so strenuously to the adoption of this covenant if, as we say, it is unconstitutional, and the political agencies of our Government may so declare. Because to enter solemnly upon any international agreement which we know to be illegal, and with the mental reservation that we may and will break it at will, is political dishonesty; because the engagements thus made will have and are intended to have a moral binding force, which can be disregarded only at the expense of the charge of repudiating our moral obligations as a sovereign nation; because thereby not only do we incur in the eyes of the world the obloquy which must result from such a course, but we imperil our own peace and safety as well as the peace and safety of the world. If we assume no such obligations in the first instance, we can not be placed in this unenviable position. The fact is that the attempt is being made in an excess of zeal, while excitement runs high, while peace, ardently desired and woefully delayed, hangs in the balance, while the wounds of war are still unhealed, to railroad this devoted and sincere people into a solemn compact which their sober judgment would reject and which they will never cease to regret. The exigency for such unseemly haste does not exist. The very method employed should arouse our suspicions and cause us to look before we leap. I can conceive of no suggestion more remarkable than that made by Mr. Taft in his New York speech, when he says:

"Well may the President, therefore, decline to comply with the suggestions of the proposed resolution (of the Senate). Well may he say when he returns with the treaty, of which the covenant shall be a most important and indispensable part, 'If you would postpone peace, if you would defeat it, you can refuse to ratify the treaty. Amend it by striking out the covenant and you will leave confusion worse confounded, with the objects of the war unattained and sacrificed, and Europe and the world in dangerous chaos.'

"No such alternative is necessary. No legitimate reason exists for the incorporation of this league plan in the peace treaty as an indispensable part thereof, except to embarrass the Senate in the exercise of its constitutional functions by compelling it to accept this league without consideration or to incur the obloquy of deferring the establishment of peace so earnestly desired by the entire world. We are reminded in this of the objectionable practice of attaching an unsavory rider to an appropriation bill, which must be accepted under pain of arresting the vital operations of government.

"In his recent speech in this city Mr. Taft said:

"But it is said, 'Why should we not have this league of nations after we have got the peace treaty? Let's take that in a leisurely way.' That means we would not have it at all.

"When we consider that Europe is represented to be on the verge of despair, unless we come to her assistance with this covenant, we must infer that Mr. Taft believes this country would not accept it if it had opportunity to weigh and consider. If that is true, I protest that to fasten it upon us in this summary manner is an invasion of the most sacred rights and interests of the American people.

"But it is said that the best minds and the smartest men in all the world have met at this peace table and formulated this instrument, and that it is impudence on our part to question or reject it. I have no disposition to question the commanding ability of the representatives of the several nations at the peace table. I would, however, respectfully and in all humility, point to the fact that this proposed league is confessed to be of foreign manufacture, and that, with the exception of those from this country, no man there can be presumed to have had the special interests of this nation at heart, nor to have been hampered by any considerations touching our own peculiar institutions and traditions. None of them, presumably, could have had any conscientious scruples in the adoption of any policy, however conflicting in principle with the provisions of our Constitution. All, outside of our own delegates, had interests of their own to subserve. Those interests are in no means necessarily in harmony with ours. As Mr. Root well says:

"We are not asking, and do not need, any help from the nations of the whole world for the preservation of peace in America, nor is any American nation asking for such help. The difficulties, the disturbing conditions, and the dangers that threaten, are all in the affairs of Europe and the Near East. The real reason for creating a league of nations is to deal with those difficulties and dangers—not with American affairs.

It is, therefore, wholly unnecessary, for the purpose of this league, that purely American affairs should be included within the scope of the agreement.

"It hardly seems reasonable that under these circumstances the United States should be penalized for complying with the request of its friends in Europe to join them in the preservation of peace primarily for their benefit, and not for ours, by giving up our right to self-protection, when that is wholly unnecessary to accomplish the object of the agreement.

"I have said that in the matter of armament and in the matter of engaging in war we should be guided by the dictates of our own sound judgment and the conditions as they may be found to exist. I make no argument for extended armament. I have sought to show only that we should preserve and maintain such instrumentalities of defense as circumstances may require, and that these should be left to our own decision and not confided to any tribunal dominated by foreign influence. That the United States should ever adopt a policy of over-preparedness is amusing in the light of our practice and traditions, and in the face of recent experience. Any agreement in this respect must result in the disadvantage of that nation most scrupulous in observing its covenants and undertakings. We know that no nation will observe its obligations more scrupulously than we. In his last utterances Theodore Roosevelt earnestly warned us against entering into a world-wide career of disinterested violence for the right, because where both the lands and the issues involved are remote we would not know with certainty where the right lay; that nothing should be done that would interfere with our preparing for our own defense; and that each nation should reserve to itself, for its own decision, questions involving its honor and the preservation of its national existence.

"It has been insisted by advocates of this league that the covenant does not create a superstate. I agree with Dr. David Jayne Hill, who says:

"Between free self-governing nations on the one hand and super-government on the other there is no intermediate condition. It is a choice between free and not free.

"The league proposes to bind its members to united action, and it is in the next breath pretended that there is nothing binding about it. The choice must be made, and it is important that it should be clearly understood. Does the league invite, or does it command? If it only invites, it is not a league. If it commands, it is a supergovernment.

"However, we are not compelled to rely upon interpretation to establish the charge that a supergovernment is aimed at if not in fact created. Mr. Samuel J. Graham, Assistant Attorney General, in a series of addresses entitled, 'Some Reflections on the League of Nations as Related to the History of the United States,' in which he advocates 'collective instead of individual nationalism,' among many things of like nature, says:

"The Constitution (of the United States) was finally adopted by the States, though its adoption was not by all of them at once. By its adoption individual nationalism was abandoned and refuge and safety sought and found in the ark of collective nationalism and a league of nations.

"The league-of-nations job has been done once successfully, why can it not be done again?

"The same idea is being expressed openly in the inspired press.

"What they (the American Colonies) did do we can now do, and by the grace of God we will do!

"This shocking and unblushing avowal is almost beyond belief. A few years ago the audacious proposal to surrender our national independence and reduce us to the position of a subordinate State in a federation composed of all the heterogeneous races of the world would have been buried beneath an avalanche of obloquy and scorn. It is my belief that, if brought before the people now in its true light and with opportunity for their expression, it would meet the same fate. If this is not true, then the virtue of American citizenship has departed and the days of the Republic are numbered.

"I oppose this covenant in its present and proposed form because it conclusively appears that it will not accomplish the only thing which excuses its creation, and that is the prevention of war, but, on the contrary, invites innumerable complications and disturbances destructive of permanent peace; because it is unnecessary at this time, other obvious means for the establishment of peace and the preservation of order being already at hand and in active operation; because it departs from time-honored and substantial American policies and traditions; because it is violative of the spirit and letter of our Constitution; because it involves us in engagements dangerous to our national safety, which we can avoid, if at all, only by acts in contravention of our express agreements, exposing us to the charge of international bad faith; because it introduces the element of internationalism, breaks down the safeguards of national patriotism, and embarrasses the exercise of our sovereignty in the control of our internal affairs."

AMENDMENTS TO SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. JONES of Washington submitted an amendment proposing that not more than $60,000 of the appropriation of $325,000 to further promote and develop foreign and domestic commerce of the United States shall be used for the expenses of branch offices, of which $10,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, shall be used for maintaining branch offices at Puget Sound, State of Washington, intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

Mr. SMOOT submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $252,900.58 for the relief of Prof. William H. H. Hart, principal of the Hart Farm School and Junior Republic for Dependent Children, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

DEVELOPMENT OF WATER POWER.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, at the last session of the Senate I introduced a bill (S. 220) to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of dams across navigable waters," approved June 21, 1906, as amended by the act approved June 23, 1910, and to provide for the improvement and development of waterways for the uses of interstate and foreign commerce. The bill is in relation to power sites on navigable streams and upon the public lands. It is identical with the report made by the conference committee upon this subject at the last session of Congress; and, although the bill does not by any means express my own ideas as to legislation that we ought to have upon this important question, I have deemed it advisable to start off the subject in this session at the point at which it was concluded in the last session. In this form I introduced the bill. It was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce, evidently erroneously. I now ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Interstate Commerce be discharged from the further consideration of the bill and that it be referred to a special committee consisting of three members of the Committee on Public Lands, to be chosen by that committee, and three members of the Committee on Commerce, to be chosen by the members of that committee. It will be recalled that the report of the conference committee came from Members of this body so constituted by resolution of the body, namely, three members of the Committee on Public Lands and three from the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I object to the unanimous-consent request to appoint a special committee.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I also object to the request.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, then I ask that the bill be referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, if the Senator from Washington will allow me to make a suggestion, I do not believe the Senator from Montana means to select a special committee, except in the sense that it is to be composed of the members of two standing committees. It is not to be a special committee other than that it is to be composed of members of each of two standing committees. That was the arrangement made at the last session. The conferees on the bill were three members of the Commerce Committee and three members of the Public Lands Committee, as the Senator from Montana has stated; but it was not a special committee in the sense the Senator from Washington has in view. It is to be a committee to be composed of three members of the Public Lands Committee and three members of the Commerce Committee.

Mr. JONES of Washington. That would be a special committee. I desire to say that a bill covering the subject has already been introduced and referred to the Commerce Committee, which had charge of the matter at the last session.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I ask for the regular order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Senators may understand this matter, but the Chair does not think he quite understands it. As near as the Chair can get it now, the Senator from Montana is moving to refer the bill to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I made that suggestion because I knew of no other disposition to make of it. However, I will ask leave to amend that motion, and move to refer the bill to the Committee on Commerce and the Committee on Public Lands to act jointly in relation to it.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Does the Senator mean that to be taken as an instruction to the committees to act jointly or as a suggestion? I would have no objection to having it referred to both of the committees, and personally I should like to see the committees act together; but I do object at this time to the Senate directing them to act together.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Let me inquire of the Senator from Washington, who is interested, as I am, in promoting this legislation, whether it would be advisable to refer it to both committees and have each committee return possibly a radically different report upon it?

Mr. JONES of Washington. I will say to the Senator that substantially the same bill that the Senator proposes has already been introduced and has been referred to the Committee on Commerce; and that committee, no doubt, whenever it is organized, will take the matter up. So it seems to me it would complicate matters to have the measure referred to two different committees. I wish to assure the Senator that I am satisfied that the Commerce Committee, after it is organized, will take the matter up very quickly.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I have no doubt that that is the case; but I submit to the Senator from Washington whether it is quite fair to have these very important questions in relation to the public lands, which he knows are a feature of the bill, dealt with by the Committee on Commerce?

Mr. JONES of Washington. This bill also relates to dams upon navigable waters.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I recognize that.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I concede that legitimately it could be referred to either committee.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I recognize that; and I agree that it would be quite as inappropriate to have the bill referred as a whole to the Committee on Public Lands to deal with the important questions in relation to the navigable waters of the country. I think that in fairness the two committees ought to act in reference to the subject.

Mr. JONES of Washington. The Senator's bill, as I understand, covers navigable waters as well as the waters upon public lands?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Exactly.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I concede that it can be properly referred to either committee.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. But will the Senator concede that it ought to be referred to both?

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President——

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I yield to the Senator from Utah.

Mr. SMOOT. I suggest to the Senator from Montana that he divide the subjects matter into two bills, one having reference to water powers within the arid States and the other to water powers upon navigable streams. The Senator knows that that is the way this legislation was acted upon until the last session of Congress, when, in the House, a special committee was appointed to take up the subject matter. That committee combined both propositions into one bill and sent it over to the Senate. I believe it went to the Commerce Committee, and then the conference committee was composed of three members of the Commerce Committee and three members of the Public Lands Committee of this body; but there was no final action on the measure. It does seem to me that the two subjects are entirely different and ought to be treated as entirely different. They ought to be considered by the proper committees, and the provisions referring to water powers upon public lands ought to go to the Committee on Public Lands and those referring to the navigable streams in the country ought to go to the Committee on Commerce. I think that would be the best way out of the difficulty.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I thank the Senator from Utah for his suggestion, but I can not possibly accept it. I can not accept it in view of the difficulties of the past and the history of this legislation. That is the way these matters have been handled heretofore, with the result that we have been unable to get anywhere, the Committee on Public Lands of one or the other House having certain views with respect to the matter and the Committee on Commerce having diametrically opposite views with respect to it. We never were able to make any progress at all until we recognized that in many particulars and in many features the same principles are applicable to both bills, and they ought to be dealt with together, by one and the same committee. The matter was then taken up, and we eventually arrived at the stage of legislation when the last act to be performed was the adoption or rejection of the conference report.

Mr. SMOOT. I want to say to the Senator from Montana that I was a member of that conference committee, and I have not any doubt in my mind but that they would have had a conference on the part of the House and the Senate by members of the Public Lands Committees of the two Houses and would have arrived at a solution of this question affecting the Western States—that is, water powers in the Western States, where no navigation is involved—in a much better and quicker and more satisfactory way than was reached with the conference report with the two joined.

Now, I have no doubt but that there will be legislation, as far as the Public Lands Committee can bring about that legislation, at this session of Congress affecting water powers in the Western States. I believe that it will be better for the Commerce Committee to handle the navigable streams.

I will say to the Senator that I recall that in that conference it would have been very much easier to arrive at a full agreement if the members of the Commerce Committee of the House and the Senate had had only the question of navigable streams to consider. I believe that it would hasten the legislation if this course were followed, rather than to try to bring two questions so different in their nature and character under the one committee and try to get a unanimous agreement from that one committee.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I dislike to interrupt, but this question now seems to have formed itself into an argument of the merits of the bill. I think the reference should be made as the Senator from Montana desires, but just now I am more concerned about the order of business, and I ask for the regular order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is in order for the Senator from Montana to do what he is trying to do—withdraw this bill from the Interstate Commerce Committee and have it referred to some other committee.

Mr. THOMAS. I understand that objection has been made. Does not that dispose of it for the time being?

The VICE PRESIDENT. No; no objection has been made to the withdrawal.

Mr. THOMAS. I understood that the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] objected.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I certainly did interpose an objection to any unanimous consent with respect to that legislation.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator has a right to move that that be done.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I move that the bill be referred to the Committee on Public Lands and to the Committee on Commerce, the two committees to act upon it conjointly.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, I feel satisfied that no matter what committee this bill is referred to we are going to get together upon it before very long; and as one member—if I should be a member—of the Committee on Commerce I should be glad to confer with members of the Committee on Public Lands. A similar bill has already been referred to the Committee on Commerce, which has charge of it, and, so far as I am concerned, I have no objection to the Senator's bill being referred to the Committee on Public Lands, and should like to have that done. As far as I am concerned, I assure him that as a member of the Committee on Commerce I shall be glad to confer with the members of the Committee on Public Lands to see if we can not arrive at a common basis, because I want to get legislation on this proposition just as early as possible.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is, Shall this bill be taken from——

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I merely rise to inquire if that motion is in order at this stage, before the conclusion of the morning business?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Well, it is a unique proposition to refer a bill to two committees, but a motion to refer a bill to a committee is always in order.

Mr. LODGE. The question of reference is always in order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Yes.

Mr. LODGE. I think that is correct.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Montana.

The motion was agreed to.

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I send to the desk a bill authorizing the Secretary of War to loan certain machines, tools, and equipments now unused by the War Department to the Federal Board for Vocational Education, to be used in connection with the rehabilitation of soldiers, and for other purposes. It is short, and I ask that it be printed in full in the RECORD. I suggest that it be referred to the Military Affairs Committee, because, though the Committee on Education and Labor desires its passage, it is continuing something now under the control of the War Department.

The bill (S. 558) authorizing the Secretary of War to loan to the Federal Board for Vocational Education, and to trade and technical schools, universities, and other recognized institutions, machines, tools, equipment, and other supplies under the control of the War Department was read the first time by its title, the second time at length, and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed to lend, in his discretion, to the Federal Board for Vocational Education, to be used by it in providing vocational rehabilitation to disabled soldiers, sailors, and marines, and to trade and technical schools, universities, and other recognized educational institutions, preference being given in all cases to such schools, universities, and institutions as are in receipt of Federal aid for educational purposes, such machines, tools, equipment, and other supplies as may be under the control of the War Department and not immediately required for official purposes: Provided, however, That such equipment shall be loaned subject to such regulations as may be deemed necessary by the said Secretary of War for the proper care and safe return of the same when demanded.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE BILLS.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, I assume that one of the most important matters that comes before the Congress will be that relating to revenue. A gentleman in whose ability and experience I have great confidence has prepared two bills, one providing for the Federal incorporation of railroads, and the other for amending or substituting an act for the present interstate commerce law. While I have not studied them carefully and do not present them as my views, I do think they contain many very valuable suggestions which the Interstate Commerce Committee ought to have. Therefore I introduce, by request, these two bills, and ask that they be referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

The bill (S. 647) to provide for the incorporation of common carriers by railway, and the bill (S. 648) to regulate carriage and transmission in interstate and foreign commerce, were read twice by their titles and referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

DEVELOPMENT OF WATER POWER.

Mr. SHIELDS. I introduce a bill to provide for the construction of dams across the navigable waterways of the United States, and for other purposes.

The bill (S. 651) to provide for the construction of dams across the navigable waterways of the United States and for the improvement and development of such waterways for the use of interstate and foreign commerce, and to provide for the lease and use of public lands of the United States in the development and utilization of water power in streams running through or adjacent to them, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title.

Mr. SHIELDS. I suggest that the bill which has just been read be referred to the Committee on Commerce and to the Committee on Public Lands. It is in all respects like the one offered by the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH]. I ask that the same reference be made of this bill.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, I thought the bill of the Senator from Montana was referred to the Committee on Public Lands. I do not know of any rule under which a bill can be referred to two committees at the same time.

Mr. SHIELDS. Then I made my request under a misapprehension. I asked the Senator from Montana in regard to the matter, having come into the Senate Chamber while the subject was under discussion and not fully understanding it; and I understood from him that his bill was referred to both committees.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I did not so understand, and I did not know that it could be done.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It was.

Mr. SHIELDS. If I was mistaken, I withdraw the suggestion I made.

Mr. JONES of Washington. It probably goes nowhere, then.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, when I asked the attention of the Chair, it was on the question of making a motion to change the reference at that time. I had not been following the discussion, and I did not understand that the motion was to refer the bill to two committees. It seems to me that is an impossibility. I mean, it seems to me, it would be impossible to conduct business on that basis.

Mr. SHIELDS. I was somewhat confused about it, Mr. President, and I wanted to understand it; and I should like to know what the Senator from Montana understood was done.

Mr. LODGE. I should like to enter a motion to reconsider that vote.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, the Senator from Montana understood what action was taken by the Senate. There can be no doubt about it. My motion was that the bill be referred to a committee consisting of those two committees.

Mr. LODGE. Would they not have to be constituted a new committee together first?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. To act conjointly. I see no physical or moral objection to that.

Mr. LODGE. I see no moral objection, certainly; but I see a great many practical objections, and I think the matter had better receive more mature consideration. It seems to me it ends in absolute confusion of all committee jurisdictions.

Mr. SHIELDS. I understand that the Senate adopted the motion of the Senator from Montana, and referred the bill to a committee of both committees.

Mr. LODGE. I understand now that it was referred to both committees.

Mr. SHIELDS. The Senator from Massachusetts suggested that it go over, and my suggestion was that it had already been disposed of.

Mr. LODGE. My suggestion was that the vote by which the reference was changed from the Interstate Commerce Committee be reconsidered. I enter that motion to reconsider.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator want to take it up now?

Mr. LODGE. No; I think it would be well to conclude the morning business, if I might make that suggestion.

Mr. SHIELDS. Then, Mr. President, I ask that the bill I introduced be referred to the Commerce Committee, subject, of course, to change in the event that the Senate reconsiders its action on the motion of the Senator from Montana.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. LODGE. I do not seem to have cleared the subject. I am perfectly willing to ask for a reconsideration now.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is, Shall the vote be reconsidered whereby the bill introduced by the Senator from Montana, bill 220, was taken from the Interstate Commerce Committee and referred to a joint special committee composed of the Committees on Public Lands and of Commerce of the Senate?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I object to its consideration at this time and call for the regular order.

Mr. LODGE. I have entered the motion. Of course it can only be considered now by unanimous consent, but the motion to reconsider stands.

INTERNATIONAL MONETARY EXCHANGE COMMISSION.

Mr. THOMAS. I introduce a joint resolution authorizing the establishment of an international monetary exchange commission. It is very brief, and I ask that it be read.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 19) authorizing the appointment of an international monetary exchange commission was read the first time by its title and the second time at length and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That a commission consisting of seven members, not less than two of whom shall be members of the Senate and two of the House of Representatives, and known as the international monetary exchange commission, shall be appointed by the President of the United States.

This commission shall be authorized and instructed to inquire into and ascertain what methods and legislation are essential to the establishment and continuance of a fixed ratio of currency exchange between and among the nations; to confer and cooperate with commissions which may be created by Great Britain, France, Italy, Japan, and other countries, and charged with the same or similar duties, and to report the results of their inquiries and investigations to the President and the Congress not later than the first Monday of December, A. D. 1919.

For the purpose of defraying the expenses of said commission necessarily incurred in the discharge of its duties the sum of $50,000 is hereby appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the same to be paid out upon vouchers approved by the chairman of the commission.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I merely wish to add a word to the joint resolution which has just been read. It is copied bodily from a bill which was introduced in the Senate in 1897 by Senator Chandler, of New Hampshire, and which was afterwards enacted into law. I have introduced a bill with reference to the general subject of foreign exchange. Both of these subjects are at present of immense importance; and I shall take occasion in the near future to address the Senate regarding the subject matter, and the need for early action, if any action at all is to be taken upon them.

UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE.

Mr. SHERMAN. I introduce a joint resolution proposing a constitutional amendment. It refers to there being no discrimination on account of sex, and contains an educational feature. I ask that it go to the Committee on Woman Suffrage.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 21) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States granting universal suffrage, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Woman Suffrage.

ADJOURNMENT TO MONDAY.

Mr. LODGE. I move that when the Senate adjourns to-day it be to meet on Monday next.

The motion was agreed to.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I desire to give notice that on next Monday upon the convening of the Senate, at the earliest convenience of the Senate, I shall ask the privilege of addressing the Senate upon one phase of the so-called league of nations.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I desire to state that following the address of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED] I shall address the Senate upon the league of nations.

AMENDMENTS TO THE RULES.

Mr. LODGE. I submit three resolutions carrying amendments to the rules, of which I give notice, as required by the rule. I shall call them up at the earliest possible opportunity. In the meantime, I ask that the resolutions be referred to the Committee on Rules and be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. FLETCHER. I think they should be read.

Mr. LODGE. I think the rule requires that they shall be read.

Mr. PENROSE. Let them be read.

The resolutions were read and referred to the Committee on Rules, as follows:

Senate resolution 35.

Resolved, That Rule XXV of the standing rules of the Senate be, and is hereby, amended by adding a new paragraph, as follows:

"The membership of no standing committee of the Senate shall exceed 17 in number."

Senate resolution 36.

Resolved, That Rule XXV of the standing rules of the Senate be, and is hereby, amended by adding thereto a new paragraph, as follows:

"111. After March 4, 1919, no Senator shall be a member of more than two of the following standing committees of the Senate, viz: Appropriations, Agriculture and Forestry, Commerce, Finance, Foreign Relations, Interstate Commerce, Judiciary, Military Affairs, Naval Affairs, and Post Offices and Post Roads. No Senator being chairman of either of the foregoing committees shall be appointed on a conference committee upon any bill reported by either of said standing committees unless it is reported by the committee of which he is chairman."

Senate resolution 37.

Resolved, That Rule XVI of the standing rules of the Senate be, and is hereby, amended, as follows:

After the words "to the Committee on Military Affairs" insert "the Diplomatic and Consular Service bill to the Committee on Foreign Relations."

Mr. POMERENE. I understand it is the purpose of that amendment to refer the appropriation bill relating to the Diplomatic and Consular Service to the Committee on Foreign Relations instead of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. LODGE. Certainly; that is the purpose.

ARMENIANS, SYRIANS, AND GREEKS OF ASIA MINOR.

Mr. LODGE. I submit a Senate resolution to be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and beg leave to file with it a petition signed by 20,000 Protestant rectors and ministers and Catholic priests, and a petition signed by 85 bishops of the American church, 40 governors of States of the Union, and 50 presidents of colleges and universities in the United States in favor of the independence of integral Armenia.

The resolution (S. Res. 38) was, with the accompanying petitions, referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations as follows:

Resolved, That in the opinion of the Senate, Armenia (including the six vilayets of Turkish Armenia and Silecia), Russian Armenia, and the northern part of the Province of Azerbaijan, Persian Armenia, should be independent, and that it is the hope of the Senate that the peace conference will make arrangements for helping Armenia to establish an independent republic.

It is also the opinion of the Senate that provision should be made for the Syrians and other Christian populations of Asia Minor, and that those portions of Asia Minor where the Greeks are predominant should be placed under the control of the Government of Greece.

PEACE TREATY AND LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

Mr. SHERMAN. I offer a resolution, and ask that it be read and lie over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the resolution.

The resolution (S. Res. 28) was read, as follows:

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that it is desirable that the treaty terminating the condition of war between the United States of America and the German Government be separated from the covenant of the league of nations so that each may be acted upon by the Senate severally in the procedure leading to their final disposition, and a vote thereon ratifying or rejecting the same.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will lie over and be printed.

PROPOSED COMMITTEE ON AVIATION.

Mr. NEW. Mr. President, on Tuesday last I gave notice that at to-day's session I would offer a resolution amending Standing Rule XXV. Pursuant to that notice, I send the resolution to the desk and ask that it be read.

The resolution (S. Res. 39) was read, as follows:

Resolved, That Rule XXV of the Standing Rules of the Senate be amended by adding thereto a new paragraph, as follows:

"A Committee on Aviation, to consist of 12 Senators."

Mr. NEW. I ask for the immediate consideration of the resolution.

Mr. SWANSON. Mr. President, I think it would be proper to have the resolution referred to the Committee on Rules. It does not define the jurisdiction of the proposed committee. It does not specify whether the subject of naval aviation shall go to the committee. There is conflict between the Military Committee and the Naval Committee as to the jurisdiction of aviation. It seems to me the proper course to pursue would be to refer the resolution to the Committee on Rules to determine, if the new committee is to be created, to what extent it shall have jurisdiction of aviation. It seems to me, as the resolution proposes the creation of a new committee, and naval aviation and military aviation have heretofore been referred to those respective committees, the proper course would be to refer it to the Committee on Rules and let that committee consider it and hear from those two committees and also from others interested as to what jurisdiction should be given to this new committee.

Mr. NEW. Mr. President, in answer to the Senator from Virginia, I will say that I can see no reason for delay in the consideration of the resolution. It carries with it on its face the purposes of a committee on aviation whose duty and function it shall be to consider generally the subject of aviation. I ask for the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. SWANSON. I move that it be referred to the Committee on Rules for consideration.

The motion was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OF THE RULES.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 30), which was referred to the Committee on Rules:

Resolved, That Rule XXII of the standing rules of the Senate be, and hereby is, amended as follows: After the word "debate," where it first occurs in said rule, strike out the period and insert a colon and the following: "Provided, however, That any motion or resolution proposing an adjournment or recess of either or both Houses of Congress for a greater interval of time than three days shall be debatable."

RETURN FROM FRANCE OF DISABLED SOLDIERS.

Mr. McKELLAR submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 31), which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed to have brought home from France at the earliest possible moment all sick and wounded soldiers, officers, and men who may be able to travel without risk, and such sick and wounded soldiers shall have prior rights to be shipped home in all cases.

REPORT ON AMMONIA, NITROGEN, ETC.

Mr. SHIELDS submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 32), which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved, That 1,500 copies of the report of the Secretary of Agriculture concerning ammonia, nitrogen, and nitrogenous materials manufactured, imported, and used in the United States in pursuance of Senate resolution 137 of the first session of the Sixty-fifth Congress be printed for the use of the Senate.

RUSSIAN SOVIET BUREAU IN NEW YORK.

Mr. KING submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 33), which was referred to the Committee on Immigration:

Whereas one L. C. A. K. Martens, together with a number of other aliens, maintains in the city of New York a so-called Russian Soviet bureau, which pretends to represent the so-called Soviet or Bolshevist organization dominated by Nicolai Lenin, which has by force usurped the public authority, and has destroyed public order in Moscow, Petrograd, and other parts of Russia; and

Whereas said bureau is supported by funds obtained from said Russian Bolshevist organization and is seeking to obtain possession and control of the several Russian consulates in the United States and to become recognized as the official representative of the Russian Government in the United States; and

Whereas said Martens and said Russian Soviet bureau pretend to be seeking, on behalf of said Bolshevist organization, trade relations with the United States; and

Whereas said Bolshevist organization under the domination of Lenine has pretended to abrogate the legal institution of private property, without which contracts of sale and exchange and commercial relations are impossible; and

Whereas the institution of property is an essential part of human liberty and is the fundamental concept of law; and

Whereas no government is fit to exist or to be recognized by the United States which does not acknowledge and legalize the institution of property and provide legal process for the vindication of trespasses against property and for the enforcement of contracts with respect thereto; and

Whereas commercial and political relations are impossible with a government which does not recognize the institution of property and the legality of contracts for trade and exchange, and which does not give legal sanction to credits which arise in transactions of trade; and

Whereas the Bolshevist organization of Russia under the domination of said Lenine professes principles which are inconsistent with the liberty and law of the United States and which are essentially anarchistic and despotic, and without the pale of the law of nations; and

Whereas it is inimical to the interests of the United States that aliens professing such principles and propagating the same be permitted to be in the country: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Secretary of Labor be, and is hereby, directed to institute proceedings under existing law for the deportation from the United States of said Martens and other aliens employed with said so-called Russian Soviet bureau in the city of New York, and all other aliens who are known to adhere to said so-called Soviet or Bolshevist organization.

GOVERNMENT AT OMSK, RUSSIA.

Mr. KING submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 34), which was read and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

Whereas diplomatic relations between the United States and Russia have been suspended de facto since the abdication of the Czar and the fall of the provisional government of Kerensky; and

Whereas the relations between the United States and Russia have always been characterized by sincere cordiality and reciprocal good will; and

Whereas the Government and the people of the United States desire to resume proper and cordial relations with the government and people of Russia and to assist in every way possible the establishment of liberty and law in the public order of Russia under a republican form of government; and

Whereas the government of Omsk has for its purpose the establishment of these principles and is loyal to the policies of the United States and the powers associated with the United States in the war against Germany and is in harmony with the international policy of the United States and is worthy to be recognized and enter into diplomatic relations with the United States: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the government at Omsk, Russia, be recognized as the de facto government of Russia and that steps be taken to establish diplomatic relations with said Omsk government.

Resolved further, That the United States assist said government at Omsk in establishing its authority in Russia, and that measures be taken to advance to said Omsk government credits and ordnance supplies for the overthrow of Bolshevist tyranny and anarchy, to provide food and other material assistance to the people, to afford facilities for the convocation of the constituent assembly to determine and establish the future government of Russia, and to assist the Russian people in bringing their country into a state of economic order and progress as a sound basis for the prosperity and independence of the new federal republic of Russia.

TREATY OF PEACE.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President, I call up Senate resolution No. 12, submitted by me on the 20th instant. I ask that it be laid before the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate the following resolution coming over from a previous day.

The Secretary read the resolution, as follows:

Whereas the peace treaty has been completed and has been delivered to the representatives of Germany; and

Whereas a synopsis only of the treaty has been given publicity in the United States, and our people are entitled to know its full contents, and to what, if any, engagements they have been committed; and

Whereas it is reported in the press that the entire treaty has been cabled to the State Department and is now in the possession of the State Department: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Secretary of State be, and he is hereby, requested forthwith to transmit to the Senate the full text of the treaty of peace completed at the Paris conference and delivered to the representatives of Germany.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President, just a word in explanation, please, of the reasons why I have presented this particular resolution.

It seems obvious that the American people should be entitled to any particular matter which has been determined at the Paris peace conference which may affect the future of America or may in any way involve in subsequent years American participation. Indeed, it has been in days gone by wholly axiomatic that the people of the United States should be afforded frank and complete information about anything which directly concerned them in the present or which might in the future affect them.

I say in the past this would have been axiomatic. To-day when we believe in "open covenants openly arrived at," no longer is it axiomatic, and to-day, therefore, I find to my surprise and astonishment that a resolution asking simply that the American people know what they are entitled to know meets with some degree of opposition perhaps upon the floor of the Senate, and a considerable degree of opposition from the press which represents the present administration.

Mr. President, fundamentally we are entitled to know, fundamentally in this democracy our people are entitled to know, what the treaty is. If it be answered, as it is answered by the administration press, that we are not entitled to know anything about what is transpiring at Paris until the administration sees fit to inform us, the irrefutable response is that the administration has already informed us in part; and if we are entitled to know in part what the treaty is that is being completed at Paris, we are entitled to know the whole of that treaty.

I hold in my hand the semiofficial summary of the treaty of peace given out and distributed by the Department of State. I observe that it is printed in the official printing office. It is designated and characterized "Semiofficial summary of the treaty of peace." It begins with this particular paragraph:

The treaty of peace. Semiofficial summary of the peace treaty as cabled from Paris to the Committee on Public Information at New York, and subject to minor corrections.

Then follows:

The treaty of peace between the 27 allied and associated powers on the one hand and Germany on the other was handed to the German plenipotentiaries at Versailles to-day.

Handed to the German plenipotentiaries at Versailles 15 days ago, published in Germany by the conquered people in this war, perhaps denied now to the American people, the victors in this war. If denied, upon what theory is it denied?

Mr. President, if the American people and the American Congress are entitled to a synopsis prepared by this administration, reciting what this administration sees fit to recite, then the American people and the American Congress are entitled to the entire document, in order that the American people and the American Congress may themselves determine whether they approve, whether they wish to amend, or what they wish to do with the particular document. The instant that the State Department, 15 days ago, gave to the people of this Nation a synopsis of this treaty, written by certain individuals, we know not who, in Paris, that very instant—I do not care what your diplomatic procedure has been in the past—the American people and the American Congress became entitled to the whole treaty.

In some of the press of the Nation to-day are published terms of the treaty which do not appear, even by reference, in this synopsis that is given to us thus officially. Mr. President, I ask why, in a synopsis which is said to be complete and full, and subject only to minor corrections, are important parts of the treaty omitted? If there are any parts omitted, why should there be the slightest objection in this body to permitting the entire treaty to be given to this body and to be given to our people?

I read—the language is not mine; and, perhaps, I would not in thus fashion have spoken—an editorial published this morning in the Washington Post. The title of the editorial is "The mockery of free government." One paragraph refers to this matter, as follows:

It is evidently the purpose of the so-called peacemakers at Paris to keep the treaty secret from their own masters until the enemy signs it. Then the allied peoples will be informed that they must take the arrangement as it stands, good or bad, acceptable or intolerable, with all its imperfections and injustices, because the enemy has accepted it! That plan is nothing less than a trap, to be sprung upon the allied peoples, to shut their mouths, tie their hands, and bind their wills to an arrangement that disposes of their destiny without their previous knowledge and consent.

What a hideous blunder has been made by the peoples' representatives at Paris in thus presuming that they can control the will of the allied nations and curtail the extent of the victory which the allied peoples have won by their own blood!

So, Mr. President, because we have been given a part of this treaty, I ask that we be given all of it.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts in the chair). Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I yield to the Senator from Montana.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I inquire of the Senator from California if he is informed whether this treaty has been published in full in any of the allied countries?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I do not know; I am utterly unable to answer.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Can the Senator advise us——

Mr. HITCHCOCK. If the Senator from California will permit me, I can say very definitely that the treaty has not been published in any country, but that refusal has been made to consent to its publication by those who must be considered.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Then I want to inquire, further, from the Senator from California—I dare say it has been answered by the Senator from Nebraska—if he can advise us as to whether there is an agreement among the representatives at the peace conference that the treaty shall not be published?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I do not know, and I do not care. If there were such an agreement among the Allies, then you violate it when you give to us a synopsis of the treaty, and when you give us a synopsis of the treaty you ought to give us an honest synopsis of the treaty.

Mr. TOWNSEND and Mr. WALSH of Montana addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I yield to the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I understood the Senator earlier in his remarks to state that the treaty had been published in Germany.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Two newspapers have stated the fact that the treaty has been published in Germany. Of course, I do not know anything about its publication; but there have been meetings held, if you will observe, in various places concerning this treaty, and I remember it was published only three or four days ago that at a meeting of women, in which Jane Addams was present, a letter sent by the President to that particular organization concerning the treaty was read. Whether they had before them the particular treaty—the whole of it—I am utterly unable to say. I can not tell whether the whole treaty has been handed to any parliamentary body; I can not say; but I do say that we have been handed a synopsis of the treaty, and when you grant us a synopsis of the treaty, any rule as to silence respecting the treaty necessarily you abrogate.

Now, I yield to the Senator from Montana.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I merely desire to make a further inquiry of the Senator. I assume that this synopsis was given out by a concerted agreement among the representatives at Paris. Can the Senator advise us as to that?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I do not know, and I do not care. It is a synopsis; presumably it is a synopsis that tells the truth; and the only reason that there can be on the face of the earth for not giving us the whole treaty when you give us a synopsis is that you have something to conceal and that you want to conceal it for an indefinite period. I am not referring, of course, individually to the Senator from Montana, but I am using the personal pronoun in its generic sense.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I understood perfectly well the Senator was doing so; but I desire to ask the Senator to whom he does refer by the personal pronoun?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I refer to those who have given to the American people this synopsis—presumably the present administration.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. But I understand the Senator to assume that the treaty has been given out by agreement among all of the representatives of the allied nations?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I do not assume anything of the sort. I say I do not care whether it has been given out by agreement with one country or agreement with twenty countries. It has been given out to the American people, and having been given out to the American people they are entitled to all of it.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Let me ask the Senator just one more question: If there was an agreement among the representatives at Versailles not to give out the full treaty, but to give out only a synopsis, would the Senator then insist that that agreement ought to be violated by the administration and the entire treaty be given out?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I would insist, if the administration gave to the American people a synopsis, that it shall give the whole treaty.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Even though it had been agreed that it should not be given out?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I do not propose to discuss any agreement of that sort, and I can not assume—I will not for an instant assume—that any American, or any representative of free America, has entered into an agreement with any other nation that it will give out only a part of the treaty under the pretense that it is giving all of the present peace treaty. I indulge in no such assumption respecting this administration or the Government under which we now live, and I assume, of course, that a request such as is made in this resolution ought instanter to be complied with by the administration, and I trust that it will be, and that we shall find no opposition whatsoever upon this floor to the present resolution.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, the resolution presented by the Senator from California [Mr. JOHNSON] is seriously defective in form in the first place. It should not call upon the Secretary of State, but upon the President of the United States, if the request is proper. In that event, it should ask him to give the information, "if not incompatible with the public interest." It does neither of those things, but merely calls upon the Secretary of State to do something which he has no right to do.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President——

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I yield to the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. THOMAS. May I ask the Senator if he proposes to offer an amendment to the resolution meeting the objection he has just stated? My reason for asking the question is that I had prepared an amendment which I had intended to offer, but I am perfectly willing that the Senator from Nebraska should do it.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I had not considered offering any amendment to the resolution, because, in my opinion, there is only one proper treatment for this resolution. It is one of vast importance; it involves international relations; and it should go to the Committee on Foreign Relations for consideration before it is seriously considered by the Senate. I do not therefore contemplate doing anything more in this particular than to call to the attention of the Senator the very serious breach in form and propriety in asking the Secretary of State for information which can only be called for from the President of the United States.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Will the Senator yield to me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I take in good part the suggestions of the Senator, but I wish to point him the obvious answers. He says we should ask the President. There [exhibiting] is the document that is presented by the Secretary of State to the people. It is stated that the Secretary of State has the full document. He presents us a part that he says correctly states the whole document. Therefore, there is no impropriety; on the contrary, it is a natural thing to ask the Secretary of State to give us the full document, as he has given us a synopsis of it.

The second objection the Senator raises is that the resolution should make the request "if it is not incompatible with the public interest." Think for a moment! Here [exhibiting] is the treaty; and the officials say to us that it is the full treaty, subject only to minor corrections. So, how can it be incompatible with the public interest to ask that we may see all that has been given? The suggestions of the Senator might be relevant if they were made in the first instance before we had received any information or any official document.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I trust the Senator will not interfere with me further in my reply to him. What I am bringing up first is a mere minor matter. I was calling his attention to a very evident breach of the proprieties and customs of the Senate in dealing with the Executive in relation to international matters; but I am not stressing that point; I pass it over, simply calling the attention of the Senator to it while passing on the further violation of the proprieties of the case in presenting this resolution and asking the Senate to act upon it at all.

Mr. President, the Constitution is very plain and explicit in vesting the power of negotiating and making treaties in the President of the United States. The only power and the only function given to the Senate of the United States is the power to advise and consent to a treaty negotiated by the President. In the whole history of the United States, so far as I know, the Senate has never called upon the President of the United States to supply to the Senate the copy of a treaty which he had under negotiation. Under the power of the Constitution and according to the custom of over a hundred years the President undoubtedly has the power after the treaty has been negotiated in its tentative form, as this one has been, to tear it in pieces and refuse to send it to the Senate or publish it at all. It is his duty and his function, not our duty nor our function, to negotiate a treaty. Not only that, but after the President has sent a treaty to the Senate and after the Senate shall have ratified it, he still has the power to refuse to exchange ratifications or put it in operation. It is the Executive duty, and not the senatorial duty, to negotiate a treaty or to exchange ratifications of it.

If this were a treaty between the United States and one other country the President would undoubtedly have the power, if he willed it and if the Senate requested it, to supply the Senate full information and an accurate but tentative copy of the treaty in advance of its signing; but the United States is not the only country negotiating this treaty with Germany. The United States is only one of some fifteen or more belligerents which are endeavoring at this time to come to an agreement with Germany on this treaty. Up to the present time they have agreed among themselves tentatively; they have submitted the proposed treaty to Germany; they have given Germany a certain length of time to present objections and to request changes, and the press tells us this morning that one of the changes requested by Germany in some detail of the reparations provision has already been conceded. Other changes may be conceded; they will undoubtedly be asked. It is preposterous, in my opinion, for the Senate to interfere with the negotiation and demand the right to publish a document to which the other party has not yet agreed.

The President is not the only negotiator; the United States is not the only Nation involved. As the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH] has suggested, it is almost certain that there exists an agreement among the nations associated with us in the war that the only publicity given to this document shall be the publicity given to it in the authorized summary which has been published in all countries. As I understand, and as I am informed, Germany is under the same pledge of secrecy, and in Germany the only publication which has been made is the publication of the synopsis or summary to which the Senator from California calls attention.

There is a further consideration. The suggestion that the full treaty be published has already been made in other countries and already denied by the representatives of those countries. I do not know that I am going too far, but I feel justified in saying that the President of the United States would have no objection, so far as the United States and the people of the United States are concerned, to the full publication of this document, but it can not be published in the United States without getting back to other countries.

We have few complications in this matter. We are not much interested in the details of this treaty with Germany; but when it comes to France, a neighbor of Germany, a victim of Germany, her interests are great, vital, and if France objects—and I understand France does object at this time to publicity, and England also, for Lloyd-George has gone on record as objecting—if France objects and Great Britain objects, it would be absolutely indecent for the Senate of the United States to demand the publication and embarrass our associates in this negotiation.

There can not be any possible reason for insisting upon it at this time. No possible good can come from it. It simply means meddlesome interference with the legitimate powers of the Executive; it simply means embarrassment to the representatives of Great Britain, France, and Italy; and it simply means the throwing of a monkey wrench into the machinery and rendering more difficult still a problem already infinitely difficult. I think the Senate of the United States would commit a gross breach not only of the customs of this country but of international proprieties as well even to call upon the President to answer such a question. It would be an indication that the Senate of the United States distrusts him; it would be an indication that the Senate of the United States proposes to interfere with him; it would be an indication that the Senate of the United States wants to render more difficult the settlement of the peace, which we all hope is close at hand on the other side.

As I say, I hesitate to go too far in stating things that I believe I know; but I do know that it would be a cause of infinite embarrassment, particularly in France, to make public at this time the present terms of the demands being made on Germany, some of which may be subject to modification, and one of which already has been modified.

Therefore, Mr. President, I move that the resolution of the Senator from California be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President, just a moment in response.

I listened with some astonishment to the very emphatic utterances of the Senator from Nebraska and to the extravagant adjectives that he used during that discussion. I am utterly unable to comprehend the mental strabismus that can arrive at a conclusion such as he has suggested here. It is the veriest tommyrot for any man to say that we interfere with the peace conference, that we are doing something that is reprehensible, or that it is indecent to ask that that which has been given to us shall be given to us in full. On the contrary, it is the very essence of cowardice to be afraid to ask for that to which we are entitled, and which has been given to us as a synopsis.

The argument that is made by the distinguished Senator from Nebraska is an argument addressed to a particular condition of affairs which does not exist here at all. He is not speaking to the question of whether a full document, of which we have a synopsis, should be accorded us. Does the Senator mean to say that it was indecent to give to the American people what purported to be the full treaty that was made at Paris, and to give it in the form of a synopsis? Will it be contended that the whole wheels of the Paris conference must cease revolving, and that a monkey wrench is thrown into the entire peace formula because we have been given in America a synopsis of the treaty?

When we were given the synopsis of the treaty, everything that has been said by the Senator from Nebraska was answered fully, completely, and unequivocally. If there rests in the archives of the State Department a full document, of which this is a synopsis, the Senate ought to have it; but beyond the Senate the American people ought to have it.

This idea that representatives of the American people may go abroad, may sit in Paris, and in secrecy may deal as they see fit with American treasure and American blood, is a doctrine to which I will not subscribe for a single instant. This is the first time in the history of America when it has been contended that any man representing this great democracy could deal with a hundred million people in secret and tie them and their generations succeeding in secret into Europe's turmoils and Asia's and Africa's wars; and I will not, as an American, for a single instant subscribe to any such doctrine as that.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I desire to offer two amendments to the pending resolution.

I ask that the words "Secretary of State" be stricken out of the resolution and the word "President" substituted.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question? A motion has been made to refer the resolution to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. THOMAS. I am quite aware of that fact. I think the Senator will not object to my suggestion when I have completed it.

Also, after the word "forthwith," I ask to insert the words "if not incompatible with the public interest."

In the event that the motion of the Senator from Nebraska does not prevail, I shall ask that the resolution be considered in connection with the proposed amendments.

Now, Mr. President, if I understand the situation correctly, the draft of the treaty, either in whole or in part, has never been submitted to the Senate of the United States by the Secretary of State or anyone else; but a synopsis, a very considerable synopsis, has been given to the American public. We are not, therefore, in the attitude which seems to be assumed by the Senator from California. There can be no question but that if the State Department had submitted to the Senate an incomplete document or a document although seemingly complete was not so in fact, we would have the right to demand forthwith from the President, through the Secretary of State, a complete text of the proposed document. We are proceeding, so far as this resolution is concerned, upon a public statement which, however official, is not officially made to the Senate of the United States.

I do not think I am mistaken, but if I am I am sure the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] will correct me, when I assert that no treaty has been submitted in the past by the President to the Senate of the United States until completed to the satisfaction of the executive department. If, therefore, this resolution is to prevail, it must prevail in the face of established customs and precedents heretofore set by our predecessors in this body. There would seem to be excellent reasons why the Executive should decline or fail to transmit a draft of a treaty to the Senate until it had been drafted and considered to his satisfaction; for, if I understand the province of the Senate—and I think I do—our functions begin only when a full text of the treaty is submitted. They do not begin until that period is reached, although the President may ask and frequently has asked the advice and opinion of the Senate with reference to pending international questions immediately or remotely important. So that I do not believe, Mr.

President, that there is either precedent or reason for the consideration of this motion, much less for its adoption, at the present time.

I am opposed to the doctrine of secret negotiation quite as sincerely as the Senator from California; but I have always recognized, Mr. President, the necessity in public as in private negotiations of conducting affairs with regard to superimportant propositions with more or less secrecy until a final tentative agreement has been reached between the parties; and I am satisfied that in this instance—the greatest in the history of international negotiation, covering more subjects of transcendent importance, perhaps, than those confronting other previous peace conferences combined—many score of important questions and problems will present themselves which in the very nature of things must be considered in private. If it were not so, Mr. President, there would be, there could be, no successful negotiation when crises in world affairs present themselves; and although the President is committed, and justly so, to open covenants, openly arrived at, he must subject himself to those universal exceptions which arise in the attempted application of all general principles in life, whether they affect statecraft, economics, or morality. Hence, Mr. President, I am not disposed to believe for one moment that there has been undue secrecy in the solution of the mighty problems which are confronting this peace conference, and which they must determine in advance of the commencement of our deliberations.

So the proposition presented by this resolution is, Shall the Senate require the Secretary of State to present to it forthwith a complete copy of a document in his possession, the substance of which he says he has given to the American public, before it comes to us in the proper and well-recognized official channels? I do not think so. Moreover, I am satisfied, as the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HITCHCOCK] has stated, that there must be some understanding between the parties to this negotiation; that for the present the world should be informed of what it has already received, and that until the German plenipotentiaries shall finally act, and the German nation accept or reject this treaty, no further disclosures should for the present be made. If that be so, then we would be recreant to the understanding thus arrived at by the American representatives if this resolution should now be adopted.

Now, whether this is so or whether it is not so, I, of course, am not able to say. I do not pretend to say; but certainly if this resolution goes to the Committee on Foreign Relations, where it belongs, that committee, through its chairman, will at once put itself in touch with the Acting Secretary of State and be informed of conditions without any reservations. It will then be in a position to report upon this, as it should be in position to report upon all other subjects of concern submitted to its jurisdiction.

Why the haste imported by this resolution? Do we expect to begin a discussion of the treaty before it gets here, before it has been accepted or rejected by the German plenipotentiaries and the German nation? Is it possible that the Congress has been called into extra session for the purpose of taking up this business at once? I deny it. The last Congress adjourned with an enormous Senate Calendar before it. It was filibustered to death—and in the course of the next few days it is my purpose, if consistent with the Senate's business, to speak upon that subject at some length—in consequence of which this extra session was called for the immediate purpose of considering and passing the great supply bills, upon which, if I am correctly informed, the House of Representatives is at present engaged.

Now, Mr. President, with all due respect to my distinguished friend, the Senator from California [Mr. JOHNSON], it seems to me that he imagines a specter which does not exist—that the Senate of the United States will be called upon to consider and ratify a treaty without being fully informed of its contents, and that unless this resolution passes, and passes at once, we shall be deprived of that knowledge which is essential to the consideration of any subject, whether important or otherwise. This will all come in due time and in due season, and for my part I am willing to await the action of those who are charged with this supreme duty, believing that however they may be mistaken in the discharge of it, they are, as sincere patriots and Americans, endeavoring at all times to subserve the interests and promote the welfare of this great Republic.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS. Certainly.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I beg the Senator not to think that I am conjuring up a particular specter with respect to this treaty about which he has just inveighed—not that at all. We are all, however, now engaged in studying to the best of our ability everything pertaining to our foreign relations, to the league of nations, and to the treaty. All of us want such data, historical and otherwise, as we may obtain. A part of the data has been freely accorded us without our asking for it at all. It has been given to the American people.

Mr. THOMAS. Is not that enough to keep the Senator busy for a while?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. No, sir; because there must be something else, or we would be given the entire treaty; and if that be inaccurate, or if it be an assumption that is unjustified, then in any event no careful man who studies a subject wishes to have it by piecemeal; and if a part is given to us that is an honest synopsis, there can not be any objection in morals or in good faith or in diplomatic usage or in any other process of ratiocination by which you deny the document itself of which you say you give us a good-faith synopsis.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I am very glad that my apprehension regarding the Senator's attitude is not strictly correct. I have no question of the sincerity and earnestness of purpose of my friend, the Senator from California, with regard to this or any other proposition which he advocates. I know he is discharging his duty to his conscience and his country as he understands it. I am sure the Senator believes, as I believe, that the statement of the Secretary of State that he has given the most important features of the proposed treaty to the public is correct. Of course, there are reasons why some portions of the treaty are withheld. There must be some reasons. But the Senator does not by the form of his resolution propose to give the Secretary of State any opportunity to present those reasons for our consideration. It may be incompatible with the public interest, but whether it is or not this resolution requires that he shall respond forthwith. I believe they are good reasons, and I know that the Committee on Foreign Relations will be informed of those reasons just as soon as they are authorized by the Senate of the United States to take charge of this resolution. I might imagine what those reasons are. I might be able to make a shrewd guess concerning them. On the other hand, I might be mistaken. I feel very sure that they have relation to the negotiations now pending with the German plenipotentiaries. Whether I am correct or not, if it is true, as the Senator from Nebraska has intimated very strongly, that only the portions of the treaty have been given to the public everywhere which by common agreement among the several representatives of the nations should at this time be given, then regardless of any other circumstances or propositions we should defeat this resolution, if we do not, on the other hand, adopt the resolution of the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. President, I am also spending some time in a consideration of this tremendous proposition. I do not pretend to be as efficient and as capable, either physically or intellectually, as the distinguished Senator from California, but I find I have been given possession of enough of the proposed treaty to keep me busy day and night. I can not imagine how an individual, however eminent he may be nor however omniverous in the quest of knowledge, can be otherwise than satisfied with the morsel of the treaty which he now has before him. It is the large outline of the most tremendous international covenant that has ever confronted the world, and as a consequence, Mr. President, it is one to which we must give a great portion and if necessary all our time for its consideration before final action is taken, if we are to act intelligently and with a proper conception of our great responsibilities.

Mr. LODGE. Will the Senator yield to me for a moment?

Mr. THOMAS. Certainly.

Mr. LODGE. Surely if the Senator from Colorado has given to the document the careful study which he says he has, he must take notice that the summary on its face is incorrect. There are words that make nonsense. There are words which are obviously misprinted. It is a very imperfect summary. If you take the part in which it summarizes the league of nations, because there we have what purports to be the full text, you will get a very imperfect idea of what the real draft of the league of nations is from reading the summary. In other words, the summary to my mind is almost worthless. I should not dare take anything as being so on the authority of the summary.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I think the criticism of the Senator from Massachusetts is correct in part, but I do not admit by any means it applies to the entire document. There are some portions of it which are seemingly obscure, and if this resolution were designed to secure a more clear and definite statement of the summary itself I could conceive why we should consider it.

Mr. LODGE. In addition, Mr. President, I have seen printed in our newspapers here, and also other articles printed in newspapers abroad, containing textual provisions of the German treaty which are not included in the summary at all.

Mr. THOMAS. I have no doubt of it.

Mr. LODGE. It is given out piecemeal. As a summary it is worthless to predicate anything as regards the treaty.

Mr. THOMAS. Conceding that, for the sake of argument, let me ask the Senator, who has been in public life for many years, and who has adorned the Committee on Foreign Relations during the entire time of his service, and who is soon to become its distinguished chairman, and as such has doubtless perhaps a greater responsibility than ever rested on the shoulders of any of his predecessors, does he not think this resolution should be addressed to the President of the United States instead of to the Secretary of State; that it should ask for this information "if not incompatible with the public interest," and should it not go, as similar resolutions generally do, to the Committee on Foreign Relations, in order that that committee may take up the subject with the Acting Secretary of State, and then report to the Senate?

Mr. LODGE. I think it should be drafted in the usual form which is always the practice in regard to any inquiry relating to international matters. It has never been the practice of the Senate to address any inquiry to the Secretary of State. That department has been differentiated from all others. It has been the practice to address the President, and invariably in addressing the President the words "if not incompatible with the public interest" have been used. But I can see no reason whatever for sending this particular inquiry to the Committee on Foreign Relations. A great many inquiries which relate to foreign matters are not sent to the Committee on Foreign Relations——

Mr. THOMAS. That is true of unimportant ones.

Mr. LODGE. And many are, of course. Important ones are, if good reasons can be given for sending them there. In this particular case I can see no reason for sending the resolution to the Committee on Foreign Relations. It is an inquiry simply asking the President to give us the text of the treaty with Germany. He can reply perfectly well that it would be incompatible with the public interest to do so, which will protect him. In fact, we shall not get it anyway. So we are debating an academic question.

Mr. THOMAS. Then we are wasting the Senate's time here.

Mr. LODGE. No; we are not wasting our time, because we are calling attention to the new method of "open covenants openly arrived at," and that is desirable. When the treaty comes here, if I have anything to do with the charge of the treaty, I shall not invite the Senate to adopt the method of "open covenants openly arrived at," because they have presented to the world the most furtive negotiation and the most secret one almost which history can record in modern times. I shall simply ask the Senate to treat this treaty and all connected with it with plain and, if you like, with pitiless publicity.

Mr. THOMAS. I shall join the Senator from Massachusetts in asking for that.

Mr. LODGE. I shall want it laid before the country without any secrecy. We are now asking for one of the documents. In the case of that document we have had a synopsis—a bad one, but still we have had it. Other portions of the treaty have been textually printed abroad and here. I saw quoted textually from foreign newspapers the other day three clauses which I do not think appear in the summary at all, relating to what they call the "proces verbal," and when the treaty should take effect. Also here texts have appeared not alluded to in this summary. If it is proper to put in the press fragments, I can see no impropriety in our having the whole of it.

The President brought over here a draft of a league and handed it to us; that is, he handed it to the press. The general understanding was that we were to take that first draft. That is what was expected of us. It was a tentative draft submitted to the criticism of the world. Then he took it back and they amended it. They made it much worse than it was before. Then they published it again, the whole of it, in the midst of the negotiations, and now they say we must not have the text of the German treaty which every German shopkeeper is reading to-day.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. If the Senator from Colorado will permit an interruption, the Senator from Massachusetts is entirely mistaken. Nothing has been published in Germany except——

Mr. LODGE. I do not think the Senator from Massachusetts is mistaken.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I affirm that he is mistaken, and I have a reason.

Mr. LODGE. On what authority?

Mr. HITCHCOCK. On the highest authority now in Washington.

Mr. LODGE. By the President?

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I have stated it is by the highest authority now in Washington.

Mr. LODGE. The highest authority now in Washington is worth no more than what we have here.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. There has been published in the United States everything that has been published in any other country, Germany included.

Mr. LODGE. It does not appear so.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Will the Senator from Massachusetts yield to me for a question?

Mr. LODGE. I am on the floor only by courtesy of the Senator from Colorado, and I have trespassed too long on his time.

Mr. THOMAS. I yield to the Senator from New Jersey for a question.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. In connection with the discussion I send to the desk a clipping taken from the Washington Post, purporting to be a cablegram from a special correspondent, and ask that it be read.

Mr. THOMAS. That is hardly a question; but I do not object to it.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. It is an answer if it is not a question.

Mr. THOMAS. Possibly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

WILSON PREVENTS PUBLICATION NOW OF TREATY TERMS.

(By John O'Brien, special cable to the Washington Post and Public Ledger.)

PARIS, May 18.

Owing to the publication in German papers of certain parts of the text of the peace treaty transmitted by the German delegates, it was decided to permit the French press to do likewise, and it was semi-officially announced yesterday afternoon that a publication would begin this morning.

At a late hour last night, however, it is learned that President Wilson interposed a vetc on the procedure, which thereupon was abandoned.

It is impossible to discover the reason for this attitude, in view of the fact that the Germans know more of the text of the treaty than the allied peoples, but it is assumed that President Wilson was unwilling to face the criticism of the French, and perhaps the American press when the exact wording of certain clauses, notably that pertaining to reparations, becomes known.

Sharp criticism of the French Government by socialists and conservatives alike is expected to result from the decision not to publish the treaty text as demanded formally by the socialist group, as well as the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado will proceed.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, if the President has countermanded or vetoed or in any other manner interfered with the publication of the text of the treaty, I assert positively and unequivocally that he must have had, and did have, the best of reasons for it, and that, to my mind, instead of militating against, supports the attitude of the Senator from Nebraska. The Senator from Massachusetts has informed us that this resolution will not be complied with; that we will not get a copy of the treaty; and that all we are doing is debating an academic proposition. I suggested, and I now assert, that if such is to be the result, we are wasting time here. Candidly I do not think the Senate of the United States, in view of the business before it, has any time to waste. I hold in my hand the congressional output of the last 15 days of the expiring Senate of the last Congress. Physically it is a tremendous output. Intellectually the subject might be one of controversy. It embraces 1,973 pages, or 131 pages per day by the average. Water when evaporated into steam is said to expand seven hundred and seventy-five times. Congressional oratory when compressed into type is diminished in far greater proportion, yet we have this huge volume as the result. We are wasting time, and precious time, if that is so.

I do not believe, Mr. President, that this is one of the trivial resolutions which the Senate considers, and should consider, without referring it to an appropriate committee. I do not think the Senator who is the author of the resolution so considers it. It is one of the most important resolutions that has been introduced in the Senate since I have had the honor of being a Member of it. It is therefore, independent of other reasons, because of its vast importance imperative that it should take the usual course and be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, as suggested by the motion of the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Colorado yield to the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. THOMAS. I was about to yield the floor.

Mr. POMERENE. I desire to ask a question.

Mr. THOMAS. I yield to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. POMERENE. The Senator from Nebraska has given assurance to the Senate that there are very important reasons why, in his judgment, this treaty should not be given to the public at this particular time. Other objections have been made. I rise to ask the Senator from Colorado this question: Within his experience in the Senate has any resolution been presented to the Senate calling upon the President for information relating to our international affairs which was not, upon objection to its present consideration, referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations?

Mr. THOMAS. So far as my memory goes, I do not recall any instance in which the procedure was not as suggested.

Mr. ROBINSON. Will the Senator from Colorado yield for a further question?

Mr. THOMAS. I may add that the precedents should in this instance be particularly insisted upon, because the resolution asks for the first time, I think, in our history for the text of a treaty before the President sees fit to transmit it for our consideration. I yield to the Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. ROBINSON. Does the Senator from Colorado recall an instance during the administration of former President Roosevelt when some resolution of inquiry was presented to the Senate touching negotiations that were in progress respecting a treaty, and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE], the present leader of the majority, took the floor and contended with great force and sincerity that it was improper for the Senate to make an inquiry of this character during the progress of negotiations affecting a treaty? Does the Senator recall that the Senator from Massachusetts then insisted that the conduct of negotiations was purely an Executive function, in which the Senate should not concern itself, and that any attempt to do so would operate as an interference with the negotiations? Does not the Senator think that the argument then made by the Senator from Massachusetts is equally applicable at this time, and applicable with great force?

I will ask the Senator from Colorado another question: Did he see press reports published widely throughout the United States during the last 10 days that the Senator from Massachusetts, as leader of the majority, and the Senator from Kansas [Mr. CURTIS], as whip of the majority, had sent a telegram to every Member of the present majority urging them to refrain from discussing the proposed league of nations treaty until a partisan conference, a Republican conference, could be held, and the Republicans in the Senate should be thereby afforded an opportunity to reach a conclusion whether or not they would stand for a league of nations in the treaty or oppose it; and did the Senator see in connection with that the refusal of a number of Senators to be bound by such influences to refrain from discussing the league of nations treaty?

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, it is difficult for me to remember, much less to answer, all the questions which have just been propounded. I saw the published announcement and request of the Senators from Massachusetts and Kansas a few days ago. I was not a Member of this body during the reign of Theodore Roosevelt, and therefore my knowledge of what occurred is purely historical. I did, however, have occasion in January last to address the Senate on the treaty-making power of this body, and at that time quoted very copiously from one of the most masterly addresses on the subject to be found in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, delivered by Senator Spooner, of Wisconsin, during that period, in which he took the position emphatically that the treaty-making province and power of the Senate began and ended with the consideration of a treaty when the President saw fit to transmit it to this body for that purpose; and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE], in a short but admirable speech, expressed his assent to and approval of Senator Spooner's contention. That is undoubtedly the rule. It should not be departed from except in cases of most extraordinary emergency, and I trust the Senate will not be led to do it at this time.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, inasmuch as the Senator from Colorado has referred to me, may I say one word?

Mr. THOMAS. I yield to the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. LODGE. The Senator from Colorado certainly did not read any statement of mine which in the least resembled that which the Senator from Arkansas has stated. The request made by the Senator from Kansas [Mr. CURTIS] and myself was that they would refrain from interviews or making statements until they had an opportunity to consult with their colleagues. There was no suggestion of any partisanship in it. We are as nonpartisan as anyone could be.

Mr. THOMAS. Of course the Senator meant his Republican colleagues?

Mr. LODGE. I did not say that.

Mr. THOMAS. I know the Senator did not say it, but no other Senators were honored by the request.

Mr. ROBINSON. Will the Senator yield for a further question? I should like to ask the Senator from Massachusetts a question.

Mr. THOMAS. If the Senator from Massachusetts will receive a question from the Senator from Arkansas, I am willing he should ask it.

Mr. LODGE. I am glad the Senator referred to that debate upon which former Senator Spooner made the very able speech he just quoted, and my assent to it. I have not changed my views at all.

Mr. THOMAS. I am glad to hear that.

Mr. LODGE. The Senate is not part of the negotiating power, but Presidents have frequently consulted the Senate during the pendency of negotiations and before negotiations. I collected and gave the instances, which appear in a public document here.

Mr. THOMAS. That was voluntary but not obligatory.

Mr. LODGE. Entirely. I never suggested that it was obligatory. On the contrary, I think it is not obligatory, but it has been wisely done by such Presidents as Washington, Lincoln, and Grant, and I think it might have been wisely done by others. But it is not obligatory. The President is distinctly not obliged to consult the Senate at any stage of the negotiations. This has nothing to do with consulting the Senate during the negotiations. It is to ask for the complete publication of a document already partially published. I do not understand that we are allies or that we are bound by any treaty to allies. The President is always careful to say "Nations with which we are associated." We have no treaty binding us not to have that information, and I think we ought to have the right to ask the President for the draft of the treaty which he has submitted to Germany.

Mr. ROBINSON. Will the Senator from Massachusetts, by the courtesy of the Senator from Colorado, yield for a question?

Mr. THOMAS. I yield to the Senator from Arkansas for that purpose.

Mr. ROBINSON. The Senator from Massachusetts has stated the action of himself and his colleague, the Senator from Kansas [Mr. CURTIS], in telegraphing their associates the request already referred to—that they not discuss the league of nations treaty until a conference could be had—was nonpartisan. I should like to be informed whether the Senator from Massachusetts was speaking humorously or in all seriousness?

Mr. LODGE. I was speaking in all seriousness. We have not said a word about it. Not one word has been said in any conference held by the Republicans.

Mr. ROBINSON. I will ask the Senator from Massachusetts another question. Is it a fact that no one but Members on that side of the Chamber were requested to refrain from discussing the treaty until a conference could be held?

Mr. LODGE. Certainly. Our request was addressed only to Senators to whom we had a right to address such a request.

Mr. ROBINSON. The Senator saw, of course, the statement in the press of a number of Senators on that side of the Chamber to the effect that they refused to be a party to making the league of nations treaty a partisan issue and that they regarded his action in submitting that request as a partisan act. He saw that statement, of course?

Mr. LODGE. No; I did not see it.

Mr. ROBINSON. You did not see the statement imputed to the Senator from Iowa [Mr. KENYON], the Senator from California [Mr. JOHNSON], the Senator from Washington [Mr. POINDEXTER], and three other Senators, stating that they refused to be controlled by such influences? The statement was imputed to the Senator from Washington [Mr. POINDEXTER] that he did not see how it could be made into a party question. I do not know whether that implied that he was willing it should be made such, if it were possible to do so.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, only yesterday, in speaking to the State chairmen from all the States of the Union of the Republican Party, I distinctly stated that I could not discuss with them the league of nations, because I did not regard it as a party question and never have.

Mr. ROBINSON. Will the Senator yield for another and further question?

Mr. LODGE. I did not see the statement to which the Senator from Arkansas refers.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President, if the Senator from Arkansas will permit me, with reference to myself I will say that I did not see, or at least I do not recollect seeing, a published statement purporting to quote me about this matter.

But if there was any statement to that effect it was an erroneous statement. I never made any such statement as that to which the Senator from Arkansas has referred. I did make the statement—and I do not know whether it was published in the newspapers or not—that if the bulk of the Republican Members of the Senate were opposed to this covenant of the league of nations and a majority of the Democrats were in favor of it, it would automatically become a party question, and that my view of the question of partisanship was that it was not a question which could be artificially determined, but was simply a question of the attitude taken by the members of the various parties. Since the Senator from Arkansas has quoted a statement purporting to come from me, I beg leave to say that, entertaining the views and having the profound convictions that I have on that part of the treaty of peace that is denominated a covenant of a league of nations, I shall be perfectly delighted to see it made a party question by the opposition of Republicans, because my idea of the functions of a great political party is that a party in the service of the Nation should take a position, and should take a correct position, upon issues which affect the Nation, and I believe that would be the correct position.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Colorado yield further?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Colorado yield further to the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. THOMAS. I do.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. ROBINSON. The action of the Senator from Massachusetts and the Senator from Kansas in sending out the telegrams to which I have referred has been taken and accepted by the entire press of the Nation as an attempt to make the league of nations treaty a party question, and that construction is the logical consequence, I respecfully submit, of that action itself.

Now, with reference to the statement just made by the Senator from Washington [Mr. POINDEXTER] that he would be glad to see the subject made a party question, permit me to say that I think it is regrettable that a subject of this character and importance should take that course. There are some subjects which should be discussed and determined free of the ordinary influences which control partisan action; and if in all the history of the United States a question has ever arisen which should be determined without partisanship, in which the representatives of the people should express as best they can the will of the American people, it is a question of the character of the one which we are now discussing.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I agree entirely with what the Senator from Arkansas has just said.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Colorado still yield?

Mr. ROBINSON. I should like to make just one further brief statement. I shall conclude in a moment.

Mr. THOMAS. I yield for a moment.

Mr. ROBINSON. It will be remembered that when the first draft of the league of nations treaty was published the President issued a statement to the effect that he expected to hold a conference with members of the Commitee on Foreign Relations of the Senate and the similar committee of the House of Representatives, and members of the committees were respectfully requested to refrain from discussing the matter until after that conference. I speak concerning a matter of current history when I say that a bitter protest was made by the Senator from Massachusetts and those associated with him against the action of the President in that particular as an effort to stifle debate.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President——

Mr. ROBINSON. Just a moment, and I will yield to the Senator.

Mr. LODGE. I trust the Senator from Arkansas will allow me to interrupt him there. I observed that request religiously. I never said one word about the league until after the White House conference.

Mr. ROBINSON. The statement of the Senator from Massachusetts is entirely correct, as I recall it. He did not discuss the league of nations treaty until after the conference at the White House. But we all recall that his party associates took offense at the request of the President and expressed it on the floor of the Senate. It was published in the newspapers and other periodicals throughout the Nation as an effort upon the part of the President to stifle debate; but now, after that has been published and the revised draft has been published, we are confronted with the very singular request of the Senator from Massachusetts and his associates on the Republican side that Republican Senators refrain from discussing the revised draft—the very thing the President requested in the first instance of all Senators, but the request of the Senator from Massachusetts was for the purpose of holding a conference with Republicans only and deciding what they should do in regard to it. I submit that that is conclusive evidence of an attempt to make the question a partisan issue.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS] has the floor.

Mr. LODGE. I observed the President's request religiously, and so, I think, did every member of the Committee on Foreign Relations except one Senator, who refused the invitation; but the President, after having made that request, landed in the city of Boston, and while we were silent made an ardent speech for the league.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understood the Senator from Colorado had yielded to the Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER].

Mr. THOMAS. In just a moment I will yield to the Senator from Florida.

The President did make an ardent speech in Boston in favor of the league, but it was provoked by a number of violently ardent speeches in opposition upon this floor, delivered previous to his landing.

I shall now yield to the Senator from Florida, but let me say, before he begins, that I have been trying to yield the floor for some time, and I will yield it as soon as the Senator concludes.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I was merely going to ask the Senator from Colorado, who is disposed to treat the resolution as a serious and important proposal—and I am inclined to treat it likewise, in justice to the Senator from California and because it seems to me it ought to be so treated—whether or not if the resolution is agreed to now or is referred to the committee and reported from the committee and then favorably acted upon after the committee reports it, and the document is laid before the Senate, the Senator thinks it would be in order then to discuss the proposed treaty? In other words, the situation is that the peace terms have been agreed upon by the Allies and submitted to Germany, but Germany has not yet signed the treaty. There are suggestions that there may be changes and alterations yet made. Consequently, it is not a completed document; and would it be in order, would it be the proper thing for the Senate to enter upon a discussion of that sort of a document in that situation, in view of the fact that later on the President is to submit to the Senate whatever is finally agreed upon in the nature of a treaty?

Of course, I will say to the Senator that the remarks offered in support of the resolution by the Senator from California directing criticisms as to methods pursued around the peace table was an argument directed against the constitutional provision which empowers the President to negotiate treaties, it seems to me, and is confined to that, because the President has only been doing precisely what the Constitution authorizes and empowers him to do.

The suggestion by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] that the resolution is worth while, because it gives an opportunity to sneer at the President or to criticize the administration may perhaps justify it in his view. I do not think so, and I take it that the President will take care of himself so far as that is concerned, and when the time comes the American people will take care of those who sneer at the President; but outside of that, what would be accomplished if the resolution were adopted and the document laid before us admittedly in its incomplete state? Would it be in order, I again ask the Senator by way of presenting the question again, in his judgment, to discuss it if it were before the Senate now? Until the negotiations are concluded and the terms are agreed upon by all the parties and are finally settled it would create confusion, be misleading the public to have brought here and published an incomplete and unfinished document, and it would be premature to discuss it. There will be ample opportunity to criticize and sneer, as well as for legitimate discussion and well advised consideration, after the completed work is laid before us.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, that is a question which I think must adjust itself to the individual judgment and conscience of every Senator. For my part I hesitate to express my view of what should be the conduct of Members of this body under the conditions described by the Senator. Each will settle the subject for himself and settle it according to his own judgment and to his own conscience. My personal opinion is, however, that it would not be proper to discuss the subject of the treaty if we had a certified copy before us of the draft as it was submitted to the German plenipotentiaries, for I believe that our function will not begin until that document is officially laid before us by the President of the United States, for until then we can not know the form of recitals or the substance of its provisions.

It is impossible, Mr. President, for any Executive to encounter the responsibilities and seek to discharge the great duties that confront him, and escape misrepresentation, severe criticism, abuse, and contumely. No generation ever lived fair enough or free enough from its prejudices and its environment to properly survey and to pass judgment upon the character and career of its great contemporaries. We have never had a President upon whose shoulders was placed a burden of undue responsibility who has not paid the penalty of misrepresentation, of misconstruction, whose motives have not been arraigned and suspected, and who has not been reproached or maligned for imbecility, for faithlessness to his duty, for lack of patriotism. We need but call to mind the careers of George Washington, of Thomas Jefferson, of Andrew Jackson, of Abraham Lincoln. The martyr was abused and reviled more bitterly, more cruelly, and more unjustly than any man who ever adorned the great office of President of the United States. So with Woodrow Wilson. Yet I firmly believe after this generation shall have passed away, after the heat and bitterness engendered by the tremendous controversies which confront and arouse us shall have ended, when we now here shall have retired from the scene of action and our successors shall occupy our seats upon this floor, they will do the same justice and pay the same tribute to the memory of Woodrow Wilson that we all, whatever our party creed, so sincerely offer at the shrines of those great Americans who dared and suffered that America might live, that free institutions might survive, that the great Republic might endure as a monument and an inspiration to all the children of men.

Mr. SHERMAN obtained the floor.

Mr. ROBINSON. Will the Senator from Illinois yield to me for just a moment to complete a statement? It will take, I think, only a moment.

Mr. SHERMAN. I do so, providing I shall not lose the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois yields to the Senator from Arkansas with the understanding that he does not thereby lose the floor.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I stated a few moments ago that the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE], in the year 1906, during President Roosevelt's administration, had taken the position that the Senate ought not to interfere with negotiations by inquiries as to what the President was doing. Since the negotiations concerning this treaty have not been completed, the effect of the pending resolution is an inquiry as to the progress and result of the negotiations, and the only result of it will be to advance debate upon the question, and to interfere with or influence the negotiations, to bring influences to bear to eliminate or to modify the contemplated provisions of the treaty. I want now to put into the RECORD the language that the Senator from Massachusetts then used; and I want to say that I think it is absolutely applicable to the question at issue, the only difference being that at that time the Senator from Massachusetts was the spokesman of the majority who had a Republican Executive to conduct the negotiations, while at this time he is spokesman of the majority, the President belonging to a different party. The language which the Senator from Massachusetts then used is found in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of January 24, 1906, on page 1440, and is as follows:

> No one, I think, can doubt the absolute power of the President to initiate and carry on all negotiations; and after a treaty has been returned to him with the ratification of the Senate, to withhold it from ratification if he sees fit so to do. There is no doubt that the Senate can by resolution advise the President to enter upon a negotiation, or advise the President to refrain from a negotiation; but those resolutions have no binding force whatsoever, and the action of the Senate becomes operative and actually effective only when a treaty is actually submitted to it. We have no possible right to break suddenly into the middle of a negotiation and demand from the President what instructions he has given to his representative.

If we have no power to make that demand, we have no right to make a demand as to what negotiations have occurred or as to the results of the negotiations until the President is ready to submit them.

Further, the Senator from Massachusetts, in the same speech, said:

> From the foundation of the Government it has been conceded in practice and in theory that the Constitution vests the power of negotiation and the various phases—and they are multifarious—of the conduct of our foreign relations exclusively in the President. He does not exercise that constitutional power, nor can he be made to do it, under the tutelage or guardianship of the Senate or of the House, or of the Senate and House combined. * * *
> When he shall have negotiated and sent his proposed treaty to the Senate the jurisdiction of that body attaches and its powers begin. It may advise and consent or it may refuse. And in the exercise of this function it is as independent of the Executive as he is independent of it in the matter of negotiation.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, I do not wish to invade particularly the territory occupied by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON], but I wish to read from the President's views on the subject of his exclusive treaty-making power. I quote from him as follows:

> But there is another course which the President may follow, and which one or two Presidents of unusual political sagacity have followed, with the satisfactory results that were to have been expected. He may himself be less stiff and offish, may himself act in the true spirit of the Constitution and establish intimate relations of confidence with the Senate on his own initiative, not carrying his plans to completion, and then laying them in final form before the Senate, to be accepted or rejected, but keeping himself in confidential communication with the leaders of the Senate while his plans are in course, when their advice will be of service to him and his information of the greatest service to them, in order that there may be veritable counsel and real accommodation of views instead of a final challenge and contest. The policy which has made rivals of the President and Senate has shown itself in the President as often as in the Senate, and if the Constitution did intend that the Senate should in such matters be an executive council it is not only the privilege of the President to treat it as such, it is also his best policy and his plain duty.

That, together with the context, I respectfully commend to the Senator from Arkansas for meditation and future reflection.

I also refer to an address made on the 24th of February, 1919, at Boston, Mass. This was on the occasion of the President's return from his first trip abroad. He had from midocean by wireless communicated not to the Senate, who are his advisers in treaty-making matters, but had communicated to the public the first draft of the league of nations. I might parenthetically say also that he requested the Senate not to discuss the league of nations in its original form as he communicated it to the American people, but to abstain sedulously from any discussion until he had told us how it had been negotiated and its provisions framed. He said in the course of his address, referring to the original draft of the league of nations which was imperatively to be accepted without change, that if there were some narrow minds who were not inclined to take it in its form as presented—

> I should welcome no sweeter challenge than that. I have fighting blood in me, and it is sometimes a delight to let it have scope, but if it is a challenge on this occasion it will be an indulgence.

If that language were used last February in the demand that we were to take the original form of the covenant of the league of nations, or the constitution of the league of nations, as it was called then, without amendment, if that was the reply to the respectful request of the Senate that they be informed and allowed to discuss it, that was a challenge to parliamentary and political combat. Was that the calm counsel contemplated by the Constitution—to inform not only the public but in fact talking to the Senate that there was fighting blood in him and he accepted it not as a challenge to fight, but as an "indulgence." Therefore, any contest that may be instituted in this body is not a contest, but is a parliamentary indulgence, and in that I shall now engage.

Mr. President, the covenant of the league of nations is a revolutionary document. The principal articles, either in the original or the amended draft of the league, are in violent conflict with our national system of government. The original document was called "the constitution of the league of nations." Criticism was made by the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. KNOX] and others in this Chamber that it created a new world power; that the member nations thereby became subject to this supersovereignty; and the amended draft contains language describing it as the "covenant of the league of nations," substituting the word "covenant" for "constitution." There is, however, no difference in the necessary effect, because the word "covenant" implies a promise made of binding validity. So it is of no consequence which word we use in the preamble or if the amended draft be considered in its entirety. The league remains a supersovereignty created and set above every member nation and government that enters into that league. It is beyond our Federal Constitution, beyond the 48 States, and beyond any mandates of the American people. Under our Constitution, if such articles are effective, it must be by virtue of war powers beyond its provisions and vested in the sword wielded by a military dictatorship.

It is of little immediate consequence whether the treaty be communicated to us or not. We, either with or without it, can as well digest the wisdom of the Senate's refusal to adopt the previous question or gag law in the Senate last winter. We were told by many wise men, including the Executive himself, that the open forum in the Senate was an anomaly in legislation; that it was a menace to the deliberate conduct of free government. Certain willful Senators some time before that had incurred his criticism. There was an amendment made of the rules of the Senate, but not one that closes the open forum in the Senate under ordinary conditions.

The league of nations is interlocked with the peace treaty, designedly for an ulterior purpose. If it can be welded upon the peace treaty, it is supposed to procure votes otherwise impossible. Therefore, under the resolution of the Senator from California [Mr. JOHNSON] or the amendments of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS], it is not of so much consequence whether we get the form of the peace treaty to-day or to-morrow, but that we get it in adequate time for discussion.

The peculiar value of the motion of the Senator from California consists in the fact that it develops that the Executive denies legitimate parliamentary information to this body. The joining of these two documents is a confessed case of log-rolling. According to the synopsis, the league of nations covenant and the other provisions of the treaty have been so interwoven that it would require long deliberation by a skilled committee to separate them in the present form we have them. If the league be ratified while the Government is at war, the vast and unknown domain known as war powers of undefined extent will be invoked not only in this Chamber, but in judicial tribunals, to declare the treaty and the league of nations valid and binding obligations upon this Government. All the powers delegated to the President by Congress or seized and exercised by him as Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy can be drawn upon to support all those vast unknown, implied powers, the league, and whatever provisions of the treaty may be in conflict with the chartered laws of the land. This stamps the league as revolution and not as ratification or diplomacy. If peace can be first concluded, those extensive and undefined war powers disappear upon the instant at the end of the condition of war between this country and the Central Powers or Germany. The enumerated and implied peace powers now found in the Constitution of the Republic measure the heights and depths of human authority in binding our people in their established relations with the other nations of the world.

The United States Government commands the supreme allegiance of its citizens. No earthly power exercises greater authority over American citizens than does the Federal Government. I yield to it my allegiance under all conditions. I recognize the right not of the Senate, not of the members of the peace conference, not of the 14 or more nations that sit at the table in Paris, not of any European Government, for no authority on earth can command me, my life, and my fortune except the Federal Government framed by the fathers, and by virtue of which we sit in this Chamber. Temporal power, Mr. President, can go no further in human government than the power of this Government over us. That power finds its source in the American Constitution. In peace civil powers are construed and interpreted by peace tribunals.

War powers are interpreted, defined, or created by the military authority which exercises them. Its jurisdiction is of the camp and field. It is arbitrary and dictatorial of necessity. Free government can not survive on such a foundation. It always enlarges and increases its jurisdiction, for it never rests. This is human history from its earliest dawn to the recent governments that went down in the dusty death of yesterday. Let this Senate first ratify a treaty of peace; then we may well consider under civil procedure and civil authority, unawed by Executive war powers, the colossal, vital changes proposed in our form of government.

The revolutionary experiments bristling from this league may then be submitted to the people whose lives and fortunes are proposed to be cast into the bloody pool of the whole world's quarrels. Such changes as may be deemed proper may then be had through the established channels of constitutional amendment and parliamentary government. Alleged reforms will not then rest in the arbitrary edicts of the Executive, nor will the diplomacy of a free government find the Commander in Chief of its Army and Navy its only fit representative at the peace table of nations. By virtue of what authority does he sit in Paris? Is it because he is President, or does he wield his power and his influence because he is the military representative of a free government?

It is a singular spectacle indeed for a Republic's great elemental powers to be revised, curbed, and made subordinate to an alien creation in which it holds but a single vote by an elective civil magistrate, clothed in war powers and confessedly impatient of the traditional precedents of our country and the obligations of the laws of the land. Discussion which precedes understanding will be by a free press and free speech if peace be first concluded, and free speech will be possible once more in this country.

Now, a hundred million people must calmly talk, outside of the Senate Chamber and the House of Representatives, under the espionage act, in public and private, of the infamous, criminal insanity of the attempt to barter them and their posterity to the Old World to shed their blood in every dispute around the globe, whether it threatens or concerns their peace and safety or not. Altruism never before rose so far above human nature and common sense, nor idealism so deluded its visionary worshipers.

The twentieth century does not call us to reenact the crusades, and devote ourselves and our future generations to an endless combat with evil wherever found, as defined by this league, until it shall be driven everywhere from the earth. What a miserable delusion of man's attempt so to anticipate the results of the millennium! The ideal exists nowhere save in art and letters. Toward it the mind and spirit turn when unfettered with the material limits of our perishable habitations on earth. It is the goal never reached by mortal man, nor is human life ever destined to see or know the artist's dream or the poet's elysium of a sinless world. The misguided imagination of intellectual perverts, who have more sympathy for their impossible mental creations than for living human flesh and blood, has wrought more evil among mankind than the vicious propensities of the criminal and the distorted images of the insane. Their dogma is a narrow but, to them, an infallible creed. Who will not worship at their shrine is worthy of exile or the halter. Their league of nations is based on a state of civilization that does not exist.

Beware of him who unlooses his unbridled fancy to roam unchecked at will, to rearrange and remake all the public and private relations and activities of life. It degenerates at last into a pernicious, meddling interference that eats out and destroys like a cancer every sane, practical institution wrought out by the common experience of nations to safeguard the great elemental rights of mankind.

The man who writes a book to portray a new and perfect government he assures us he has invented, sufficient for the salvation of the entire earth, is more dangerous to his country than the anarchist who seeks to usher in the rule of dynamite as a cure for every ill.

Col. House foreshadowed the destruction of constitutional government in the United States in his work of fiction published in 1912. It is a text book for the peace conference in Paris. This novel exhibits his disregard of law and his belief in revolution. It throws a steady light upon his acts in the Paris conference, and explains why President Wilson chooses him as his chief adviser in navigating the uncharted seas.

George D. Herron, lately the President's envoy to the Bolshevist government in Russia, says of the President in his recent book, in 1917:

> He is revolutionary beyond anything his words reveal, beyond anything his contemporaries have discerned. As contrasted with America's President, the parliamentary leaders of German socialism are medieval reactionaries.

I caught him at it a year ago, but it did not seem to attract much public attention. I knew of Mr. Herron in Chicago some 22 years ago. He attracted some attention there by his peculiar ideas of the social relations in Chicago. It is enough to say that he emigrated. He went to the State of Iowa finally—not that their morals are more lax there, but there was less gossip.

Five members of the President's Cabinet are tainted with socialism. I am keeping close to the earth, Mr. President. I am not a poet or a sculptor. I do not deal in rare marbles or canvasses. Mine is very ordinary clay. A vast swarm of his appointees, too, in departments, boards, and bureaus, are known to be open and avowed socialists, single-taxers, apostles of government ownership, and hostile to the whole institution of private property. This atmosphere accounts for the eager grasp of private enterprise ostensibly for war purposes. It explains, too, the reluctant grudging release of those undertakings when the war emergency has long passed. It indicates with precision the vicious tendencies now apparent that lurk about the administration and its satellites. Under such conditions the powers of this league become doubly dangerous, and menace every legitimate enterprise of private life, as well as our form of government.

A government set up above the constitution and laws of the country and operated by Executive discretion is a despotism. Administered by alien nations, it is a call to action and resistance by every means God and nature have given America and American hands.

The administration of Woodrow Wilson, even under constitutional forms of government, is a hybrid between a French revolution and an oriental despotism. History would forget the reign of Caligula in the excesses and follies of the American Government operated under the league of nations, interpreted by President Wilson and Col. Edward M. House. It is now Jack Cade at one end, and Abdul Hamid at the other.

The ghost of Carl Marx squeaks and gibbers in one department, while across the way, when he is home at the seat of government, stalks the menacing shade of the Commander in Chief, wrapped in the mantle of undefined war powers about the presidential office. A more sinister assembly of men never threatened the peace and safety of our country than now demand that unlimited powers over the lives and fortunes of the American people be surrendered into their keeping.

Let no one forget, while admiring the mediations of dogmatic intellectuals, the ultimate purpose of their devotions. The head of the administration may be immersed in esoteric philosophy concerning the universal abolition of evil at one moment, but the next the lust of battle mounts in his blood, and he speaks of a challenge to combat as an indulgence; and again, before he closes, as at the end of the last session, he speaks of hanging those who cross his purposes or refuse to do his will. There will be a considerable entertainment when he starts on the latter process. The Bolshevists will be jealous of the commotion in this country. It will invite them to return, such of them as hatched the trouble in Russia, to the East Side in New York City. On a certain occasion we are advised that the millennium awaits on the 14 points, and soon after we gather, even from censored cables, that the aforesaid points are a mass of ruins. Again, I say, never was unbridled power asked to be trusted to so dangerous hands.

The revised draft of the league of nations extends over every government the scepter of an international sovereign. There is no difference between the amended league, the covenant, and the constitution of last February. We were told to take it last February without change; that it was the grossest sacrilege to discuss it even. This league in either form creates a new power and imposes a new obedience upon all the countries of the world. It thrusts its hands into the affairs of all governments. From it nothing is protected, nothing is secure. The amendments are widely heralded as an abandonment of the principle of supersovereignty. It is alleged that a mere league or pledge of good faith is substituted, leaving all the elemental sovereign faculties of the several member States unimpaired. This is a basic error.

A certain very genial and capable Senator said that nobody objected to the league of nations but lawyers. It does not hurt the lawyers any. They are a hardy, capable lot of men, who will survive any kind of treatment. There is scarcely a lawyer in the United States of any standing at the bar who does not regard the league of nations as the creation of a new world power that sits in judgment upon the member nations, their governments, and their peoples.

The thing created in the original league still endures. It rises in the affairs of men as a vast structure, endowed with all the vital organs of an independent State. Its potential grip upon the world is as universal as it is amazing, if it be carried into execution. Elemental powers that sweep the entire field of human action and appertain only to sovereignty are vested in this political organism. Appropriate instruments are provided to execute these powers and construe, interpret, and extend them everywhere in practical operation. The term "sovereign" does not need to be written upon a creation that so visibly possesses all the attributes of absolutism and finality in the rights and duties of the several nations of the world.

Note its framework, powers, and instrumentalities. The member nations of the league are represented in an assembly which meets as occasion may require. It may—deal at its meetings with any matter within the sphere of action of the league or affecting the peace of the world.

Each member nation has one vote in so dealing with such subjects. These powers are found in article 3. This article is jurisdictional. It is likewise so comprehensive as to leave nothing it may not deal with. Every terrestrial act and thing is included. The only limit is found in the law of gravitation. All the equipment, powers, and indicia of a legislative body appear in this assembly. It is an attempted parliament of nations controlled by an oligarchy. The oligarchy is found in article 4, where it is provided that the council is the executive branch of this creation. It names five members of the council, one each from the British Empire, France, Italy, Japan, and the United States, as the first five permanent members. The temporary members represent Spain, Greece, Brazil, and Belgium for the other four of the full membership of nine. The four permanent members shall be selected by the assembly. Each council member shall have one vote. Annual meetings or oftener are authorized, and the council may—deal at its meetings with any matter within the sphere of action of the league or affecting the peace of the world.

It will be observed that the jurisdiction of the council and the assembly is conferred in identical words. Neither human language nor physical laws admit of further enlarging the scope of the powers of either. Each member of the council is given one vote on this extensive range of subjects. Greece, Spain, and Brazil each have the same vote as the United States. These three nations, to illustrate, will exercise three times the voting power of our Government in the council. They will be member nations whose representatives sit in the assembly. There they will vote in the appointment of the four permanent members of the council, three times to our once.

The council in article 14 is ordered and empowered to submit to the members of the league for adoption plans for a permanent court of international justice, competent to hear and determine any dispute of an international character the parties may submit to it. That court may give an advisory opinion on any question or dispute referred to it by the council or the assembly.

There is an ex-President of the United States who is quite active in promoting the league, both the original and the amended league. He says that pygmies and old ladies are the only ones who are opposing either form of the league, that he would not trust Senators opposed to the league over night. If he were to put on a kimono and shave off his moustache, Mr. President, he would be the prize dowager of the whole beauteous sisterhood. I am excessively weary of his lucubrations. He has not had an original thought since he left the presidency. He takes his inspiration from this administration. Being second hand, it is stale before he ever reaches the public with it.

I ought here parenthetically to remark that when the Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] hears of what has been said, I have no doubt it will shock his parliamentary sensibilities. I offered a letter here at the last session that met with his sturdy disapproval. I say what I do, and offer what I do, because one can meet certain of the ex-President's remarks, such as I have referred to, only by ridicule: "Answer a fool according to his folly, lest he be wise in his own conceit," saith Solomon of old. Not that the distinguished gentleman is so classified, but the argument named is.

A permanent secretariat, comprising a secretary general and necessary assistants, is provided in article 6. This is an administrative instrument, appointed by the council with the approval of the assembly. It becomes the custodian and keeper of all the records and papers of the several instruments of the league probably. It serves as the clerical force, the espionage branch, and the instrument of investigation. In practice the assembly, the council, and the permanent court of international justice compose the three great departments—legislative, executive, and judicial—that characterize the separation of sovercign power in all modern times. The identification of the new organism as a permanent and independent government is complete. Time will develop and strengthen its hold upon the several nations who submit to its membership or are brought under its sway.

I shall therefore submit my views on the assumption that this covenant of the league of nations, as well as the original covenant, is not an assembly of existing governments united by a friendly treaty for self-defense against one or more aggressive outlaw nations. I regard it as, and I believe it is, a new sovereign power proposed, assuming to assert dominion over governments and nations, to sit in judgment on the American people, and frame new laws to order their lives and seize their property. Its decrees, if effective, bind the United States Government, abrogate its Constitution, and rule our people by laws made in Geneva, Switzerland, or whatever other capital may be selected by the council as the seat of this new creation and government. The sovereignty of this Nation passes from the territorial limits of our country to a foreign capital. Dominion is transferred from American to alien soil. Congress can not legislate, it can not pass appropriation bills nor collect revenues, it can not enact labor legislation nor exercise the usual police power belonging to an independent State until the decrees of the latest orders of the Geneva council or measures in the assembly shall first have been studied and understood. War can not be declared nor peace concluded, armies raised and supported, navies provided and maintained, nor the National Guard of the several States mustered and equipped even for domestic duty within the limits of the State until this alien power wielded by the nations of the Old World shall have advised us of the limits of our national sovereignty.

If these fetters can not be bound upon us under civil law, under the constitutional powers now existing, by executive officers or the United States Senate, the exigencies of war or apprehended war and undefined military power will be invoked irrevocably to fasten them upon the United States Government and our people.

The reserved rights of the 48 constituent States of the Union which lie as a substructure beneath the Republic are utterly destroyed by this league. These great local training grounds for the practical duties of the citizen are obliterated. The internationalism of Col. House and President Wilson is proposed to be substituted for the American nationalism of Washington and Lincoln, and the troubles of the world are to be undertaken instead of our own. This league casts in the inflexible mold of their omniscience the fortunes and the fate of our country. Do our wide walls encompass but this pair, the master of us all? Is the "breed of noble bloods" yoked so beneath their usurping hand they bear the palm and rule alone? So asked Cassius of Brutus when he observed the power of the mighty Julius.

The question constantly arises, as one contemplates their conduct, from whom or what instrument they obtain their authority, what warrant have they, from what source do they trace their power to frame and impose upon their Government and the people of the United States such a creation? Do they believe and do the advocates of this league believe the Federal Government is preserved and sustained by this remarkable document of the league of nations in its amended form, as printed by the association urging its adoption? Does this grant of arbitrary power to an alien body sustain our Government?

The President qualified on each occasion of his inauguration by taking the following oath of office:

I do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States and will to the best of my ability preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States.

The President is now endeavoring to subvert and destroy the fundamental laws of the Republic. Does he believe he is preserving and defending that Constitution by creating and ratifying powers which, if effective, impair or abrogate its fundamental and sovereign powers?

The league fixes in unchangeable limits the present boundaries of every member nation. Its frontiers are final. Shantung, with its 40,000,000 of Chinese, is transferred to Japan without a plebiscite.

We have heard much of self-determination of peoples in territory to be transferred. That is given a dignified and diplomatic name by calling it plebiscite. China would like its application, but sees no hope.

If China appeals to arms for redress, we pledge ourselves to send our armies and navies to confirm and perpetuate the robbery of a trusting friend. The inevitable controversies on European territory have already sowed the seeds of distrust and suspicion. What the future world peace will be requires an international optimist of large proportions. Fiume and Danzig are the fertile spots for future international strife. Only the novice and the idealist undertake to know the uncharted future of such problems. To the European of affairs they present the explosive material ready for war on a moment's notice.

Mr. Morganthau, former ambassador to Turkey, addressed the soldiers of the American Expeditionary Force comprising the army of occupation at Coblenz, and told them not to be optimistic about universal peace; that the next 15 or 20 years would probably see another war growing out of the rivalries, the jealousies, and the mistakes of this controversy.

No statesman assumes to anticipate all the wisdom of the ages. Yet if this league is sound in its articles it undertakes to settle what only time can develop. It leaves no discretion to posterity.

Article 10 binds the members of the league, as in the original draft—to preserve as against external aggressions the territorial integrity and existing political independence of all members of the league. In case of any such aggression or in case of any threat or danger of such aggression the council shall advise upon the means by which this obligation shall be fulfilled.

We undertake to defend and preserve the borders of every member nation as fixed at the time of the adoption of the league and the peace treaty. When France joined with the American colonies in the Revolution, if this league had existed it would have forbidden the sword of Lafayette to be drawn with Washington's, and would have crushed the infant Republic beneath the armies of George III and Louis XVI. It announces in substance to mankind that the period of successful revolution has drawn to a close in the world's history. It has closed the book of human experience and written the last chapter in the evolution of human government. It is the knell of revolt against arbitrary power. It offers a premium on bad government, however intolerable, by shutting the door of hope on the oppressed and warning external powers to leave the tyrant alone with his victim, sanctified by the holy covenants of this eternal league. May not the future mothers of mankind gaze in mute despair upon the starless night of races bound for ages in the changeless dominion forged in these mighty powers! Might they not pray to be smitten with a sterile curse that their offspring might escape the doom of perpetual bondage pronounced in this infamous covenant, malign and sinister to all the future sons of men!

It obligates the United States to take up arms, to draft its men, and tax its people to support the boundary lines of Great Britain, France, or any other member country possessed of colonial dependencies wherever found. The press reports recently carried information of the invasion of the East Indian frontier by the Afghans. It may or may not be of significance. Its meaning in the interpretation of article 10 is that it is our controversy. American lives may be sent to Khyber Pass to perish in a dispute with which we have not the remotest concern. We were not consulted when the elder Pitt and his parliamentary associates laid the foundation of England's East Indian empire a century and a half ago. I will consent to concern my country now only when the invasion of that distant colony threatens our own safety.

Article 11 enlarges our obligations under article 10 It declares:

Any war or threat of war whether immediately affecting any of the members of the league or not is hereby declared a matter of concern to the whole league, and the league shall take any action that may be deemed wise and effectual to safeguard the peace of nations.

This league thereby becomes the police officer of the world. The United States consents to form a part of the league's posse comitatus. Every member of the league is here given the right to bring the attention of the assembly or of the council to any circumstances which threaten to disturb either the peace or the good understanding between nations upon which peace depends. We are made parties not only to war and threats of war, but to every complaint made by member nations. There is small need to consider ourselves at peace after we have ratified the treaty with Germany if this league be adopted. Under these articles it will be of short duration. As the wealthiest nation in the league, with its man power unimpaired, with great taxable resources, the heavy burden will continually fall upon the American people as we are constantly more and more made the high constable of the habitable globe.

Article 16 adds to the continuing condition of the war not covered by articles 10 and 11. Article 16 provides:

Should any member of the league resort to war in disregard of its covenant under articles 12, 13, or 15, it shall ipso facto be deemed to have committed an act of war against all other members of the league, which hereby undertake immediately to subject it to the severance of all trade or financial relations, the prohibition of all intercourse between their nations and the nations of the covenant-breaking State and the prevention of all financial, commercial, or personal intercourse between the nationals of the covenant-breaking States and the nationals of any other State whether a member of a league or not.

It shall be the duty of the council in such case to recommend to the several governments concerned what effective military or naval forces the members of the league shall severally contribute to the armaments of forces to be used to protect the covenants of the league.

The members of the league agree further that they will mutually support one another in the financial and economic measures which are taken under this article in order to minimize the loss and inconvenience resulting from the above measures, and that they will mutually support one another in resisting any special measures aimed at one of their number by the covenant-breaking State.

The Constitution of the United States and article 16 can not both endure within the same territory. They are of that irreconcilable and repugnant character as to be wholly impossible of concurrent operation. This article marks the parting of the ways definitely and finally.

The first clause of article 16 declares if any member of the league resort to war in disregard of its covenants under articles 12, 13, or 15, it shall of itself be deemed an act of war against all other members. This creates a condition of war without a declaration by Congress. With no act on the part of any public authority representing this Government or its people we are at war with the offending State. We are at once subject to invasion and our merchant shipping exposed to a hostile navy wherever found. We covenant thereby immediately to lay an embargo on all commercial and financial relations with the covenant-breaking State. This again is a power exercised in this country by Congress and by no other authority. This engagement is imposed on us not by our voluntary act but by the misconduct of a State in its relation to some other State. It may not remotely concern our peace and safety, but we pledge ourselves to engage in the matter in whatever part of the world it may have occurred.

The members of the league further agree that they will support one another in the financial and economic measures taken under this article, and will resist any special measures aimed at one of their numbers by the offending state. This pledges absolutely the power and resources of our country in advance. It removes from Congress any discretion. Embargoes laid under war conditions, financial and economic relations severed, are the inevitable instrumentalities of war. The support of such measures bind our Government in anticipation to sustain the course adopted whatever it may be by every means known to the power of our Government. This, therefore, pledges the United States, when ratified, to declare war, and to employ every necessary step to wage it because some alien and distant member of the league has broken its covenants. How, we know not, and why, we know not, Congress becomes a perfunctory body, a mere debating club like the German Reichstag under the late Kaiser. If this article, therefore, does not deprive Congress of all voluntary power or discretion on this vital subject, it is idle to employ language in an attempt to do so.

Section 8 of Article I of the Constitution enumerates, among other powers expressly conferred upon Congress, the following:

To declare war, grant letters of marque and reprisal, and make rules concerning captures on land and water.

This power is an empty form if article 16 of the league is effective. War is declared or not declared under its provisions as a nation keeps or breaks the covenant it has engaged to observe. I do not believe if the President negotiates and approves and the Senate ratifies such an article it abrogates this sovereign power constitutionally vested in Congress. It would be a most anomalous method of amending the Constitution and is of no binding validity in case it be ratified.

Why, then, urge a void article in what I believe would at best be but a mere treaty?

It is quite outside the established channel provided for amendments in that charter itself. It is astonishingly like the method of making treaties and enacting a code of international law described in Col. House's novel to which I have frequently referred. There is a singular coincidence in this book and the opinion of President Wilson on the inconsequential character of constitutional powers and limitations. It may be mere chance, but the close parallel followed by the equally close association resulting in the contemptuous disregard of the Constitution by virtue of which both of them sit at the peace table is so remarkable as to arouse inquiry.

Another clause of Article I, section 8, provides that Congress shall have the power—

To raise and support armies, but no appropriation of money to that use shall be for a longer term than two years; to provide and maintain navies; to make rules for the government and regulation of the land and naval forces.

No greater sovereign power is exercised by government than that of peace and war and the creation of the necessary forces for waging it. Coupled with these powers is section 7 of Article I, which provides—

All bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives.

And read with this is the provision, in section 9 of Article I, that—

No money shall be drawn from the Treasury but in consequence of appropriations made by law, and a regular statement and account of receipts and expenditures of all public money shall be published from time to time. Neither shall any person holding any office of trust or confidence under the United States, without the consent of Congress, accept of any presents, emolument, offer, or title of any kind whatever from any king, prince, or foreign State.

The difficulty or impossibility of executing the powers of the amended league without action by Congress therefore becomes apparent. The tax power is concerned.

In the English-speaking race the taxing power has led to some of the most historic struggles in the development of free government. Our Constitution was framed and the powers quoted vested in Congress with the full knowledge of the past. These powers were conferred with deliberation and purpose agreeably to the safeguards of free government wrought out by parliamentary experience and established on the field of battle. England and the Netherlands bequeathed to us the wealth of their constitutional experience in the tax powers administered by a self-governing people. The low countries rose in renewed revolt against the Spanish crown when unjust taxes were laid upon the people. Englishmen secured the right of parliamentary taxation at Naseby and Marston Moor, and guaranteed it against invasion by the forfeited life of the first Charles. No written constitution preserved this enduring right of the British subject, as in our constitutional history. It is recorded, however, in the imperishable language of Cromwell's Parliament, of the abdication of James II, and of the immortal documents that reach from A. D. 1215 to the unquestioned supremacy of the House of Commons and their great supply bills in 1914–1918 that supported the allied cause against Germany. Our Republic does no more than adopt the experience of centuries on the right of the people in all free government to control and fix the money bills under which they pay their taxes. These sovereign powers of the American Constitution are of the gravest concern.

Let no one forget that the articles of the amended league will impose upon us financial burdens by a government sitting and operating at Geneva, Switzerland. These powers rank next to the great headlands that secure the rights of person against the rushing tides of arbitrary power in every age. They must be kept inviolable against violation by domestic usurpation or invasion of foreign powers.

When article 16 undertakes to pledge the financial power of the United States without the intervention of the great constitutional authority of Congress, in which it alone is vested, it is an attack upon constitutional government as flagrant and unjustifiable as the ship money of Charles I, or the suspending and dispensing power of statutes claimed by James II.

There is a limit to Executive authority in this country. That limit is found in the Constitution. If there be an Executive who disregards the Constitution the power of its enforcement against him and the power of revolution remain in the hands of the people. No Executive can destroy it sitting in Paris or elsewhere with his associates. It is now time to remember it. It may be time to impose salutary restraints later.

The members of the conference representing Great Britain, sitting at the peace table, undoubtedly have constantly in mind the fact that the United Kingdom of Great Britain has no written constitution. Her charter is a series of compacts and agreements, elemental principles confirmed by usage, petitions, acts of Parliament, and decisions of her courts.

Her Parliament exercises supreme and uncontrollable temporal power. Its acts constitute the highest authority in the British Empire. Its acts can not be unconstitutional because they import sovereignty in themselves. They exceed in their binding obligations the power of the British King, of his cabinet, and every subordinate that represents the kingly power. There is in practice no royal veto power in that country.

Our country is builded upon the supremacy of a written Constitution, of enumerated grants, of powers and limitations upon the Government created under it and prohibited by it to the States by the authority of whose people the present Government is created. The Constitution, not Congress, nor the Executive, is sovereign, and by it the validity of our legislation must be tested. It is the American system, and the time is not far distant when its wisdom will be demonstrated. Great Britain's representatives at the peace conference may not fully appreciate the importance of the constitutional differences in the character of the two Governments. I assume they represent and guard the interests of Great Britain. It is the duty of our representatives to safeguard the United States. They have yielded too much to Great Britain now. The more reason is this why the Senate should have the information called for by the resolution of the Senator from California [Mr. JOHNSON], and why the Senate should in every lawful way defend the country now.

The league assails our constitutional Republic so as to arouse the profoundest apprehension. What Great Britain may do through Parliament is no test of what may be done through the President of the United States. What is lawful by the British Parliament or foreign diplomacy is the most flagrant usurpation in the United States. This is our Government and our country. If it be abandoned and deserted at Paris in its hour of peril, shall we not protect it at Washington if we are worthy of our birthright of old?

The support pledged in article 16 invades the congressional power to raise and support armies and provide and maintain navies. This great governmental power is not vested in the President. He commands only such forces as Congress sends him. If none be sent, he is a commander without a soldier. This power is exclusive in Congress. Our Government's representatives at the peace conference, appointed by the President, including the appointment of himself by himself, possess no such power. The agents of this Government having no such power can not create an institution that will possess that power. The offspring of an agent's act can exercise no greater power than is delegated to the agent himself. This is axiomatic, of course. The President is Commander in Chief only of the armies and navies provided and supported by Congress.

Money bills are an essential part of waging war. Neither the President nor the Senate could conduct war unless the House of Representatives levied the necessary taxes and made the required appropriation. In the double sense, therefore, the President and his appointees have no ability to bind by drafting article 16 either the Government, the people, or the taxpayer to support its covenants. That power rests exclusively in Congress. It is a complement of the war-making powers, and relates back for its exercise to the people in frequent elections held under the laws of the land. Such exercise of sovereign power is an indispensable attribute of free government. That power exercised or attempted to be exercised by the President is the distinguishing feature of lawless and arbitrary government. If it be undertaken to be exercised by a government created under the league of nations, it is equally lawless and arbitrary.

Article 17 enlarges the opportunity for controversy, purely family quarrels confined to league members seeming to be insufficient to absorb the attention and exhaust the talents of the league. It authorizes the council to invite member States and nonmember States in controversy to accept the obligations of membership to enable the council to settle the dispute. Disputes wholly between nonmember States authorize the council to assume jurisdiction and conduct an inquiry. The invitation of the council is in the nature of an international process or summons, and is to be deemed adequate to confer jurisdiction. A nonmember nation which shall resort to war against the member nation having been so summoned shall be deemed to have committed an act of war against all the members of the league, pursuant to article 16. If a member or nonmember nation decline the inquisitive offices of the council, it may thereupon take such measures as will prevent hostilities and result in the settlement of the dispute. It may even anticipate war and promote universal peace by getting into the fight ahead of the potential belligerents. This will make disarmament easier under article 8. If this be of any virtue, it is a general roving commission to the council to meddle in the affairs of the whole world. In the council the United States has one out of nine votes to protect itself against a universal entanglement with all nations. It is an international grand jury in perpetual session to embroil the earth in chronic strife.

The incurable propensity of mankind, growing out of curiosity and a belief by most people that they can do any given act vastly better than the ones then engaged in making the effort, leads multitudes to interfere in the affairs of others. This inveterate disposition is greatly strengthened and improved by making the interference compulsory upon the council. The language of article 17 is mandatory. The council, no doubt, would be far from reluctant to engage in the affairs of everybody, but in the interpretation of language when the word "shall" is applied to a public duty it makes that duty obligatory upon the officer. Article 17 thereby becomes a competent handmaid of article 16 in universal international commotion.

Article 20 requires all league members to abrogate all treaties or conventions inconsistent with the terms of the league. It sets an example likely to be followed in breaking faith with the solemn covenant between nations. So far as it applies to unexecuted secret treaties operative after a conclusion of peace, no objection could properly be made.

The Monroe doctrine, in article 21, is declared to be a regional understanding. It is defined as a policy to secure the maintenance of peace. This article is declared by English authority—it is declared by an editorial in the London Times and by other British publications—to be subject to the interpretation of the league or the council. It is intimated that no difficulty will be experienced in handling this doctrine by interpretation if it should prove an embarrassment.

Article 22 covers the subject of mandatory tutelage of colonies and backward races. The Government which undertakes to care for any such a people does so as its voluntary act under the amended league article. The executive power, however, in mandatories is in the council. In that body the United States has one vote. It has the largest population, the greatest wealth and production of foodstuffs, and the most numerous man power for military purposes of any of its nine members. Its indebtedness growing out of this war measured by its private taxable wealth is less than any other belligerent. What would be the natural consequence in a voting power of eight to one? The eight with heavy war debts, a diminished man power, taxes far above our per capita, their production of food and manufactures below this country, would present not only eight votes against us but would insist upon our superior resources and ability to undertake the guardianship of the newly created nation and the protection of ancient races from long continued abuses and oppression. The United States would become the good samaritan of the Old World. Voluntarily or involuntarily we would embark upon a crusade surpassing Peter the Hermit or adventures that would consign Don Quixote to deserved oblivion. It is well for us to consider now the impropriety and danger of placing ourselves where we may be coerced by foreign influences into the assumption of stupendous undertakings.

The Turk is a foreign body in Europe. He is a relic of fanaticism and Moslem conquest. When Constantinople fell in 1453 his crescent rose above its shattered walls, yielding to gunpowder used for the first time in siege, and has ever since remained a menace to all not professing the Mohammedan faith. The fairest shores and waters in Europe and Western Asia have been by him turned into shambles for centuries. In every age Turkish oppression has written its bloody chapter.

The Russian Czars, Nicholas and Alexander, sought in 1853 to protect their subjects—Greek Christians—resident in Turkish territory from the slaughter of fanatical hordes. They repeated then what we know of the assassination of Armenian and Jew in our generation. Russia asked a protectorate over her defenseless subjects. It was denied and the Crimean War followed. It threatened to disturb the division of territory in Europe and interfere with the balance of power. England, France, and Sardinia joined with Turkey, defeated Russia, and the Turk has remained in Europe to this day. If Russia had been permitted to discipline him he would have returned to Asia, whence he originally came. The selfish ambitions of statesmen who thought more of territory and trade than human life are therefore the cause of present conditions in Europe relating to the Turk. England and France being responsible for his presence now, it is fit that they undertake the task of disposing of him and his possessions.

France already has colonies in northern Africa; England, military posts in the Mediterranean and oriental waters; her armies are in Asia, her colors are floating above the walls of ancient Jerusalem, and the Holy Land is under her dominion. In these circumstances it is unwise for the United States to permit herself to be placed where the eight powers on the council may impose the Turk on the United States as his part of the white man's burden. England and France likewise have great material interests in Africa. They are territorially many thousand miles nearer the Dark Continent than we are. This is also true of the European countries. Therefore let the allies assume the responsibility of the Balkan Provinces, Poland, the Jugoslavs, and Slavic peoples with those named as peculiarly appropriate to the exercise of their powers.

Mexico and the Western Hemisphere are our problem. The Western Hemisphere is territorially a part of our undertaking, and we properly ought to assume under the Monroe doctrine the resulting burdens. The protection of alien person and property, the restoration of stable government, the preservation of peace, all are the performance of international obligations we may undertake to guarantee.

Article 26 concerns an amendment to the league. It requires a unanimous vote of the council and a majority of the members of the assembly. This makes amendment very difficult. A single vote on the council can block any amendment. As an unchangeable document it is qualified to rank with John Locke's Grand Model.

The argument is presented for the league as a preventive of war. We are asked if we are not opposed to war. Every right-minded person is. We are also opposed to fire, bloodshed, famine, and pestilence, but this does not argue that we therefore are for the President's original or amended league, because we have no assurance that it will prevent any one or all of them. It does not end those scourges. It is assumed this instrument is a conclusive insurance policy against all the calamities to which humanity is subject. Aside from the destructive effect on the Government of the United States and the institutional liberty which is our common birthright, the league itself is a gigantic firebrand for a world conflagration. It is no more than a coalition. It is no more than the combination created by the sovereign powers in the congress of Vienna. It is the signal for a great preparation for the next war. It depends for its success on military and naval force. If it shall prevail it will be because of the rule of force; the coalition opposed to it will set up different standards and insist upon a system of ethics denied by the Latin and Anglo-Saxon races of the world.

We are continually met with the statement that this document will end all wars. Who would not fervently pray this might be so? Who does not know—unless he be a dreamer, a novice, or a vain pretender seeking power for himself—that all any league can do, be it treaty, covenant, or sovereign charter, is to reduce war to a minimum. Nothing penned by the human hand or written on parchment will ever subdue the unholy passions of human nature. The tables of stone graven with the ancient commandments delivered to Moses for a historic race have exerted their influence through many thousand years. The laws of Leviticus and the Pentateuch administered justice through many centuries. Christ was born, delivered His Sermon on the Mount, gave a new code of morals to the world, suffered crucifixion, and left His disciples inspired by His example and sacrifice to convey His teachings to posterity. These are Hebrew and Christian documents and teachings, human and divine.

Through the long years great historic secular charters appear. The English barons wrested the Magna Charta of 1215 from an arbitrary king. It has been confirmed by subsequent sovereigns more than 30 times. The Petition of Rights presented by rebellious taxpayers represented in Parliament to Charles I in 1628, the habeas corpus act of 1679, the Bill of Rights presented to and confirmed by William and Mary in 1688, the illuminating decisions of English courts on search warrants, the verdicts of courageous English juries on criminal libel, great elemental acts of Parliament safeguarding human rights, the constitutions written by France following the despotism of her Bourbon kings, the heroic devotion of the Netherlands blazing the way for a constitutional union of States, and the calm wisdom of Grotius in international law, our own Declaration of Independence and Federal Constitution have all been contributive through the ages to promote justice and prevent war. Still in that time, in spite of immortal documents, human and divine, the sacrifices of heroes and martyrs, and the devotion of generations of just men, war has continued by Christian, pagan, Jew, and gentile. It has not even been mitigated when conducted by many races. Science and art, mechanical knowledge, and the ability to enlist the forces of nations have done but little save to contribute to the fearful destruction of civilized nations when grappling in war. If these tremendous agencies for good working through the genius of every generation have been unable to accomplish universal peace, how will a document written in Paris by President Wilson and Col. House end the wars of the world and usher in the millennium?

The President has impressed upon Europe the belief that the American people are ruled by the ideals he has so frequently expressed. Peace based on these ideals must, in turn, differ from peace based on the practical relations that have heretofore subsisted among mankind and the several nations of the world. If those practical relations no longer exist, world conditions and men's natures must have materially changed. I do not believe they have; I am skeptical. They have not changed in the United States. I know that; I require no cablegrams from Europe to give me that information.

If the allied governments had written peace terms on their own understanding, it would not have been the peace we will have presented to us. That peace is based on the covenant of the league of nations. Europe expects the United States to assume the major part of the burdens created by it. The league reorganizes the world, and especially Europe and Asia, on a new basis.

We must accept mandatories under the league in Asia and Africa, and contribute both men and money to the undertakings of the allied nations in Europe. One million American soldiers will be required to meet the responsibilities and duties of the United States in foreign lands. There is little use for the President's message of a few days ago, transmitted from Paris, to discuss the reduction of taxes. War taxes will continue for many years, and the taxes to administer mandatories under the league will endure longer still. The call for 8,000 men to serve in Siberia and those now in northern Russia are the first levies to empty American homes and embark us on the Wilson ideals. Parents of sons of military age must prepare for the sacrifice at the shrine of the Old World's preservation under the league of nations.

The voluntary acceptance of the tutelage of colonies and backward races is no defense against our assuming the burdens. Once the treaty of peace is made on the President's league as a basis we will be told it is our treaty and our league, that both are idealistic, that they do not fit the actual conditions in Europe, its territory, its races, or its Governments. But the United States has insisted, it will be said, on applying its theories to a condition of human excellence and perfection that does not exist. We therefore must be prepared to supply the deficiencies between mere ideal hopes and aspirations and the unideal actual situation by our Army and Treasury. Having placed ourselves in this situation, the eight other members of the council representing European nations will in all probability proceed to define our duty. With the league ratified and President Wilson in control, the burdens of three continents will be liberally apportioned to us. We will be so placed we can not escape the responsibilities we have morally placed upon ourselves, and they will be riveted upon us and our posterity in perpetuity.

Armenia and the Jews in western Asia will be allotted us. The curbing of the Turk will be our task. We must conclude a treaty to guarantee the safety of the French frontier against Germany. We must help confine the Bolshevist conflagration within the borders of Russia, even if we do not intervene to quench it, if its fanatical disciples insist on being world incendiaries. No one living will ever see our soldiers absent from the Old World under this league. The American people will be inextricably tangled with the rivalries, feuds, and wars of Europe and Asia.

The President has assumed to set aside the treaties made by the allies to gather the strength of unprepared nations against the deadly assault of prepared Germany. He was writing messages declaring we were too proud to fight, demanding peace without victory and no annexations and no indemnities, while Great Britain, France, and Italy joined their strength and fought for self-preservation. Their treaties were not open treaties, it is true, because they were made against the savage and treacherous foe whose clandestine intrigues had endangered the world. It was then no time for homilies and scholastic platitudes, however well they sound now in paper leagues and paper covenants.

If Italy were promised the return of territory of which she had been despoiled as compensation to enter the war, it was justified, even though it was done by a secret treaty. If Russia were promised Constantinople and access to the Mediterranean, it, too, was justified. They were necessary means of defense against Germany. In a deadly world crisis methods can not be scrupulously weighed in metaphysical balances. Both are now condemned by the President because they were not open covenants openly arrived at. How poor such casuistry when all Europe shook under the measured tread of military Germany!

The calm judgment of history will approve the diplomacy of Great Britain and France, even if not openly published to a listening world when the cannonade of German guns was heard in Paris and on the English Channel. Our President dallies with the abstractions of the closet while criticizing such treaties.

The great Republic of China sought to join the Allies. She had suffered from German spoliation in 1897. Japan has expelled Germany and seized the Chinese territory and concessions taken by the latter. Japan exacted from China a treaty confirming the former's rights to hold the country and concessions of which China had been plundered by Germany as the price of Japan's consent for China to join with the Allies against Germany. This, too, was a secret treaty.

At the time we were about to declare war against Germany, Japan secured from the Allies assurances of their approval of all her holdings in Shantung. These proceedings were none of them open covenants openly arrived at.

Italy's secret treaty for the return of Dalmatia is condemned by the President. The self-determination of the people in the transferred territory is invoked to attach it to the Jugo-Slav nation. Italy under this loses the benefits of her treaty with the Allies. Fiume, then a part of Austria-Hungary, three-fourths Italian, is not permitted the right of self-determination on returning to the country of its own blood and language.

The 40,000,000 Chinese in Shantung are denied the right of self-determination and delivered to Japan. They are our Allies. We assist in their plunder. The peace-conference nations are the accomplices in delivering stolen goods to the receiver thereof knowing them to be stolen, and, following the well-known rule of criminal jurisprudence, all are equally guilty with Germany, the original thief.

There are many pawnbrokers in the penitentiaries of the different States of this Republic, put there on less evidence than could be adduced in the case of the delegates to the peace conference. They received stolen goods in circumstances that would have led any prudent man to know they were stolen and that fasten upon them guilty knowledge, and so they become equally guilty with the thief. Here is a great league, comprising many Christian nations. Most of those that lead in the bad arts of war are Christian races. They present to the descendants of Confucius the net result of Christian civilization in the robbery of 40,000,000 of their people and their delivery to an alien power. May we not hang our heads in penitential shame at such abasement?

Poland is given a mere approach and easement of shipping instead of sovereignty on the sea, according to the 14 points. Her access to it is through an alley on alien soil, flanked with German bayonets from the time she leaves her own territory until she crosses the city limits of Danzig. A more prolific source of constant trouble could not have been devised in Europe if the prince of darkness and the whole satanic school of demons had sat at the conference where the treaty has been framed.

A league of nations founded on such a betrayal of Poland, on the robbery of China, our own ally, on the abrogation of the treaty made with Italy in an hour of deadly peril, a base pal-tering with the principle of self-determination doubly interpreted with a duplicity unrivaled in even the congress of Vienna, so as to desert our ally in war in the day of peace, is doomed with the curse of broken faith and shameless perfidy that marks it from the time of its inception and birth. If this be our Republic's contribution to the league, our President's idealistic vision drawn from the ethereal regions of sublimated messages and scholastic reveries down to Mother Earth and the affairs of men, again I say let us hang our heads in shame and confess we are giants in words and lilliputians in good faith and practical action.

He hath stripped the people of their glory and taken the crown of righteousness from their heads.

It may not be known to the public, but I repeat that the draft of the peace treaty to-day is known in every capital in Europe and its communication blocked to this Senate by the deliberate act of the Executive. Thus we have in practical operation "open covenants of peace openly arrived at." So, too, we have a like freedom of navigation upon the seas in the 14 points, and access given in accordance with Executive declaration. They are purely theoretical. They will never sail ships or assemble commerce on the piers of those port cities. The removal of all economic barriers and the establishment of an equality of trade conditions among all the nations consenting to the peace and associating themselves for its maintenance will open every customhouse restriction there is in this Republic, and it is intended to do so. What practical form national armaments will assume when reduced to the lowest point for us is unknown. What is consistent with our domestic safety will not be decided by us, but will be decided by a sovereign sitting in Geneva. A free, open-minded, and absolutely impartial adjustment of all colonial claims, based upon a strict observance of the principle that in determining questions of sovereignty the interests of the populations concerned must have equal weight with the equitable claims of the government whose title is to be determined, has utterly failed in actual application to the affairs of men and the settlement of boundary questions and the dispositions of peoples in Europe.

The 14 points given to the world January 8, 1918, as an instrument of justice are a byword and a derision in all Europe to-day. We do not get this by cable. You get it from returning travelers who have talked, from Jerusalem to London, with philosophers and soldiers and statesmen. The 14 points are the jest of the ages in the three continents of the Old World and in the British Isles. They are now quoted only by the German delegates to save them from the penalties of their barbaric cruelty and murderous treachery. The points have long since ceased to be a factor in diplomacy, or more than an international embarrassment to all concerned.

Mr. President, these are some opening remarks which I wish to submit on the league of nations. I shall go into the subject in detail and with a great variety of illustrations at some later time.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. D. K. Hempstead, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled bill (H. R. 2329) making appropriations to supply urgent deficiencies in appropriations for the Bureau of War Risk Insurance and for the payment of pensions for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919, and it was thereupon signed by the Vice President.

TREATY OF PEACE.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, I should like to inquire of the proponent of this resolution whether it would be agreeable to him to have an adjournment at this time?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President, that is quite agreeable to me.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I move, then, that the Senate adjourn.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Pardon me just one moment. Before we take an adjournment, do I understand that this particular resolution will be the unfinished business on Monday? Is that the understanding of the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. HITCHCOCK. That would be my impression. I am not familiar with the rules more than to say that that is my personal judgment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NEWBERRY in the chair). The resolution will come up as the unfinished business at 2 o'clock on Monday.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I renew my motion that the Senate do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 4 o'clock and 35 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Monday, May 26, 1919, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

FRIDAY, May 23, 1919.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

We bless Thee, Infinite Spirit, our Heavenly Father, for the man who, by dint of his own efforts and the gifts Thou hast bestowed upon him, reaches the goal; and we bless Thee for the man who, by dint of his own efforts, through the gifts Thou hast bestowed upon him, goes down in the battle of life, wounded and maimed, yet rises again with undaunted courage and strives for perfection.

Truth crushed to earth shall rise again,—
The eternal years of God are hers;
But Error, wounded, writhes with pain,
And dies among his worshippers.

The death of Christ on the Hill of Calvary seemed to close His remarkable career. But to-day His name lives in millions of hearts and inspires to larger life and happiness; and so may He continue to live until God's purposes shall be accomplished. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

SWEARING IN OF MEMBERS.

The SPEAKER. If there are any Members present who have not taken the oath, they will now present themselves and be sworn.

Mr. SMITH of Idaho and Mr. KAHN of California presented themselves at the bar of the House and took the oath of office, administered by the Speaker.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

Mr. STEELE, by unanimous consent, was given leave to withdraw from the files of the House, without leaving copies, papers in the case of Edward F. Stewart (H. R. 9703, 65th Cong.), no adverse report having been made thereon.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. MORIN, by unanimous consent, was given leave of absence for five days on account of absence in France.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Mr. NOLAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill H. R. 1235 be rereferred from the Committee on Reform in the Civil Service to the Committee on Labor.

Mr. GARNER. If the gentleman will permit, on yesterday morning the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GARRETT] gave notice that he would not agree to any change of reference until the committees were made up. I ask the gentleman to let it go over until the committees are filled.

Mr. NOLAN. I consulted with the chairman of the Committee on Reform in the Civil Service and also with the chairman of the Committee on Labor, and it is the unanimous request that the reference be changed.

Mr. GARNER. The minority members of the committee have not been elected, and it is only a matter of one day, and I think the gentleman had better let it go over.

Mr. NOLAN. Very well.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas objects.

COMMITTEE ON INDIAN AFFAIRS.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I nominate for election to the Indian Affairs Committee the following-named gentlemen.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. CARTER of Oklahoma, Mr. HAYDEN of Arizona, Mr. SEARS of Florida, Mr. TILLMAN of Arkansas, Mr. GANDY of South Dakota, Mr. HASTINGS of Oklahoma, Mr. WEAVER of North Carolina, and Mr. MCKINLEY of New York.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. MONDELL. Can the gentleman from North Carolina inform us when he expects to be able to submit the remainder of the minority members of the committees?

Mr. KITCHIN. On Monday next. We thought we might do it to-morrow, but we are unable to do so until Monday.

Mr. MONDELL. We are very anxious to get to work.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. ASHBROOK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the indefinite leave of absence of my colleague, Mr. BRUMBAUGH, who has for some time been in a sanitarium.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. SNYDER, chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, by direction of that committee, reported the bill (H. R. 2480) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920, which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union and ordered to be printed.

Mr. CARTER reserved all points of order.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the Indian appropriation bill; and pending that motion I desire to see if we can not come to an agreement as to division of time for general debate on the bill.

Mr. TILSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. TILSON. Is the bill substantially in the form that it was presented in the last Congress? I understand the bill has not been printed.

Mr. SNYDER. The bill is printed in its new form and a limited number of copies are ready for distribution to the Members of the House. It is a composite bill. It is the bill as it was agreed upon by a conference committee in the last Congress and which failed on the last day of the session. It is presented approximately in that form after careful consideration by the members of the committee as it is now constituted, by both the majority and minority members, with practically a full attendance, and after consideration by the subcommittee, after listening to various parties who desired to have changes made in the bill.

Mr. TILSON. Then, I understand it is possible for Members of the House to now get printed copies of the bill which is to be considered?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. GARNER. It is substantially the bill which was agreed upon in conference at the last session.

Mr. SNYDER. It is the same bill.

Mr. CARTER. It is the bill agreed to in conference.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, may I suggest to the gentleman from New York that, if unanimous consent be granted, I understand it is the purpose to use the time to-day for general debate and take the bill up to-morrow under the five-minute rule.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, the first thing to do is to get unanimous consent for its consideration.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I made that statement.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent——

Mr. CARTER. May I suggest that the request of the gentleman from New York be separated?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman can move to go into Committee of the Whole. There is no rule which requires the bill to be printed.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for immediate consideration of the bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent to go into Committee of the Whole for the consideration of the Indian appropriation bill, and, pending that, asks for agreement as to the time for general debate.

Mr. SNYDER. I do not ask for that now, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. SPEAKER. The gentleman withdraws the request. The question is, Is there objection?

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to say that so far as the minority Members are concerned we have no objection to going ahead with the reading of the bill to-day after general debate has been finished.

Mr. SNYDER. It is perfectly agreeable to me. I am willing to go ahead with the reading of the bill as soon as general debate is closed.

Mr. MANN. I think the House ought to know whether it is intended to proceed with the reading of the bill to-day. The gentleman ought to make up his mind now what he intends to do before the unanimous consent is requested. There might be objection to reading the bill to-day when printed copies are not accessible, but there is no objection to general debate on the bill.

Mr. CARTER. I will say to the gentleman from Illinois that is why I made the suggestion; I have not any objection to it.

Mr. MANN. But while the Committee on Indian Affairs, both the minority and majority, have had the bill in their possession I have learned through long experience in the House that the Committee on Indian Affairs very often includes items in the Indian bill which I thought ought not to be included; and of course while they are in favor of passing the bill at once, which they have reported unanimously, it does not mean the House ought not to have a chance to consider the items in the bill intelligently.

Mr. CARTER. That is evident; everybody understands that.

Mr. SNYDER. It is clearly the intention of the chairman of the committee at least to have only general debate on this bill to-day.

Mr. MANN. If the chairman of the committee will make the statement that he does not intend to ask for the reading of the bill to-day for amendment, why, that settles that question.

Mr. SNYDER. I am very pleased to make that statement. I do not intend to ask for the reading of the bill to-day.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to going into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of this bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The Chair appoints——

Mr. SNYDER. And pending that motion I wish to see if we can arrange upon a period of time for general debate on both sides.

Mr. CARTER. As far as this side is concerned, I think we can get along with one hour.

Mr. SNYDER. As far as any requests over on this side——

Mr. CARTER. I mean an hour on this side.

Mr. SNYDER. Suppose we go along and see how long we can run and have an understanding that we close general debate before 5 o'clock this afternoon?

Mr. GARNER. Let us have an agreement something like this. If you are going to have all day's debate, some might want to go to the departments and may not care to hear it. I think the older Members understand that when we start in on general debate they may take the opportunity to go somewhere else to do work, and if we have an agreement that the bill shall not be read under the five-minute rule, whether it is two hours or five hours, we will have that understanding and all know it.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York has stated the reading of the bill will not be begun to-day.

Mr. SNYDER. I am perfectly willing, and I think this side will be willing for debate to run along until it runs out.

Mr. DYER. As I understand it, when the House adjourns to-day general debate upon the pending bill will be closed?

The SPEAKER. That is the request.

Mr. SNYDER. I ask unanimous consent that when general debate closes to-day it close for good.

Mr. CARTER. Can not we come to some understanding as to how long that will be?

Mr. SNYDER. I should say until it runs out.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent that general debate be closed to-day. Is there objection?

Mr. GARRETT. Reserving the right to object, had we not better arrange as to the control of time?

Mr. SNYDER. Of course, it is agreeable to this side to have the time equally divided.

Mr. CARTER. One half to be controlled by the gentleman from New York and the other by myself.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent that the time be equally divided between the two sides, half to be controlled by the gentleman from New York and half by the gentleman from Oklahoma. Is there objection?

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I think we ought to fix some time. If there is going to be two hours' general debate, let us make it; and if there is to be four hours' general debate, let us make that; and, of course, when general debate is exhausted the House can adjourn. We ought to have some definite understanding as to how much debate there shall be. I suggest the gentleman make it two hours on each side; that will be ample.

Mr. SNYDER. How would it do to have the debate close in four hours—say not exceeding four hours—the time to be equally divided?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent that general debate proceed for four hours, two hours to be controlled by the gentleman from New York and two hours by the gentleman from Oklahoma. Is there objection?

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, that is with the understanding that the bill will not be taken up for consideration under the five-minute rule to-day.

The SPEAKER. That has been stated. Is there objection?

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I ask the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL] whether it is anticipated any other business will be taken up to-day after this bill is laid aside?

Mr. MONDELL. It is impossible to say at this time.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 2480) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indians tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920, with Mr. LONGWORTH in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the Indian appropriation bill, which the Clerk will report by title.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 2480) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the first reading of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent that the first reading of the bill be dispensed with. Is there objection?

Mr. DYER. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman yield for a question? Is this bill the same bill——

Mr. SNYDER. I expect to make a statement in a minute.

Mr. DYER. Is this the same bill that was passed before?

Mr. SNYDER. It is, in a sense.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to dispensing with the first reading of the bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, in presenting this bill for consideration to-day, I desire to say that after careful consideration for four days on the part of the committee as a whole and further consideration by the subcommittee, we have decided to present to the House this measure in the form of a composite bill, which is the measure passed by the House, accompanied by such additions as were inserted by the Senate and as finally agreed upon by the conferees. We have made no changes in the bill that affect it in any way whatever; so you have before you approximately the bill passed by the House, the Senate provisions and the conferees' report included, all of which failed in the Senate on the very last minute of the very last day.

This bill approximates in appropriations which are directly drawn from the Treasury about $11,600,000, which is about $600,000 more than the amount contained in the bill when it originally left the House. It is $200,000 more than the present law, due to the committee's belief that conditions have so changed, expenses having increased to such an extent, that the various activities for which the Government furnished money were entitled to a reasonable amount to compensate them for those increases.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Will the gentleman kindly make those statements again—there was so much disorder here I could not catch them clearly—with reference to the difference in the amounts in the bill?

Mr. SNYDER. I said that in the present law the amounts actually appropriated from the Treasury for gratuities and in reimbursable items amount to about $600,000 more than the present law, and were conceded by the committee on account of the actual increased cost of supplies, and so forth, which it is necessary for the bureau to furnish to the various schools and activities throughout the country; and we agreed as a committee that they were entitled to a certain per cent of increase to compensate for the difference in cost this year as against two years ago when that bill was made.

Mr. TILSON. Will the gentleman yield there for a question?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. TILSON. Will the gentleman distinguish between the part of the increase that comes under the reimbursable items and the part of it that is not reimbursable?

Mr. SNYDER. Well, there have been no increases in any of these items, I think, that are not reimbursable. If the gentleman will notice, the appropriations are made up in four sections; first, the treaty items, amounting to something over $800,000; then the tribal-fund items, amounting to about $3,700,000; the strictly gratuitous items, amounting to about $5,600,000; and the reimbursable items, amounting to about the same sum. Now, of course, the Government must furnish the money for the reimbursable items, but eventually it is all supposed to come back into the Treasury from some source, either from the sale of land or sale of timber or from products off the soil or under the ground. But the actual amount of this bill that is paid from the Treasury of the United States, and of which there is never any possibility of return and which is supposed to be spent wholly in the interest of the Indians by this bill, amounts to about $5,500,000, or a trifle over.

I think I said a few moments ago that there was no increase in the strictly gratuitous items, but there is, and that is due to the fact that last year and the year before, on account of the war, and in order to enable the department to put some of our returning soldiers or other people at work, we thought it advisable to let them go ahead and start up some of those activities again. And that is one of the reasons for the increase in the gratuity items.

Now, it is, of course, the policy of this committee to endeavor in every way to curtail the expense of the Government in the care of the Indians, and we are endeavoring every year to reduce the cost of handling the Indians' business. But it is a very difficult proposition, and this committee expects this year to make careful investigations with regard to the handling of the business in the department in this city and see whether it is not possible to cut out some of the things that look, to the chairman, at least, like unnecessary expense in the handling of the moneys which belong to the Indians and the handling of the activities which are created by the moneys that are handed to the Indians as a gratuity. It has always seemed to me that out of the millions that we appropriate for the benefit of the Indians a very large portion of it gets into the hands of the people who handle it rather than going actually out into the field and for the benefit of the Indian himself, and we want to try to correct that if possible. I am convinced myself that we are spending too much money in trying to show the Indians how to sew, trying to educate an Indian woman to do things she is not even capable of doing or will be capable of doing for some time to come. We are spending hundreds of thousands of dollars trying to educate Indians to be farmers, and it is a very small percentage of them, from my observation, who have ever been able, or ever will be able, to acquire sufficient knowledge to teach them to be good farmers.

Mr. HICKS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there for a moment?

Mr. SNYDER. I will, gladly.

Mr. HICKS. What is the gentleman's opinion in regard to the beneficial results of all this philanthropic effort that has been made on the part of the Government to educate Indians in various phases of industrial life?

Mr. SNYDER. Well, so far as educating the Indians in the schools provided by the Government or by tribal funds is concerned, I think a great work is being done. But as to the farmers and the nurses and the instructors we send out to these reservations, to show the Indians how to become farmers, I have very little faith in anything approximating a great success coming from that work. I had brought to my attention a case this morning where they are trying to create herds of sheep in a certain territory for the benefit of a certain tribe of Indians. There are probably 115 Indian farmers who ought to be involved in that work of caring for those sheep, but the fact is that there are only 10 or 15 of them actually working on the range, and the Government, having furnished the sheep, now has to furnish cowboys and men to go down there and actually do that work. After getting the profit from that transaction the money goes into the Treasury, and possibly the Indians some day may get a few dollars for having sat quietly at home and done nothing to assist in any way in this proposition of raising sheep, from which they have made money and from which they have money in the Treasury now, no part of which they have created or earned themselves.

Now, the point I am trying to make, although perhaps I do not get at it as quickly as I might, is that if you could stimulate those Indians to handle these sheep themselves by dividing the herds up and making each fellow take so many of them, and either let them produce from these sheep or get out of the business entirely, the Indians themselves would be a great deal better off.

Mr. HICKS. The statement of the gentleman is interesting and largely bears out my own observations in traveling over the Indian reservations. What is the gentleman's solution of that problem? We train these Indians, and yet they fail afterwards to perform the functions naturally to be expected from that training.

Mr. SNYDER. My idea is that where the Indian has some thousands or millions of dollars belonging to him, I would take that money and give the Indian a section of land and put him on it, and put him to work there, and let him work his way through. That is the only way I believe you will get rid of this Indian problem. We have in the last few years taken back under the fold of the Government's protection Indian tribes who had been discharged from the guardianship of the Government a hundred years ago, and we have done it because they have become shiftless and the States have not cared for them as they should have done. Now, in the goodness of the hearts of some of the people who are interested, they are endeavoring to get those people back under the guardianship of the Government. One of the things I have discovered since I have been connected with Indian affairs is that the most difficult thing on earth to do is to get an Indian who is under the control of the Indian Bureau away from it under any form or by any pretext.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNYDER. Gladly.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. As I understand, it is still the purpose of the Government to keep under its supervision Indians who are well educated, well informed, who have served in the Army of the United States and entitled to citizenship, and sometimes even when they have thousands of dollars in the banks they can not draw a single cent of it. Am I correct in that?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes. The gentleman is quite correct, and the gentleman might go further. It is my understanding that there are civilized Indians who are doing business in certain sections of this country who are just as competent to do business as the gentleman himself or myself, who have purchased Liberty bonds, and who are unable to collect the income from the coupons of the Liberty bonds without having them passed through the department here at Washington.

Mr. HICKS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. SNYDER. Certainly.

Mr. HICKS. I do not want to interrupt the gentleman, but he has made a specialty of the bill, and he has made his statement very interesting. In my travels in the western country, particularly in New Mexico and Arizona, I came upon cases of Indians, graduates from an Indian school, very highly educated, either at Carlisle or some other Indian school, and apparently fitted for the best citizenship of the country, and yet 99 per cent of those people were back again in their tribal life. I was just wondering whether that is an inherent weakness in the Indian himself or an inherent weakness in our policy in the treatment of the Indian. I would like to have the gentleman's opinion on that if he is prepared to give it.

Mr. SNYDER. I am not very well prepared to give an opinion on that, but I do know of cases where Indians have been educated at Carlisle even who have gone back to their tribal relations and in a short time lost interest entirely in the education that they had received. But I do not think my investigations would lead me to say that that was the prevailing rule. I think in the main that the Indians who are educated at either reservation schools or boarding schools come out of them with a great deal of credit and advantage to themselves. I would not want to say that I would in any way desire to limit the boarding school activities or the reservation school activities, but I would like to see them handled on an entirely different basis from what they are.

We have attempted in this bill to put a restriction on the management of these schools, so that the money will be expended in such a way that we shall know it is being expended wholly upon the number of pupils who are in attendance. In other words, previous to last year, the appropriations made were based upon the enrollment at these boarding schools at a certain amount per annum per pupil.

Now, in this bill the appropriation is based upon the average attendance for the year; so that in a school where there are 90 pupils who actually attend, although there may be 190 enrolled, they can draw the per capita for the average number in attendance only. This, I think, is a big move in the right direction, and that eventually it will have the effect of building up these schools. We are perfectly willing to give them for the education of every pupil in attendance whatever is necessary for them to have in order to conduct the school properly; but the other system permitted a good many lax methods, and a good deal of indiscretion crept into the handling of the business of the schools.

Mr. FAIRFIELD. Will the gentleman permit a question?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. FAIRFIELD. In case there should be an epidemic in a boarding school and the per capita attendance should be cut down very materially, what provision would be made to take care of an exigency like that?

Mr. SNYDER. We have always in the bill a sufficient number of emergency appropriations to care for any epidemic that may occur, and that is one of the reasons why it is necessary to get this measure enacted into law promptly. It was stated that Indians are suffering because appropriations provided for in this measure are now being held up, and it is absolutely necessary that the bill pass and become a law before the 1st of July or the department can not continue to function. That is one reason why, the instant that Congress convened, before the committees were regularly elected, we went to work on this measure; and that was the prime reason why we did not begin the perfecting of a new measure, because during the time that we have from now until the 1st of July it would have been utterly impossible for us to have framed a new bill. So we decided to present this bill, which, if it is promptly passed, will enable the Interior Department and the Indian Bureau to care for the urgent needs of the Indians.

Unless some one desires further information, which I will be glad to give to the best of my ability, I will conclude my statement.

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNYDER. Certainly.

Mr. FERRIS. Has the chairman of the committee any objection to answering, for the record, a few elementary questions?

Mr. SNYDER. I shall be glad to answer them to the best of my ability.

Mr. FERRIS. What is the total number of Indians cared for by the Interior Department?

Mr. SNYDER. My understanding is that there are about 300,000.

Mr. FERRIS. And what is the exact amount of money carried in this bill?

Mr. SNYDER. The exact amount of money carried in this bill, including the tribal funds, is $15,008,000.

Mr. FERRIS. How much of that comes out of the Treasury and how much of the Indians' funds?

Mr. SNYDER. Eleven million six hundred thousand dollars come out of the Treasury of the United States, but only $5,800,000 of that sum is actually chargeable to the Government without any possibility of future reimbursement.

Mr. FERRIS. Some of it will come back from the sale of land?

Mr. SNYDER. None of the $5,800,000.

Mr. FERRIS. But I am speaking of the larger sum, the $11,000,000.

Mr. SNYDER. More than $5,000,000 is reimbursable.

Mr. FERRIS. How many tribes of Indians are there altogether in the United States?

Mr. SNYDER. I can not tell the gentleman that.

Mr. FERRIS. There are about 300,000 Indians?

Mr. SNYDER. About 300,000.

Mr. FERRIS. What per cent, what number out of the total 300,000, have had their restrictions removed in whole or in part for administrative purposes?

Mr. SNYDER. Since I have been a member of the Committee on Indian Affairs a very small per cent have been separated from the care of the Indian Bureau; I should think not 5 per cent.

Mr. FERRIS. Of the 300,000 not over 5 per cent have been?

Mr. SNYDER. I do not think there have been 5 per cent.

Mr. FERRIS. Does the gentleman mean altogether?

Mr. SNYDER. I mean in the four years that I have been connected with the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. FERRIS. But I am speaking of the aggregate all told. What part of the 300,000 Indians have had their restrictions removed either in whole or in part? Has the gentleman any figures on that?

Mr. SNYDER. No; I have not.

Mr. FERRIS. Is it not true that a very large per cent of these 300,000 Indians are, in fact, entirely capable of administering their own affairs?

Mr. SNYDER. My observations and investigations lead me to believe that at least 60 per cent of these Indians could be discharged from the care of the Indian Bureau and have the money to which they are entitled turned over to them, and that they could well take their chances in this country along with the average American citizen.

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Chairman, I want to pursue that one question further, if I may. What will be the policy of the gentleman who will be in charge of the committee—and I think his policy follows along the same line as my own would, if I were the chairman—with reference to liberating, emancipating those Indians, that are really white Indians, that have all of their faculties, who are educated, and have that equipment the same as anyone else? What is going to be the policy of the gentleman with reference to cutting that class of Indians loose from the Federal administration?

Mr. SNYDER. In order to tell exactly what that is I desire to refer to some remarks that I made in presenting this bill before. I think I made a statement at that time, and I have not any idea of changing it now.

Mr. FERRIS. I do not wish to embarrass the gentleman in the course of his remarks at all.

Mr. SNYDER. I do not find the remarks that I refer to, but I am willing to state now just what it is.

Mr. FERRIS. Oh, the gentleman may withhold it, if he desires, but I will be very glad to have him state it in the RECORD.

Mr. SNYDER. My policy as chairman of this committee will be to endeavor in every possible way to get discharged from the care of the bureau, from the care of the Government, so far as it is possible, the Indians, so that they will be no different from any other American citizens. My policy will be to get a man discharged from the care of anybody, except in so far as he owes a duty to the Government of the United States, the State in which he resides, or the municipality in which he belongs, so that he may get all of the money to which he is entitled, that it may be turned over to him at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. FERRIS. And to have a complete divorcement of the real or so-called white Indians from the Federal Treasury.

Mr. SNYDER. I want the Indian to be a full citizen of the United States at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman permit a suggestion right there?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. SEARS. During the past two years, at least, has it not been the policy of the entire committee to follow just the line suggested by the chairman?

Mr. SNYDER. Absolutely.

Mr. FERRIS. I have felt that to be true.

Mr. SNYDER. There is no difference of opinion in the committee upon that, and there has not been for two years.

Mr. FERRIS. I wanted to state to the gentleman the obstacles that will confront him, having served on the Committee on Indian Affairs in years gone by. I want to urge the gentleman to maintain a strong determination in doing that very thing. There will be all sorts of obstacles thrown in his path, as there have been in the paths of preceding chairmen, by people who have esthetic notions, notions that are not well grounded in facts, that the Indian ought to have constant and unbounded supervision of some sort administered to him by the Federal Government.

Mr. SNYDER. I would like to say to the gentleman that my education in things esthetic, ephemeral, and idealistic was sadly neglected in my early life.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. TILSON. Along that same line, will the gentleman go a little further, in regard to Indians who have been dependent upon the Government? Suppose that, having received their portion, they go out and spend it in riotous living or otherwise, and eventually becoming bankrupt, as many other citizens of the country do, is the gentleman willing to say that the Government shall not take them back under its wing or assume responsibility for them again?

Mr. SNYDER. I thought I made that fairly clear in my previous statement.

Mr. TILSON. The gentleman stated that there were some Indians who had been made free a hundred years ago, and that some of them had been taken back under governmental care. Are we going to do anything of that kind? Does the gentleman mean it when he says that they should be cut loose entirely, and that they will be given the same chance as other American citizens, and no more?

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I do not care to make any promise which I might not be able to live up to, but I am opposed to taking back an Indian just the same as I would be to taking back a white man if he had once had his property and failed to exercise reasonable judgment in taking care of it.

Mr. FAIRFIELD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. FAIRFIELD. Some reference has been made to the teaching of farming. May I ask whether there is any assistance given to the Indians, except in the tribal relation, in stock raising and farming?

Mr. SNYDER. The difficulty about the instruction is that the Indian is given too much instruction, too much attention—to such an extent that he has made up his mind that all he has to do is to sit still and the instructors will do the work. We want to cut out about 90 per cent of the instruction, the care and treatment the Indians are receiving, and let them get to work themselves. If they will not work and till the soil and mind the sheep, then I would let them live on coyotes and herbs until they got used to working. [Laughter.]

Mr. FAIRFIELD. The idea is to reduce the superintendents of farming and stock raising?

Mr. SNYDER. The idea is to get it into the mind of the Indian that he has got to exercise some force of character and energy in order to preserve himself.

Mr. FERRIS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. FERRIS. Has the gentleman segregated the figures so that he can tell us what part of this $15,000,000 goes for schools and what for salaries, and so forth?

Mr. SNYDER. I could if I had the report here, but that will be in the report which will be printed and ready for distribution to-morrow morning.

Mr. EMERSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNYDER. I will.

Mr. EMERSON. Can the gentleman from New York tell us what are the obstacles that are in the way of emancipating the Indian? After 100 years of civilization, when we came here and found the Indian self-sustaining—after 100 years of civilization he is now dependent upon the Government. What are the obstacles to emancipating him now?

Mr. SNYDER. There are many obstacles. For instance, take the Five Civilized Tribes in the State of Oklahoma. Some of them are very wealthy men. I understand that the Osages are the richest people in the world. There are about 4,800 of them, and the average income is $4,000 per capita. These men have been here for years endeavoring to get this House to grant them the privilege of having an attorney, for which they will themselves pay, to look after their interests as between the tribes and the Government. They have been unable by reason of obstacles put in the way to get a man, to whom they are willing to pay a good, round sum, to look after their interests.

Mr. CARTER. Is it not the fact that in the last appropriation bill there was carried an item allowing the Osages to have an attorney, but that it was stricken out on a point of order on the floor of the House?

Mr. SNYDER. Those are the obstacles, and they are difficult to overcome. The reason is this: While the committee is perfectly willing and anxious to grant improvements in the administration of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, they will have some friend on the floor here in time to object and make points of order to items which are not only for the benefit of the Government but for the benefit of the Indian himself, but to the disadvantage perhaps of the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

Mr. EMERSON. Congress ought to be larger than any branch of the Government. I do not know how it is, but I have been a believer that in this country we should Americanize everybody, the Indians as well as everybody else. We emancipated the Negro, and we do not do anything for him; if he gets hard up he has to suffer and perhaps starve. Why can not the Indians be treated the same way?

Mr. SNYDER. I have stated to the gentleman the principal obstacle to the improvement in Indian affairs, and that is the Bureau of Indian Affairs itself.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNYDER. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman from Oklahoma stated that these matters were stricken out of appropriation bills on a point of order. I would like to ask if the committee is dependent absolutely on the appropriation bills to bring about wholesome legislation concerning Indians. Why could not proper legislation be brought into the House, against which a point of order would not lie, and over which the Indian Department would have no control whatever?

Mr. SNYDER. The committee would be glad to consider any measure that the gentleman from Texas may present to overcome those difficulties.

Mr. ANDREWS of Nebraska. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. ANDREWS of Nebraska. How does the total carried in this bill compare with the total carried in the bill which failed of passage in the last session?

Mr. SNYDER. I have stated that the money actually appropriated by the Government in the bill will be about $600,000 above the present law, due to the belief of the committee that the items which the Government has to purchase will cost more, and that the various activities in the way of profit will be more, and that that much more will be needed to carry on these activities in the same way that they have been carried on in previous years.

Mr. ANDREWS of Nebraska. That is compared with the present law, but how about the bill that failed of passage in the last session?

Mr. SNYDER. It is practically the same.

Mr. HASTINGS. It is exactly the same amount that was agreed to in conference.

Mr. SNYDER. Yes. I thank the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL].

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, my interest in the Indian has led me to go into the questions as to what can be done for his betterment. That the Indian has been taken advantage of by the white man there is no question; that the Indian is not getting as much for the money that is being spent in his behalf to-day as he should get, there is no question in my mind. We have fallen into a rut in our dealings with the Indian. There is much the same thing being done to-day for him that was done a hundred years ago, 80 years ago, 60 years ago, 40 years ago. We have changed some, but we have not kept pace with the progress that we have made in other things, in our dealing with the Indians. We can eliminate a great deal of the supervision that we are having over them. There is no question in my mind but that there are as many as 20 agencies provided for in this bill that could be eliminated from it and save thousands of dollars to the Indians and to the Treasury of the United States. Just as soon as an effort is made to eliminate one of these agencies, however, somebody from the State in which the agency is located gets the idea that they are going to lose the opportunity for having some Government money spent in the State or lose a little patronage. And a great fight is made in behalf of the Indians, but really to retain the agency. They say, "This is an outrage on the Indian. What are you going to do? Turn them loose to become a prey to the wiles of the white man?" Tears will be shed, and bureaus, established in New York and Boston that never saw a blanket Indian in the world, will send telegrams and petitions to Congress to restore the agency at Podunk; and the agency is restored, and the expenditure goes on. And the Indian is dealt with in very much the same way to-day that he was half a century or a century ago.

I want, therefore, to speak about a matter that I think we can undertake that will materially benefit the Indians, and I am led to make the statement because of the statement made by the chairman of the committee about the Indian's failure as a farmer. I refer to the advantages that can come to the Indian by teaching him agriculture. I do not mean that he should be taught agriculture by a broken-down farmer who made a failure at farming himself and is willing to take $50 a month to sit down in an Indian agency listed on the pay roll as "farmer" at the Podunk agency. A man who will take $50 a month and go and sit at an Indian agency is not worth two whoops in Podunk.

Mr. UPSHAW. I would like to ask a question just as a matter of information. I am a new man here. I would like to have the gentleman please give us the geographical position of Podunk. [Laughter.]

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I think it is down in Georgia, if you have any Indians down there. [Laughter.]

Mr. UPSHAW. I deny the allegation, but I do not defy the "allegator."

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I will tell you where Podunk is located. It is located at most any place where they have an Indian agency.

Mr. UPSHAW. That is clear.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. This man that I have referred to is, of course, a total failure as a farmer. He does not know, in the first place, how to feed or milk a cow. He does not know how to take care of half a dozen shoats. He does not know how to take care of a pair of mules. He knows absolutely nothing about farming, and therefore can teach nothing to the Indians, and yet he is the farmer at the agency, and the money that is paid to him and the money that is expended under his direction results in no good to the Indians.

The future welfare of the Indian makes it necessary, however, that he shall be taught farming. Almost every Indian of every degree of blood can be located upon some land. If the Indian does not already own it, and it has not been allotted, it can be allotted to him. The land is available for the Indians for agricultural purposes.

The trouble with the Indian is that he has not been taught how to use the land or what to do with it. He has not been taught how to take care of hogs and cattle and sheep; how to till the soil, or what to put in, and how to take care of it, or what to do with stock or grain or hay.

He knows nothing about those things, because he is dependent upon this so-called "farmer" at the agency, who does not know as much about it as he does. We are spending a great deal of money upon the education of the Indian. The average Indian who makes a success, if he makes success at all, will make it as a farmer. It is wasting the Indians' time to take a course in higher mathematics, in astronomy, and all that sort of thing without the study of agriculture in connection with them.

We should provide somewhere in this country a great agricultural school for Indians, where Indians can be taught scientifically how to farm, what to do with land, what to do with stock, what to do with the products of the soil, and how to take care of them. Such a school can be established in this country in which Indians can be taught to farm and become self-supporting, self-respecting, and good citizens. You can not make a farmer out of an Indian as it has been attempted in the past by putting an alleged "farmer" on the pay roll at the Indian agency and having him sit around loafing among the Indians all summer and winter and not raising enough hay to feed the horses that are maintained on the place. I have been to an Indian agency where they bought grain to feed the horses that were used upon the place. The farmer did not have the enterprise or the intelligence to raise enough grain to feed the teams that were maintained on the place, and large amounts of money were expended every year for purchasing feed for farmers' horses and hogs on the farm at the Podunk Agency.

Mr. SHREVE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Yes.

Mr. SHREVE. I desire to ask the gentleman what crops were raised upon the farm?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Crops of worthless weeds. Nothing was done. The farmer was there to serve the Indians. He was to give instructions to the Indians. He was to go out on the Indian farm and show the Indians what to do. But instead of being an example to the Indians for good he sat around and did nothing, and was an example for evil.

That thing must be done away with. We should give these young Indians, bright, energetic, able fellows, with plenty of money as members of their tribe to start them on a farm—give them an education in an agricultural school, and then they will go out on their own farms and become good farmers. They can teach others how to farm. I hope Congress will, in the interest of the Indian, at an early day cooperate with members of the Committee on Indian Affairs and with the Bureau of Indian Affairs and urge that this be done in the interest of the Indians.

We must change and enlarge our policy. We must do something that will give to the Indian something really worth while for the money that is spent for the benefit of the Indian. In my judgment the way to get real results for the Indian is to send him to an agricultural school where he can be taught every study that is connected with a liberal education and at the same time be taught the use of the soil. And in that same connection the same school can well be enlarged so as to include manual training for men and women, so that the young women who are attending such a school may go upon the farm and become good housewives upon the farm and know how to put up fruit and know how to render lard and know how to take care of everything that is raised upon the farm and help to make a farm home.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Yes.

Mr. FESS. Why should there not be an arrangement whereby an Indian, taught up to a certain standard, upon graduation from that place, would graduate into citizenship and be taken out from under the bureau?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. That is a happy suggestion. I see no reason on earth why that should not be done. I see no reason why in many instances graduates of our best Indian schools are still held under the palm of the Indian Office.

Mr. FESS. That is not right.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. When an Indian graduates from an agricultural school and goes out upon his allotment with a team and a cow and a pair of shoats and a dozen chickens, he has started in life; he is independent with his little annuity that comes to him. Then I would relieve him and all like him of supervision by the white man. [Applause.] I would relieve him then of the expense and the annoyance and the humiliation of having everything that he does and every movement that he makes supervised. [Applause.]

That is the suggestion that I want to make to the Members of the House, that we find somewhere a place in this country where we can establish a great agricultural school for Indians. Oklahoma is a great agricultural State, with wonderfully rich land and plenty of it. There are Indian agencies there, there are Indian lands there, there are places in that State to-day, in the great mid-continent country, where such a school, suitable to the Indians climatically and in every other way, can well be established or enlarged. Some of the schools are already provided in a small way for the instruction of Indians in agriculture, but it is only in a small way, as a mere incident to the schools. What I am insisting on is that this school that I have in mind should become a real agricultural school for Indians and be known as such throughout the country, so that Indians might attend there from every section of the country.

Mr. KNUTSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Yes.

Mr. KNUTSON. In taking the restrictions off the Indians the gentleman does not contend that they should be given the right to dispose of their allotments, does he?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I do not know why not. If a white man has 160 acres of land, he has a right to sell it or mortgage it or do as he pleases with it; and if an Indian, who is better educated and a better farmer and in every way as good a citizen as the white man, has the same kind of land, why should we keep any restrictions upon what he does with his land?

Mr. KNUTSON. Does the gentleman contend that the mere fact that the Indian has an education is an indication that he has the brains and the ability to meet the white man on an equal footing and deal with him and not get the short end of the deal?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I am not afraid of the average Indian in the average trade with a white man. I know Indians. I have examined Indians before committees of this House who were as shrewd as any white man. I have examined Indians who were under the supervision of the Indian Office who were presidents of national banks, vice presidents of interurban railroads, who were worth a quarter of a million dollars.

Mr. KNUTSON. Yes; but they are the exceptions. We have to take them collectively, not individually.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Of course, there are Indians who need guardians, as there are white men who need guardians.

Mr. KNUTSON. The gentleman from Kansas would not want to have a repetition of the history that was enacted at White Earth, Minn., seven or eight years ago?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. No; and white men were responsible for a good deal of what happened there.

Mr. KNUTSON. That happened because all restrictions were taken off. And what was the average price obtained for the land at the White Earth Reservation?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. There are isolated cases, but I contend that the policy should be to eliminate, as far as practicable, the supervision that the Indian is now under. My judgment is that the hope of the Indian is on the farm. The future of the Indian is as a farmer. I speak of the average. There are good lawyers, there are good doctors, there are good United States Senators, and Members of Congress who are Indians; but the hope of the average Indian is as a farmer. But the Indian must be taught in modern farming, the modern scientific use of the soil, just as it is taught to the white man. The Indian can not be expected to succeed as a farmer after he has been tutored a few years at an Indian agency by a man who made a failure of farming when the Indian must compete with young men who have graduated from our agricultural colleges as farmers. We should establish an Indian agricultural school where Indians can be taught scientific farming as white men are taught and give them the same start as scientific farmers that young white men have. I repeat that I am hoping Congress will at an early date have an opportunity to consider this proposition.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the remainder of my time.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, a message from the Senate, by Mr. Waldorf, its enrolling clerk, announced that the Senate has passed without amendment the bill (H. R. 2329) making appropriations to supply urgent deficiencies in appropriations for the Bureau of War Risk Insurance and for the payment of pensions for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. FERRIS].

Mr. FERRIS. Gentlemen, I am not a member of the Indian Committee now. I have had service on this committee in the past. I have lived practically all of my life among the Indians or very near the Indians. I was born and raised within 16 miles of the Indian Territory when it was quite an Indian country. When I was a member of the Indian Committee I studied this question a good deal. You can debate it from an academic standpoint without end, and probably it will be debated in that way long after those of us now here are gone, but I want to submit two or three practical observations on the subject, based on my observations in the years that I have studied the question.

It has been stated by our chairman [Mr. SNYDER] that there are 300,000 Indians in the United States. I do not mean 300,000 people wearing red blankets and with paint on their faces and feathers in their hair, but there are on the Indian rolls 300,000 people, some of them as white as we are, some of them with golden hair, some of them presidents of banks, some United States Senators, some Members of this House, one of them Register of the Treasury of the United States, some of them worth more than a million dollars which they have earned themselves.

Now, the difficulty as I see it is to get the real Indians separated from these so-called Indians. There are in my own State, roughly, 100,000 Indians; I do not mean wild Indians, I do not mean they are even real Indians, but Indians on the rolls in my State, which is one of the 48 States of this Union. The Indian Territory, which comprises one-half of our State, was for 50 years the assembling place for Indians. If Indians were not needed in North Carolina, or South Carolina, or Mississippi, or Georgia, or any of the Eastern States, the Government proceeded to move them west and put them in the then Indian Territory. It has been a kind of pot pourri for the assembling of Indians from all those States. They came from every section of the country. They were the original occupants. Some of them were eastern Indians, from Virginia and along the Atlantic seaboard, and they were brought there together. They came there with different ideas. But they have been blended together. They have been made citizens. Most of them are making good citizens. There is no race trouble on. They vote for us; we vote for them. The only test applied is "Is this man a good man," and the Indian blood makes no difference. Oklahoma selected as her first citizen to be placed in Statuary Hall an Indian—Sequoyah, the Indian who invented the Cherokee alphabet.

I mention this to show how well the white and Indian races have acted in the development of the great new State of Oklahoma.

The one problem that the Indian Committee and the Interior Department and Congress has to get into their heads is that they ought to separate the Indians into classes so the incompetent ones would be cared for and the competent ones given their affairs into their own hands. In my State it was worth ten or twelve thousand dollars for a man to get his name on the Indian roll, because it gave him land and a share in the tribal estate. It was considered an ambitious thing, a worthy thing, for a man to get on the rolls. When a man was enrolled and became an Indian he got an allotment of land and a share in the money and the tribal affairs of the State. Now, these men want to get out from under the restrictions and have their land and money and transact their own affairs. For example, I know men in my State that have traces of Indian blood who have made in the last two years millions of dollars by their own exertion, their own hands, and by their own ingenuity. It is tremendously galling and irritating to a man of that character to have to come to Washington, or have his attorney come to Washington, and hang around the doors of his Congressman or the Indian Commissioner and try to get some trivial right that ought to be given to him in the abstract. These are irritating things—trying to administer the affairs from Washington at long-distance range by the Government over men who know much more than does the administration.

Mr. EMERSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FERRIS. Certainly.

Mr. EMERSON. Are these men who have made the money the gentleman speaks of permitted to handle their own affairs?

Mr. FERRIS. Oh, yes; if a man goes out and buys deeded lands other than Indian lands and drills for oil and it brings in oil. But if he develops oil on Indian land, then he must proceed through the department with all the details of their procedure.

I don't wish to be misunderstood. There are many instances where supervision is necessary, but it ought to be simplified and reduced to the minimum.

Mr. EMERSON. Are Indians permitted to vote in Oklahoma?

Mr. FERRIS. Yes, in Oklahoma; but not in every State in the Union. There are Indians in every State of the Union, as I am advised, including the District of Columbia, which has a few Indians. We have a large number of Indians in our State, of course, but happily for all concerned we have journeyed along well together. We are living in peace together; there is absolutely good-fellowship among us; we are all friends.

That is because, as the ex-chairman of the Indian Committee [Mr. CARTER] has so well put it, that in our State the Indians are permitted to participate in politics and hold office and perform every function of a citizen, save and except the handling of his property. For example, we have two Congressmen now who have Indian blood in their veins, Mr. CARTER of Oklahoma and Mr. HASTINGS of Oklahoma. There are two United States Senators, Senator CURTIS and Senator OWEN, with Indian blood.

The Register of the Treasury, Houston B. Teehee, has Indian blood, and many of the county officers in my State, everywhere you go, are Indians. There are presidents of banks; and then at the very top of affairs members of chambers of commerce, and so forth, an honor to their State and an honor to their tribe.

Now, I do not want to mislead the House. There are Indians who I have no doubt would, if restrictions were removed, fool away their money and their land and be penniless and poverty stricken. I do not advocate that; they need some supervision. But what I do say is that some of these competency commissions that have been appointed ought to get busy and separate the real Indians from the so-called Indians. Just as long as some man sits in a swivel chair in Washington, drawing $1,200 to $1,500 a year, telling a man in Oklahoma who can make a million dollars how to administer some trivial matter, just that long you will have irritation and trouble.

A few years ago I was on the Indian Committee, and following my strong belief I felt the administration should be cut down and some of the clerks dispensed with. Well, you can imagine the hornet's nest I got into. I tried the best I could as a member of the committee to cut out some of the appropriations and get rid of them; but what did they do? They would go out and find some poor old, pitiful, blind, face-painted, feather-haired Indian who had squandered his money and hold him out as ghastly skeleton of what was being done to the Indians in Oklahoma.

Then his picture, together with the propaganda concerning it, would be put forth in the New York and Boston papers, and Congress would be confronted with the statement that by cutting off these clerks, by cutting off this superfluous administration, it was trying to divest the Indian of some of his property and protection. This was not the fact. No member of the Oklahoma delegation wants to divest any Indian of his protection if he needs it, but we, and the Indian, do not want to be administered from Washington when administration is no longer necessary. The Indian wants his money and his land, and he wants to pay his taxes, and he wants to be free from this fourteen or fifteen million dollars worth of supervision.

Mr. Chairman, I want now to congratulate the Committee on Ways and Means, at the beginning of the administration of the Democratic side, upon its appointment of my colleague, Mr. CHARLES CARTER, as a member of that committee. I think in doing so they pay a very great compliment to the 300,000 Indians in this country. Mr. CARTER has been chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs for six years. His appointment by the Ways and Means Committee is a compliment to his administration of the affairs of the Indian Affairs Committee, which he conducted with dignity and decorum and honesty. If anyone ever heard of any graft or any charges against the administration of those affairs while he has been chairman I have failed to hear of it. I want also to congratulate the Republican side of the House in selecting a man of very broad vision as chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, in the person of the distinguished gentleman from New York, Mr. SNYDER. I have watched him here, without being active about it, and I have observed the viewpoint of the new chairman of the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Oklahoma has expired.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman two minutes more.

Mr. FERRIS. The gentleman from New York [Mr. SNYDER] is, first, a practical man. Next he is an honest man; third, he is a brave man; and, fourth, I think he has the nerve and the courage and the ability to do his duty and do what ought to be done in respect to these Indians. [Applause.] He will have pitfalls. If he tries to abolish the agency to which the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL] referred, he will have telegrams and the hip hurrah that comes with such a thing. If he tries to lay off one clerk in an outlying reservation, he will be held up to scorn and the statement made that the chairman of the Indian Affairs Committee is allowing the Indians to be robbed. That will not be the fact, however. The men who live with these Indians, the Indians themselves, want an honest, straight administration of the more unfortunate, uneducated Indians, but at the same time they want the Government to save its money and let the so-called white Indian alone. [Applause.]

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. JOHNSON].

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I desire to discuss immigration and naturalization. I shall begin by calling attention to the statement by the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. CARTER] that 10,000 American Indians entered the service of the United States Army during the war. A good showing for the Indians. But, Mr. Chairman, putting on the uniform did not make them citizens, and when they took off the uniform they again became wards of Uncle Sam. That strikes me as extremely unfair, and I hope that the chairman of this committee will find a place in this bill to insert an amendment giving full United States citizenship to all Indians who served the United States in the late war. [Applause.] We did that for all of the aliens in the United States who went into the military service of the United States. When they entered the Army their citizenship was made complete. That was fair and right. Can not the Indian soldiers be as well treated?

Mr. Chairman, everyone knows that many thousands of aliens in the United States with their first papers—and thousands without papers—accepted the provisions of the draft act and went into the service of the United States, fought valiantly, and acquitted themselves nobly. But we also well know that there were some who, in order to evade the draft, withdrew their first papers, called back their declarations of intention to become citizens of the United States. What shall we do with them? They are in the United States without much chance of becoming citizens of the United States. People are against them. Those men, mostly from neutral countries, are finding it difficult to secure employment; they are complaining to their Governments, and those Governments are complaining to our State Department. It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, these men, having withdrawn their declaration of intention, having said, in effect, "We do not wish to be American citizens," that it becomes our plain duty to provide that they shall not at any later date become citizens of the United States. Further, we should see to it that they are deported and sent out of the United States not to return. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, in an effort to ascertain something of the laws and regulations in regard to immigration and naturalization, I have sought to find out just what various bureaus and departments of the Government have to do with these two subjects. I have here a list of immigration and naturalization subjects, running to various bureaus and departments of the Government. The analysis was prepared by Mr. Arthur H. Fleming, of California. As I look at the sheet, I do not wonder that lawyers, Members of Congress, and citizens generally have difficulty in finding out just what immigration and naturalization laws mean and what are the regulations now in effect with relation thereto. I ask unanimous consent to insert this analysis in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. A large number of the paragraphs on this sheet refer to bureaus or administrative organizations which came into being on account of the war. One would think that no reference need be made now to those establishments, upon the ground that, the war being practically over, they will fade away and not be needed, but I doubt if many of them will fade away without protest. A Government bureau, no matter how useless, hangs on to life with a tenacity that is remarkable. I regret that I can not refer to all the departments which have to do with aliens. I shall mention only one or two. We find the Department of Labor with seven or eight bureaus dealing with aliens, about half of them statutory and the other half administrative. The Department of the Interior has two, and the problem of which department shall handle the education of the alien is an acute one.

The Department of State has one administrative bureau and two statutory bureaus dealing with aliens. Passport matters go to these bureaus. We made emergency laws during the war concerning passports, and the emergency laws developed a great array of passport regulations. That emergency act should be revised and reenacted before a treaty of peace is finally signed. Otherwise we shall have trouble, probably, with the arrival of great hordes of aliens from various broken and disturbed countries, which I am positive the United States does not care to receive. I need not specify in detail—Germany and Austria, perhaps.

Our passport business, it sometimes seems to me, is run on a desire to oblige other countries rather than to accommodate the desires of our own citizens. It is very hard for a citizen to secure a passport just now to England or France, but very easy to secure permits by the hundreds for Greeks and Italians to leave for their native lands. You know our war act regulated the departure of all aliens, and we could hold these departing hordes if we desired, which we do not, in my opinion. They came not to stay, but to earn good money and take it home with them. But it strikes me that we might well pass a law barring them from returning to the United States. Let them learn that the United States is not a plum tree, rich and fruitful for those outside.

For a while our State Department encouraged the admission of persons from Russia. Not now. But does it not strike the average American citizen that we would do well to suspend by law the coming of Russians and all others until we ascertain what kind of an underground railway or means of communication the revolutionists of that country have with the revolutionists of this country?

Yes, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, we have revolutionists in the United States, great numbers of them—all "red," too—although many will deny that they want anything but a ballot-box revolution. In fact, the most virulent preacher of bloody revolution right here in the United States denies, when he is arrested, that he means any such thing. But read their stuff! Listen to their talks! And remember that many of the most virulent are not citizens at all. And yet when we demand not only their deportation but that no more of them shall come in either as preachers, teachers, students, or what not, we are about to be met with a lot of argument that aliens are going from and not coming to the United States; that aliens who have been here earning good money are now going back with it, and that we will need more aliens. But do not let that frighten you. The people of the United States know that it is highly desirable to still further restrict immigration or perhaps suspend it absolutely and entirely for a year or two, until our house can be cleaned. [Applause.]

New York holds its Soviet meetings, and the revolutionists of other countries have their headquarters there. Must they be permitted to remain? The preaching of the revolution, the breeding of hatred for the United States and its institutions, goes steadily on day and night here among us in all languages and jargons and printed in all types.

I received to-day a letter which might be of interest to those who are worried for fear too many aliens are going out of the country. It describes a meeting—mostly of aliens—held in New York night before last to protest against the treatment of their coreligionists abroad, and it is said to have been a remarkable meeting. No one could have studied the mass of wolfish faces or have seen the stunted humanity, the writer says, without a shock. He says if the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization could have seen that meeting, if Members of Congress could have seen it there would be no doubt whatever of the immediate passage of a bill radically restricting immigration. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I ask for five minutes additional.

Mr. SNYDER. I am pleased to yield the gentleman five minutes more.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I am using this time for the purpose of calling attention to the fact, in my opinion, it is necessary to secure action this summer on a bill to suspend immigration temporarily, notwithstanding the hue and cry that will be raised that labor is going out of the country; a bill to register all aliens now here, and to carry in that bill a clause providing for the deportation of those who withdrew their first papers in order to avoid the draft. [Applause.] Save Americanism in the United States. [Applause.] Some day it may be too late. This is a Government of the people, by the people, and for the people. My colleagues, the time has come to declare that this is a Government of the American people, by the American people, and for the American people. [Applause.] That says nothing against any man now here and of us who have completed the process of naturalization or are completing it. But we have about all we can assimilate for a while, and the time has come to put a check to those who are coming here meaning ill to this country.

Mr. UPSHAW. Good.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Further, the time has come to make the incoming alien prove his desirability, rather than continue the plan that the United States prove his undesirability.

Mr. Chairman, I received yesterday a vicious revolutionary newspaper published in Boston which has not received the privileges of the mail, I understand. I think it is called the Revolutionist. It is being circulated in all parts of the United States, even in the agricultural districts. It has a list of seven or eight names as editors and coeditors, and I will lay a bet that half of them are not citizens of the United States. I doubt if one of them was born here, and I know that all of them are set on destroying this Government. They would bring on a revolution of blood and iron, and I would like to ask how much longer the people of the United States will be blind and let that thing go on? What of our oaths to defend this country against enemies, foreign and domestic?

Mr. SABATH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. SABATH. Can the gentleman give the name of the paper, and also the names of the editors?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I have not it at this moment, but I can put the names in the RECORD.

Mr. SABATH. Will the gentleman put it in the RECORD?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. At some later date. I am sending to Boston to ascertain if they are citizens of the United States. If they are, then it is proof positive that we made a woeful mistake in letting them and their kind come in to claim the false right under the guise of a free press to preach a blood-and-iron revolution. If they are not citizens, then we are in poor business to let them come here and take part in the affairs of our Government. [Applause.]

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. Can the gentleman tell us through what agency or agencies this paper is being distributed?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I have no way of knowing. Perhaps it is sent broadcast through some underground method.

Mr. BLANTON. In what way did it reach the gentleman?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. It was mailed to me by a farmer living in an agricultural section of the State of Washington.

Mr. BLANTON. Then it did go through the mail when it was denied the privileges of the mail?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I do not know that it was denied. It prints no permit. It should be denied.

Mr. BLANTON. I am in sympathy with the gentleman.

Mr. GALLAGHER. Is the cure for the condition you mention now a prohibition of immigration?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I think so.

Mr. GALLAGHER. And is that the only remedy?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. It is a preventative, at least, for the future, because when the President himself comes here and says what he did in his speech at Boston, we know what he means. Suspend immigration unless——

Mr. GALLAGHER. These men are here.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. If they are not citizens of the United States, they must be sent out at once, and if they are citizens they should be put in jail. [Applause.]

Mr. GALLAGHER. Then you propose a method of deportation?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. We have some deportation clauses. We want more. We are deporting some.

Mr. GALLAGHER. But that has nothing to do with immigration.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. All immigrants should be subject to deportation for a long period of years. I would like to know why all of these aliens who are cursing and damning the United States squeal when we come to deport them? Why do they hire lawyers, start habeas corpus proceedings, and try to stay in the United States? Why do they do it?

A MEMBER. They do not want to lose a good thing.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. That is it. They know that liberty, that freedom, that opportunity is here, in spite of their mouthings. Gentlemen, the time has come for the United States to clean house, and while we are cleaning house we should shut the doors entirely. [Applause.]

The table presented by Mr. JOHNSON of Washington follows:

Analysis of Federal departmental relations to the alien.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MCKEOWN].

Mr. MCKEOWN. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I want to take a few minutes to talk about home conditions in the Indian Territory portion of the State of Oklahoma. I discussed that question here before when the Indian bill was up for consideration, and I am still interested, as every man in the eastern part of Oklahoma is interested, in the question of the purchase of homes among the Indians of the Five Civilized Tribes.

Now, here are the conditions as they exist: In 1908 the Congress of the United States passed an act by which it removed the restrictions from the Indians having certain quantum of Indian blood. Since that time those Indians, who are restricted Indians, can only lease their surplus lands for a period of five years for agricultural purposes and their homesteads for one year for agricultural purposes without the approval of the Indian Department. That has resulted in this, for example: A member of the Choctaw tribe of Indians was allotted 320 acres of average land for himself, 320 acres for his wife, and 320 acres for each one of his children. A man with eight children would have approximately 3,000 acres of land. He could only lease the surplus lands for five years; that is, about one-half. Out of each 320 acres there were 160 reserved as homesteads, and this could be rented only for one year at the time. Now, he can not make any sales of his surplus land. He finds himself land poor. The people who live in the State pay all the taxes. They pay for road improvements and school facilities. The tenant farmer who plows the cotton and the corn and reaps the grain pays taxes on his mules and machinery and on all of his property, while his landlord has no taxes to pay. Many Indian citizens do not desire this situation, and many of them paid taxes on lands that were not taxable.

The Indian wants some relief. The men who go there want homes. There are men in the eastern part of the State of Oklahoma who came there from Illinois, Ohio, Arkansas, and Texas, and from other States, 20 years ago, with the hope of obtaining a home and buying homes where they could settle and give their children an opportunity in life. But what has happened to them? They have waited there in vain. They have waited all these years and have had no opportunity to obtain that home for which they have longed. What has been the result? There are thousands of tenant farmers who have had to chase from one part of the country to another to farm, move out this year and move in next year. They had no home in which to live. The Indian who owns the land is losing by reason of the land being worn away by wrong methods of farming. What else do we find? It is under these conditions that dissatisfaction is so easily aroused against the Government. It was in such places and under such conditions that we had our antagonism to the draft laws and where we have our radical element.

Here is what ought to be done: The department ought to remove all the restrictions from the lands, except 40 or 80 acres to be used as a home. This should be selected and made tax free and inalienable for all time, as long as he will live there with his descendants and make it a home.

The other land ought to be put up at auction to the highest bidder on terms of from 5 to 20 years, such as to permit actual bona fide farmers who live in or who come to the State to buy and own homes. I want to say to you gentlemen who live in the large centers of population, and who appreciate conditions there, that you can realize what it is to have a tenant population of discontented men. I say to you, it is like having a bomb ready to explode on every adverse change of conditions, and it is people of that kind who are likely to be radically inclined. If you make a home owner you make a patriotic defender of the flag of the country, and nothing could be better done by this country than to give every worthy man an opportunity to acquire a home in city or country. I agree with gentlemen who urge that there ought to be a more strict regulation of immigration of men coming to this country, but there is another thing to be considered, and that is that there are men already in this country who have not had an opportunity to acquire homes. When you make this country a land of home owners, both in the city and in the country, you will have a country that will always respond to every patriotic demand. [Applause.]

The Secretary of the Interior is now advocating the purchase of homes for returned soldiers. I favor legislation of that character. There is no better field to-day than eastern Oklahoma to put his program into effect. Remove the restrictions on the lands as indicated. Then let him advertise the lands in Oklahoma at public auction, and let the soldiers who want to buy land for a home come in and buy it on long terms and low interest rates, and let the resident tenant farmers buy homes for their families. The Secretary of the Interior can put this plan into practical operation in Oklahoma now, without waiting for a dollar to be appropriated from the Treasury of the United States. I urged it upon his attention, and I will offer an amendment to this bill to put into effect this project now and try it out practically and see what the result will be. I am sure we would have a land of home owners in Oklahoma; and the Indian will be protected, because he can not spend his money until it is due and paid.

As was stated by the chairman of this committee [Mr. SNYDER], the Indians of Oklahoma have bought Liberty bonds. I know of one Indian in my district who bought $60,000 of Liberty bonds and paid the cash, and the Secretary will not let him have the interest on his bonds to spend or invest. That is the condition. That condition ought to be corrected. I expect, gentlemen, at the proper time to offer an amendment to this bill requiring the Indian Bureau to open the lands of Oklahoma for sale at public auction, and take off these Indian restrictions and give the Indian and the white man a chance. [Applause.]

I thank you, gentlemen, and I yield back the remainder of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Oklahoma yields back the remainder of his time.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. EMERSON].

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman from New York withhold that for a minute?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. The gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MCKEOWN] made a very remarkable statement, but he probably can explain it. Why would the Secretary of the Treasury deny to a holder of $60,000 worth of Liberty bonds the interest due on those bonds?

Mr. McKEOWN. I said "the Secretary of the Interior," or intended so to say. If I said "Secretary of the Treasury" I made a misstatement. The Secretary of the Interior supervises the Indian's money. He collects it in his department as individual Indian funds, but he does not pay it all out to the Indian himself.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. I may have erred as to the Secretary of the Treasury; but no matter who the Secretary was, the suggestion was so startling that I thought the gentleman from Oklahoma would like to explain it. Surely, the Indian who was patriotic enough to buy $60,000 of bonds, or any other amount, should receive the interest on those bonds, should he not?

Mr. McKEOWN. I will explain the situation to the gentleman from Pennsylvania. The individual Indian money was collected from oil lands and held in the hands of the Secretary of the Interior to the credit of this particular Indian. This Indian asked the Secretary to buy Liberty bonds out of those funds. The Secretary bought the bonds, but when the interest coupons were due the Secretary collected the money on the coupons and placed it to the credit of the Indian; but he will not pay it out to the Indian because he says the Indian is not competent to handle the money.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. He says the Indian is not competent to handle the money, and therefore he holds it in trust?

Mr. McKEOWN. Yes.

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McKEOWN. Certainly.

Mr. SEARS. That condition has prevailed for years, as stated by the former chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs [Mr. CARTER of Oklahoma], who served in the past two years, and as stated by the present chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs [Mr. SNYDER], and the committee has tried to break up that system.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McKEOWN. Yes.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Suppose that Indian should die. What would become of his estate?

Mr. McKEOWN. It would go to his heirs and they would proceed to spend it, and some of them in riotous living, in all probability.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Who would collect it?

Mr. McKEOWN. His heirs would collect it.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Suppose they were not competent?

Mr. McKEOWN. On the death of the Indian the restrictions would be removed, descend unrestricted to the heirs, which would receive the money which the poor old Indian did not get a chance at.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I want to ask unanimous consent to revise and correct the remarks I made a little while ago.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Washington asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. EMERSON] is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the House, I secured this time in order to read an anonymous letter that was sent to me, but before I do that I want to do a little congratulating also. I want to congratulate the present occupant of the chair [Mr. LONGWORTH]. I hope it is a good sign that Ohio is coming back. It used to be said in the good old days of President McKinley and Mark Hanna that it was "the United States of Ohio." But Ohio has fallen behind of late, and therefore I was happy to see my friend and colleague occupying the chair, because it seemed to be a sign that Ohio is coming back. [Laughter.]

I wish also to congratulate the chairman of the committee [Mr. SNYDER] and the former chairman of the committee [Mr. CARTER]. They are both able men. I have watched them closely. They ought to be on more important committees than the Indian Affairs Committee. It might be a good idea to select men for their worth instead of for the amount of noise they can make.

I want to say, further, that I coincide with what the gentleman from Washington [Mr. JOHNSON] has said about what should be done to the alien. There were many aliens in the city of Cleveland who claimed their exemption, remained at home, and earned $5, $10, $15, and $20 a day while your boy and mine went to the front. That is absolutely wrong, and it should be corrected. It was an advantage to be an alien. I believe the time has arrived in this country when men should not vote as hyphens, but they should vote as American. [Applause.] There is too much of this voting the way your class votes.

I believe in educational preparedness to the limit. If this country had had that in 1916 you would not have had to go to war with Germany, and we would not be paying the interest upon $25,000,000,000 worth of bonds; 70,000 American boys would not be sleeping in Flanders fields, and 200,000 more would not be maimed and wounded. Nothing that this Congress could do would be better for this Government than to start a program whereby every citizen of this country should learn the rights and duties of citizenship; and while we welcome the alien at our door, he must leave his propaganda at the seashore and not bring it any further. I would tell that alien, "You may come here, but you must study your rights and your duties as a citizen, and if within a certain period of time you can not learn them and become a citizen, we will send you back home." I agree with the gentleman from Washington [Mr. JOHNSON] that every alien who claimed his exemption from military service because of his alienage should be started back now to the place from which he came. [Applause.] That is what I believe in and that is what this country must do.

On the 1st day of May in the city of Cleveland I witnessed a riot on the public square. A few thousand people in that city got the notion that this is a government of minorities and not of majorities. They marched to the public square of that city with their red flags. They took possession of the public square. They thought they were going to take possession of the city hall and the post office. They proceeded to deliver their utterances there, but the citizens of the city of Cleveland arose, tore down the red flags, and made them kiss the Stars and Stripes. Two hundred of the followers of the red flag were beaten up, and some of them more seriously wounded.

We taught them a lesson. The people of Cleveland went to the headquarters of the Bolshevists and there destroyed the furniture; and now instead of trying to overturn the Government, the Bolsheviki of Cleveland are seeking the protection of the Government which they so much dislike and are trying to overturn. [Applause.] That is one reason why I believe that this Government should enter upon a campaign of education. I am in favor of preparedness, and I want to say that if this country had been prepared in 1916 the Lusitania would never have been sunk and you would never have had to go to war, and you would have been at peace with all the world. It was simply because the Kaiser did not believe we would fight. If he had known that we would send 2,000,000 men to France in about a year and a half the Lusitania would never have been sunk.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. SNYDER. I yield to the gentleman five minutes more.

Mr. EMERSON. I believe in industrial preparedness, whereby we will raise and manufacture everything we need. I believe in commercial preparedness, whereby we will carry our American products in American ships—and we have been manufacturing ships—manned by American sailors and flying the American flag. As I said, I believe in educational preparedness, and if you will give us educational preparedness you can throw aside all the rest. But the time has arrived in this country when people must be taught to respect, love, protect, and defend the country in which they live, where their families live, where their children are being educated, where they are to spend the remainder of their natural lives.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I have received an anonymous letter which is very interesting and which I want to read. It says:

Gen. March has announced he will keep the Army up to a strength of 500,000 even if he has to hold conscripted men in the army of occupation.

Now, all I have to say is he will do no such thing. The President, Secretary of War, Congress, and the big generals themselves are our servants, and we, the people, pay the bills. Those boys are our boys, and we, their people, say they are coming home. The big lights must not go too far, and try to run things to suit themselves without the consent of the people, or they will find themselves in a mighty bad mess. The sooner Congress uses its influence to get the boys home, the better it will be for all concerned. We, their countrymen, including the boys so far discharged, will back those boys and their people if the boys demand return to this country immediately after peace is signed. And if there is to be a national row about the matter we will all get into it. It is up to Congress to get the boys home. Now, show us who of you we wisely put into office.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. EMERSON. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman spoke of being in favor of education as a means of getting rid of Bolshevism.

Mr. EMERSON. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that here in the District of Columbia, when the school board found that a teacher in the public schools of this city was teaching Bolshevism in the schools, they suspended her for a week, and now there is an effort on foot right here in the Nation's Capital to override the action of the school board and have the teacher fully reinstated, though the board merely imposed a sentence of one week's suspension for teaching Bolshevism in the schools. I agree with the gentleman that education is needed, but it is the proper kind of education that we need.

Mr. EMERSON. The gentleman might add that you can do a great many things in Washington that you can not do in other parts of the United States. I do not approve of everything that is done in Washington. If I were to take two or three hours' time, I might find fault with some conditions that I do not approve of. In the first place, I do not approve of the necessity, when I want to go to some department of the Government, of having to take a taxicab to go to some office connected with that department, located away off in the northwestern part of the city, and then after I get there find that I must take another taxicab to get to some other office connected with the same department located in the northeastern part of the city. They ought not to be scattered around in that way. But I will not take any further time in making that criticism now. You may be able to teach Bolshevism in the city of Washington, but you can not do it in the city of Cleveland. The people of Cleveland, on the 1st day of May, instantly arose and said the notions of Bolshevism could not be proclaimed there for a minute. That was the action taken by the people of the city of Cleveland. We can have anything we want in this country if a majority of the people are in favor of it. If the majority want Bolshevism, they can have it. However, I do not believe they want it if they obtain it by the process of a fair election. We elect our public officials in this country. We elect the President, and if we do not like him we remove him. We elect our Congressmen and Senators and governors and mayors. We can have whatever kind of officials we choose to elect, and if they are not the kind of officials we want it is our own fault, because we put them in office. This is for the action of the majority and not for the minority, and therefore I say to you that it is up to the majority of the people in this country, if they want to preserve the interests of this country, if they want to preserve the interests of this Nation, to provide, as the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON] has said, a proper kind of education, to preserve their rights and duties as citizens of this country. [Applause.]

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, may I inquire how the time stands?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York has used one hour and one-half and the gentleman from Oklahoma 1 hour and 17 minutes.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH].

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. EMERSON], who preceded me, and the newly selected chairman of the Immigration Committee [Mr. JOHNSON] seem, I feel, unwillingly impressed the House and the country that all of the foreign-born people are Bolshevists and opposed to all form of Government. However, I feel satisfied that that was not their intention, as I know both will agree with me that those who may have asked for exemption on account of alienage or those who might have been found to be taking part in disloyal movements are only a very few. Personally I wish there were none. I also regret that some of them are to be found, as has been stated by the gentleman from Washington [Mr. JOHNSON], as editors of newspapers which find fault with our institutions and tend to create discord and disobedience to our laws. This, of course, I greatly regret, and none of these misguided gentlemen are entitled to any special consideration at the hands of our country and surely will not receive any from me.

The newly selected chairman of the Committee on Immigration a few moments ago gave an outline of proposed legislation, which he believes is necessary, namely, a wholesale deportation and also immediate restriction of all immigration. I feel that, due to what has transpired in his section of the country and the article appearing in the paper which he has received, unduly excites him. I feel that it is not necessary to enact such stringent measures as he suggests. For years, with others, he has advocated the educational test in our immigration laws. I have frequently pointed out that the educational test would not prevent the coming of some of the most objectionable persons, and surely the educational test will not and can not prohibit the coming of those which he points out are guilty of writing these disloyal, unpatriotic articles.

However, if he will examine the names of men found guilty of disloyalty during the war he will find that the percentage of the foreign born is nil. I am of the opinion that the great majority of the foreign-born people have demonstrated their loyalty, patriotism, and love for this their adopted country, and I am satisfied that on thorough investigation we will find that the foreign-born people will excel in percentage in proportion to population of the native born who enlisted during this war. Those who have abused the privilege of our hospitality and freedom of our country and who have refused to serve the Nation, and all those who in any way showed any sign of disloyalty, I agree with the gentleman from Washington [Mr. JOHNSON] should be deported. I maintain, however, that wholesale condemnation of foreign-born people is unjustifiable. No doubt you all have heard of the splendid services rendered by the people of the various nationalities, and, of course, there are some gentlemen who at all times will withhold credit where credit is due. Only this morning I had the pleasure of reading an article which I know may surprise many of you. It is written by Mr. Justin McGrath, which I desire to insert as part of my remarks for the purpose of enlightening some who at all times endeavor to belittle the services of the Jews of America in this war. This article shows, notwithstanding the fact that the Jewish population of this country is only about 2½ to 3 per cent, that 5 per cent of our Army and Navy was composed of Jews. It also shows that the casualties suffered so far listed number 7,200, but the final count will show from ten to twelve thousand, making it nearly 5, yes, close to 6, per cent. It also shows that over 400 of the Jewish soldiers have already been cited for bravery. Time does not permit me to give other extracts from this article, but I request unanimous consent that I may insert same as part of my remarks.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks by the publication of this article referred to. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, I think it is manifestly unfair that we should place all foreign-born people in an unfavorable light before the people of our country. It is easy to charge people with being Bolshevists and it is easy to attack their patriotism. We should give credit where credit is due and to appreciate the splendid services that these people have rendered and not to charge all for the wrongdoings of a few.

RECORDS PROVE JEWISH TROOPS AMONG BRAVEST—MEMBERS OF RACE WIN 400 CITATIONS FOR VALOR DURING WAR—CASUALTIES MAY REACH 12,000.

(By Justin McGrath, editorial correspondent Universal Service.)

WASHINGTON, May 20.

Jokes on the pacifist tendencies of the Jews will have no appeal to excite laughter when the statistics of Jewish participation in the great war, now being compiled by the American Jewish War Records Committee, are completed.

This committee has 120,000 records of Jewish soldiers in its files. When all the returns are in it expects to have the records of 200,000 Jews who saw service.

If this expectation is met, the record will show that the Jews supplied about 5 per cent of the military and naval forces of the United States.

This can be appreciated when it is understood the proportion of Jews in the United States to the total population is only about 3 per cent.

JEWISH CASUALTIES HEAVY.

The Jewish casualties, so far listed, number 7,200. It is expected the final count will show from 10,000 to 12,000.

Four hundred citations for bravery already have been listed.

The largest centers of Jewish population, of course, supplied the greatest number of Jews to the service. New York State and city supplied more than one-third of all of those listed up to the present time, the total for the State standing now at 26,866, of which 22,210 were from New York City.

Illinois is credited with 3,459, of which 2,670 were from Chicago, and Massachusetts with 3,777, of which 830 were from Boston.

Nine hundred and twelve answered the call to the colors from San Francisco.

PROVED THEIR METTLE.

The famous 77th Division, of which Col. Whittlesey commanded a battalion, was largely Jewish. When Col. Whittlesey was surrounded by the Germans and called upon to surrender, his reply to the German courier was, "Tell 'em to go to hell." He and his men, many of whom were Jewish, fought on until they were rescued by other American forces.

Although the Infantry branch of the American Army constituted but 20.66 per cent of the entire Army, the Jews attached to the Infantry branch constituted 51.07 per cent of the total number of Jews in the service.

The Marine Corps is essentially a fighting organization. Every man who enlisted in this corps did so with the expectation that he would be sent where the fighting was the thickest. Of the 60,000 marines, 1,700, or 3 per cent, were Jewish, according to the records already listed.

FIRED BY CHATEAU-THIERRY.

Of the 1,700 Jewish Marines, fully 30 per cent enlisted immediately after June 5, 1918, the day after it was published to the world that the marines were the "shock troops" at Chateau-Thierry.

The total of all the Jewish casualties thus far listed is about 10,000. The total number of deaths is 882, or 4.01 per cent of the total in the American Expeditionary Forces.

The total wounded is 1,397, or 3.08 per cent of the total.

Of the Infantry branch the Jews had 1,060 commissioned officers and 1,678 noncommissioned officers.

In the Field Artillery they had 225 commissioned officers and 373 noncommissioned officers.

In the Infantry they had 6 colonels and lieutenant colonels, 31 majors, 174 captains, 228 first lieutenants, 369 second lieutenants, and 244 lieutenants not designated.

In the Field Artillery they had 6 colonels and lieutenant colonels, 6 majors, 29 captains, 59 first lieutenants, 80 second lieutenants, and 42 lieutenants not designated.

The record is one in which Jews may take justifiable pride.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. KNUTSON].

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the House, at the outset I wish to congratulate the Republican majority on the splendid progress it is making in passing necessary legislation. The Members on that side of the Hall are meeting the country's expectations in a most commendable manner, and while I have no disposition to inject partisan politics, I can not refrain from commenting upon the splendid manner in which the Republican majority is taking hold of and passing legislation vital to the country's welfare.

To-morrow, when the Indian bill is brought up under the five-minute rule, I am going to offer an amendment to appropriate $10,000 for the construction of a road across the Red Lake Reservation, in Minnesota, and in order to expedite the matter I deem it advisable to explain the amendment at this time.

The State of Minnesota is going to construct up to the south end of the Red Lake Reservation a State road that will conform to all Federal requirements. This road will start in again at the north end of the reservation and continue on up to the Canadian line. At the present time there are nothing but trails on the Red Lake Reservation, and the Indians and the settlers living to the north and west of Red Lake are absolutely handicapped for the want of a highway that will be passable at all seasons of the year. This bill already carries an amendment of $3,000 for the construction of a bridge across the Red Lake River, near the outlet of the lake, in connection with this proposed road.

It has been estimated by the Indian Bureau and also by the Beltrami County engineer that $10,000 will build a road that will meet all needs and at the same time put in the missing link between the two State roads above referred to.

Mr. EAGLE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KNUTSON. I will.

Mr. EAGLE. How many acres are there in this reservation, and how many Indians are there?

Mr. KNUTSON. I am not positive as to the exact size of the Red Lake Reservation, but would say offhand that it contains something like 18 townships, in which several thousand Indians have their homes, a large number of whom will derive great benefit from the proposed road, as well as give them direct communication with the agency, something they do not have at all seasons of the year at the present time. There is not a decent highway on the reservation. The Indians living northwest of the lake have asked for this road, and the Indian Bureau is satisfied with the proposed amendment.

Mr. STEPHENS of Ohio. How many miles long will it be?

Mr. KNUTSON. Some 35 or 40 miles. It is proposed to follow some gravel ridges, so the cost of building the road will not be nearly so great as it otherwise would be. We do not propose to follow any well-defined line to the north of the Red Lake. It will run diagonally with a gravel ridge that surmounts the watershed in that section. Between the ridges, where the land is somewhat low and wet, there are sections that are impassable in the spring of the year. These low places will be filled in and graded up. Under the present arrangement the so-called Cross Lake Indians use the lake in traveling between their homes and the agency. I will say for the information of the committee that there are thousands of acres of fertile agricultural land to the north of Red Lake that are lying idle at the present time for the want of communication with market. There are a large number of settlers living to the north of the Red Lake Reservation who will be greatly benefited by the proposed road, and I sincerely hope that there will be no objection to the amendment as it is offered, and I am sure there will be none if every member of this committee understands the real situation.

The amendment will provide that the work is to be done by Indians so far as practicable, and as the money to be expended for the construction of the road across the reservation will come from the tribal funds the greater share of such expenditure will remain right on the reservation, which is proper and right.

The State of Minnesota is making plans to adopt an extensive road-building program during the next three years. While we already have an excellent system of highways, I believe that when we have completed our plans our State will have one of the best and most extensive systems of highways in the entire country. Money judiciously expended on road building is money well spent, and the Indians of Minnesota are just as keen for good roads as anyone, and I know that when I ask for the adoption of this amendment I will be serving them equally with the whites.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. HOWARD].

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, I am about to undergo an experience that each of you has had in this House, and I hope that I will have your sympathy. I have been a Member of this body now for only five days and have not had opportunity to thoroughly go into the matter of this bill, nor have I had an opportunity to learn all that I might in respect to the operations of Congress. In my limited experience, however, I have learned that the old Biblical saying that the last shall be first is not entirely applicable to the membership of this House.

I want to commend both the majority members and the minority members of this committee for their industry in bringing forth and reporting this bill so shortly after the meeting of this session. I am delighted with my first few days' experience in this body, and I am more than pleased with the fact that I had an opportunity to cast my first vote in Congress for the resolution giving the mothers of our land a right to vote, and am pleased that the second one I shall be permitted to cast will be to provide appropriations for caring for the Indians of this country immediately, so that there shall be no suffering among them. I represent in this body the greatest Indian district in the United States. Combined within that population is the great Osage Nation, the richest nation of people upon the globe; the Pawnees, the Otoes, the Quapaws, Senecas, a large number of Cherokees, and a considerable population of Creeks. I commend this bill to the Congress as having been properly drawn to care for the interests of these people and as the Representative of that district I ask its immediate passage.

Mr. Chairman, Oklahoma is proud of her Indians. In the past few months, when the clouds of war were over us, no one responded more quickly or liberally to the appeals of war, the Red Cross, the Salvation Army, or to patriotism than did our Indian citizens. We think so much of the Indians of Oklahoma that we not only give them, in our constitution and through our laws, every privilege the whites enjoy but in many instances we look to them for leadership. We point with pride to the kind of leadership furnished to us through our senior Senator from Oklahoma, ROBERT L. OWEN, who is of Indian extraction. Coming to this body, we point with pride to the representation given us by our Indian Members, Mr. CARTER and Mr. HASTINGS, of Oklahoma. [Applause.] I might add, my friends, that there are thousands of other Indian citizens in Oklahoma who are just as capable of that kind of representation; but may I not add, parenthetically, that I am going to try for the next two years to persuade the people of the first Oklahoma district that, even though these Indians are so enlightened and such great leaders, they are not more competent to represent that district than am I. [Laughter and applause.]

Much has been said with reference to the removal of restrictions on Indian lands. I want to say to the Congress that the united voice of Oklahoma appeals to this body and our sister body to as soon as possible remove the restrictions from Indian lands in our great State. The Indians want them removed, and the necessities of the State of Oklahoma demand it. May I for a moment point out one of the injustices? Oklahoma has an area as large as that of the neighboring State of Kansas, and has as many trunk-line railroads. Yet, with all of our oil interests, with a population exceeding that of the State of Kansas, our assessable valuation for taxation purposes runs only $1,400,000,000, as against over $2,000,000,000 in the State of Kansas.

This condition exists because of the failure to remove these restrictions in order that we may get those Indian lands, which the Indian himself desires to alienate, into the hands of real home owners and on the tax rolls, to help keep up our schools, build our roads, and pay the expenses of our State government. For this reason, if for no other, I appeal to Congress during this session to give us as much relief as is possible along these lines.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Oklahoma has expired.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield three minutes more to the gentleman.

Mr. HOWARD. With respect to the matter of supervision of Indian affairs, which has been referred to on several occasions to-day, permit me to say that so far as I know at present the policies, to at least a considerable extent, now being pursued by the department are the same as have been in vogue in past administrations, owing, perhaps, to existing legislation, and if that be the case I would suggest that the way to remedy it is by changing our policy through legislation. For my part I am always ready to commend any department or official for a strict enforcement of law. But, Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, conditions have changed in respect to many things in the past few months. We see many questions through different eyes now, and along with many other matters we must deal with the Indian in the future in a spirit of progressiveness; remedies must be provided where they are needed. The record of the Indian in the recent great conflict, where he gave of himself great account, whether in the trench or battle field, or wherever he was called upon to render a patriotic duty, should awaken in us a new interest in him.

I urge upon you that he be given all his rights as a defender of our flag, and pray that before this Congress ends its labors that we shall have enacted legislation that will give to the Indians the exact justice, equality, and rights which the white man enjoys.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON].

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Chairman, there is now functioning in this city a joint congressional commission for the purpose of reclassifying the salaries of Government clerks. As I understand it, it will be the duty of this commission to report back to Congress conditions which exist relative to the clerks of this Government that will enable the membership of this Congress to properly reclassify and readjust salaries. I do not know whether you gentlemen have noticed the substance of the questionnaire which has been prepared by this joint congressional commission and which is to be propounded to the clerks for answer.

I have carefully looked over it, and I can not find one question in it that would bring out the particular information that some of us would like to have when we come to pass upon this question. I have noticed in the newspapers excerpts from the speeches of one member of this commission in speaking at banquets and meetings of the clerks over the city that they need have no uneasiness whatever about the position or action of that commission; that they will be cared for all right; that the action of the commission will be an action of help and advantage to them rather than a disadvantage. If they are entitled to help, and if advantage should be given to them by this Congress justly and rightly, I am with you to help them, but if some of them are presumably working seven hours a day for this Government on big salaries, and if after 5 o'clock p. m. they are working for big private individuals and big business firms and big corporations of this country on big salaries, making more a day from outside parties than from this Government, and coming back to their offices the next morning tired out and worn out and not able to do proper service for this Government, then I am in favor of properly knowing those facts and having those facts brought before this Congress when the reclassification and readjustment takes place.

I wrote to this joint congressional commission and called their attention to the fact that their questionnaire in many respects was absolutely worthless; that if the clerks themselves had drawn it they could not have drawn it more in favor of the clerks themselves than it was drawn, and I presented to the joint congressional commission a carefully prepared supplemental questionnaire that would bring out the very facts that some Members of this Congress would like to know, and I asked that the committee, in all justice to the country, in all justice to the people, the tax-burdened people of this country, that their representatives should know these facts, and I asked that this joint congressional commission should submit this supplemental questionnaire along with the other for answer. For the benefit of my colleagues I now insert in the RECORD the supplemental questionnaire prepared by me embraced in House joint resolution 5, namely:

Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 5) directing additional questionnaire for employees of the United States Government.

Resolved, etc., That the Congressional Joint Commission on Reclassification of Salaries be, and it is hereby, directed to have propounded to all Government employees, in addition to the questionnaire already prepared, the following supplemental questionnaire:

SUPPLEMENTAL QUESTIONNAIRE FOR GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES.

Name ———. Organization unit ———. Pay-roll title ———. Basic salary ———. No. ———.

QUESTIONS.

1. Outside of your position with the Government, are you employed by any person, firm, or corporation? ———. If yea: (a) Give name of such employer. ———. (b) Location where work is performed. ———. (c) Hours of work, beginning and quitting. ———. (d) Compensation paid you for same per month. ———.

2. Are you married? ———. If yea: (a) Is your spouse (wife or husband) employed by the Government in any capacity? ———. (b) If yea, then in what department? ———. (c) Amount of compensation received by such spouse per month. ———. (d) Have you any children? ———. If yea: (e) Have you any sons employed by the Government? ———. (f) If so, give names, ages, departments in which employed, compensation they each receive. ———. (g) Have you any daughters employed by the Government? ———. (h) If so, give names, ages, departments in which employed, and compensation they each receive per month. ———.

3. Is your father employed by the Government in any capacity? ———. If yea: (a) In what department? ———. (b) Hours of service? ———. (c) Amount of compensation paid him per month. ———.

4. Is your mother employed by the Government in any capacity? ———. If yea: (a) In what department? ———. (b) Hours of service? ———. (c) Amount of compensation paid her per month? ———.

5. Have you any sisters employed by the Government in any capacity? ———. If yea: (a) In what department? ———. (b) Hours of service? ———. (c) Compensation paid to each of them, giving names and addresses of each? ———.

6. Have you any brothers employed by the Government? ———. If yea: (a) Give their names and addresses? ———. (b) In what departments? ———. (c) Hours of service of each? ———. (d) Compensation paid to each? ———. (Sign your full name and address.)

——— ———.

SEC. 2. That in submitting its report to Congress said Congressional Joint Commission on Reclassification of Salaries shall report in detail:

(1) The names of all employees who are employed by any person, firm, or corporation, the name of such employer, the hours of such service, and the amount of compensation received by such employee per month for such service.

(2) The names of all employees whose spouse (wife or husband), father, mother, child, sister, or brother is in the employ of the Government, their names, department of service, hours of service, and amount of compensation per month, respectively, received by such spouse, father, mother, child, sister, or brother.

Certain members of this joint commission intimated that they could not submit the supplemental questionnaire proposed by me; that they did not have power to do it; that they did not know that they had any right to be concerned with what the clerks did after 5 o'clock, though one member of the committee kindly wrote me that he would consider my suggestions, and another member of the committee kindly called at my office and promised consideration of my suggestion, but could not give me any assurance whatever that it would be submitted. I hope that every Member present—this magnificent majority of the Republican Members on the Republican side and this magnificent majority of the Democratic membership on the Democratic side present now—I hope each Member of us will get a copy of that supplemental questionnaire, House joint resolution No. 5, and see if there is a single question I have proposed there that is not a proper one to be answered by the clerks and employees of the Government.

We have not been hard on the clerks. We have not been hard on the employees of this Government. While our boys have been fighting in France, in trenches cootie infected, knee deep in mud for $33 a month and keep, these clerks not only have drawn their usual salaries but have had granted to them, first, a $120 bonus and then a $240 bonus in their behalf. I want to say that some of them are excellent clerks, some of them are most deserving, some of them are entitled to larger salaries, some of them have an interest in the work they do, some of them have an interest in the affairs of this Government, some of them are loyal and patriotic to the core; but I am sorry to see that after they have been granted first a $120 bonus and then a $240 bonus and permitted during war to continue to work only seven hours a day, yet when the Zone Finance Office of the War Department a few weeks ago requested some clerks, in behalf of the soldier boys, to work a little overtime in order more speedily to mail out the little $60 bonus checks allowed soldiers, what did they do? Some of them walked out and struck against the Government—walked out and said, "We will no longer function because you ask us to work over seven hours a day to mail out little $60 bonus checks to the soldier boys who have lately come back from fighting in France." That is the kind of patriotism some of them exhibited, and I want to find out through this reclassification just how many of that stripe we have working for the Government here in Washington.

I hope that my good colleagues will help me. I am going to appeal to the other side of the House—we did not have to do it before, but we have to do it now—to help me get this joint resolution up, because these questionnaires are to be propounded now and to get proper action this supplemental questionnaire should be propounded along with this other questionnaire that our joint committee has prepared, and I hope that my good Republican colleagues—because the country will hold you responsible—will help me find a way to get it up and have it submitted and passed so that we may have light on this question, and let us be informed, and let us be prepared to meet it properly when it comes before this House under that congressional committee report. Gentlemen, I thank you. [Applause.]

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. DALLINGER].

Mr. DALLINGER. Mr. Chairman, for the last four years since I have been a Member of this House and have heard the annual Indian appropriation bills discussed and the general policy of dealing with the Indians considered I have come to the conclusion, as has been intimated to-day, that the reason why these Indians are not given full rights of citizenship and allowed to have the ownership and control of their own property is very largely due to opposition on the part of the Indian Bureau for the very plain reason that when the time comes that all the Indians are given full citizenship and have control of their own property the Indian Bureau and all its employees will cease to exist. Moreover, the Indian Bureau is not the only department of the Government in which a similar condition of affairs exists.

I desire to speak for just a few minutes this afternoon on a matter of very vital interest to every Member of this House and to the constituents of Members of this House, and that is the question of the return home of the soldiers who enlisted for the war. There have come to my attention a number of cases of very great hardship where a division has been returned from France and in every regiment, and sometimes in every company, one or more men, who expected to go home with the rest of their division and whose families expected them to come home, have been detailed to clerical work in some other unit and kept in France. To my mind such action on the part of the authorities is an outrageous injustice not only to the soldiers themselves but also to their families.

It will be remembered that the Twenty-sixth Division, commonly known as the New England or "Yankee" Division, went over to France at the beginning of the war. That division should have been sent home among the very first. As a matter of fact we Congressmen from New England had to work for months to get it ordered home at all. And when the division started for home some of the boys who expected to go home with their division were arbitrarily transferred to other units and are still kept in France doing clerical work for $33 per month when many of them could be earning $100 and even $200 per month here at home. These boys have filed their applications for discharge supported by the necessary affidavits, but they can get no satisfaction.

Mr. Chairman, I realize that it is a long and difficult task to bring all our boys home from France. We are limited by the number of vessels at our disposal, and all that. But I do think that the administration might show a little more expedition and not encourage or permit these cases of particular hardship to which I have referred.

Whatever the facts are in regard to the return home of the boys over there in France, there is not the slightest question about the boys over here. We have an immense Army of boys that are being kept in the service in this country at an enormous expense to the taxpayers—boys that are needed at home, boys that have dependents, boys that wish to finish their education, boys that have good positions that are being kept for them and which can not be kept for them much longer. Now, both the boys themselves and their parents who have visited the camps say that the soldiers are doing practically nothing, and that the only reason on earth why the thousands of men now in the service in this country are not discharged is because the officers want to keep their jobs. [Applause.] There are lots of reserve officers who are earning more money now than they ever earned in their lives before or will ever earn again, and, naturally, they would like to keep their positions. They are having the time of their lives, now that the war is over. Moreover, there are lots of Regular Army officers who are now enjoying the rank of colonel or major who, if the privates under their several commands are discharged, will have to go down to the rank of captain or lieutenant. And so they say that they "can not spare the boys," although in some cases all the boys are doing is to take the officers out in Government automobiles for joy rides at the Government's expense.

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, it is an outrage to unnecessarily keep hundreds of thousands of American boys in the military service who ought to be at home, at an immense expense to the taxpayers, simply to keep a lot of officers in their high-salaried positions. And the remedy is in the hand of the Committee on Military Affairs and the Committee on Appropriations of this House. When those committees commence to prepare the appropriation bills for the fiscal year commencing July 1, 1919, they should see to it that the appropriations for the payment of officers' salaries are so cut down that the boys will have to be discharged. And the bills ought to be so itemized that the administration will not have any excuse for not paying the boys their back pay.

The Members of the House will recall that yesterday there was before the House a deficiency appropriation bill, made necessary because the Bureau of War Risk Insurance had used so much of the money Congress had given it to pay a horde of unnecessary and incompetent clerks, some of whom are unpatriotic like those to whom the gentleman from Texas refers.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DALLINGER. I will.

Mr. BLANTON. I quite agree with the gentleman, but he has overlooked one other reason why these boys are held in camps. The gentleman will doubtless recall the statement of the president of the American Federation of Labor made in Texas and elsewhere. He said that he would never stand for the slightest reduction on any war-wage schedule. Thus the great president of the American Federation of Labor was against speedy demobilization. And that is one of the reasons why the boys are kept in the camps in this country.

Mr. DALLINGER. I wish to say in reply to the gentleman from Texas that if the policy of the administration had been consistent from the start there would be no necessity for overcrowding the labor market. The Members of the House were told shortly after the signing of the armistice that boys who had positions waiting for them, those who wished to complete their education, and those that had dependent families would be granted discharges. As a matter of fact, they have refused tens of thousands of boys who have met these requirements and are still doing it, and at the same time they are letting boys out of the Army who have no positions waiting for them and have no dependent families and who to-day are seeking employment. If the War Department had carried out the promises it made to this House at the time the armistice was signed, and let the boys out who had positions waiting for them, who had dependent families and had an education to complete, you would not have the feeling in this country that exists to-day against the War Department. [Applause.]

I trust, Mr. Chairman, that when the Committee on Military Affairs and the Committee on Appropriations of this House prepare the appropriation bills this month they will so prepare those bills that a speedy demobilization of the boys in the service, both abroad and at home, may at once take place, so that this discontent with the Government throughout the country may cease. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. HERNANDEZ].

Mr. HERNANDEZ. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, in New Mexico we have a total Indian population of 20,819. Of these 8,535 are what are called Pueblo Indians. These Pueblo Indians live in villages and are a farming people, a frugal, a self-supporting people. They were declared to be citizens of the United States by the Supreme Court of the United States in 1872. Nevertheless, they do not exercise the rights of citizenship and they do not pay any taxes. They do not take any part in any of the activities engaged in by other American citizens. About 10 or 15 years ago the Department of the Interior saw fit to take over these Indians; at least the department has had more or less supervision over them for 10 years. What I mean is that from time to time the Indian Office has seen fit to exercise more and more authority over these citizens of the United States than it had formerly exercised.

The Indian Office has done a good deal of good work, we must admit, in connection with the education of the Pueblo Indians. They are a people that take well, as far as education is concerned. They are receptive. They have always been a semi-civilized people, living in towns and villages.

There are 9,207 Navajo Indians in the State of New Mexico. The major portion of that tribe live in Arizona. The Navajo Indians in 1867 or 1868, or along there, made a treaty with the United States wherein it is provided that we must help them in education. At present the Government is doing a great deal for those Indians along that line. They also are a self-supporting people; they are an industrious people, but they are not citizens of the United States.

I want to address myself, Mr. Chairman, particularly to one Indian tribe in New Mexico which at present needs particular care and attention. That is a small Indian tribe, the Jicarilla Apaches, that live in the northwestern part of New Mexico, in the county in which I live; in other words, they are my neighbors. At the present time and under the bill now being discussed all the activities in connection with the administration of their reservation are now being conducted out of the Indian funds, so that they are of no expense to the Government. However, they are in great distress.

This is the situation: About 80 per cent of that small tribe of Indians are suffering from what is called tuberculosis.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New Mexico has expired.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I will yield to the gentleman five minutes more, if he would like to have it.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise temporarily. If the gentleman from New Mexico desires to make a request, all right.

Mr. HERNANDEZ. I want to revise and extend my remarks.

Mr. HAYDEN. I shall be glad to yield to the gentleman five minutes more if he desires it.

Mr. HERNANDEZ. I simply want to make a short statement in regard to this particular tribe of Indians.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise temporarily.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York moves that the committee do now rise. The question is on agreeing to that motion.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee has determined to rise.

Thereupon the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. LONGWORTH, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 2480, the Indian appropriation bill, and had come to no resolution thereon.

MILEAGE.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill H. R. 1200.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa asks for the immediate consideration of the bill H. R. 1200, which the Clerk will report.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman from Iowa if this is the usual resolution in regard to mileage?

Mr. GOOD. It is the usual measure in regard to mileage.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Is this the usual bill about mileage?

Mr. GOOD. Yes; it is the usual bill in regard to mileage, and also in regard to the pages, except that this resolution calls for 44 pages instead of 46, and three telephone operators are additional, because they were not provided for out of the contingent fund of the House. Otherwise, it is the same as former resolutions at extra sessions of Congress.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield to me for a question?

Mr. GOOD. Yes.

Mr. MADDEN. What is the special hurry about passing a bill for mileage? Can it not go over until to-morrow? Is everybody broke, or what is the trouble?

Mr. GOOD. It is customary to bring such a bill up early in the session.

Mr. MADDEN. It seems to me like undue haste in passing a mileage bill.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOOD. Yes.

Mr. GARNER. Why does not the committee pass an appropriation bill appropriating for mileage at this session of Congress, instead of making available the mileage already appropriated for the next session, so as not to bring up that question again later on?

Mr. GOOD. I am simply following the usual precedent.

Mr. GARNER. I know; but if we pass an appropriation bill for the mileage for this session, it will obviate a fight that might come on some 12 months from now.

Mr. GOOD. Well, perhaps it would bring the fight on at this time.

Mr. GARNER. No. The same argument would probably not be used now which could be used then. If this session runs into the next session, the regular session, a part of the membership of the House will want mileage for the next session and a part of them will not, but the House will want an appropriation. If you appropriated for the mileage of this session at this session, there would be no question as to it at the other session. I have not had the opportunity to take the matter up with the gentleman from Iowa, but I have mentioned it to several gentlemen here, and they have said that they thought the method I have suggested would be the better method to pursue.

Mr. GOOD. I will say to the gentleman that we did not consider that at all, but that we were following the usual precedents.

Mr. GARNER. I think the gentleman can see the difficulty that would be overcome if we made the appropriation for mileage at this time, because nobody would question the fact that mileage is due at this session, although at the next session they may take the position which has sometimes heretofore been taken, that there was in fact but one session. If the gentleman would take that matter into his consideration, it might obviate a fight later on.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The bill is on the Union Calendar.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa moves that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. The question is on agreeing to that motion.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the following sums are appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, namely:

LEGISLATIVE.

The appropriations for mileage of Senators, Members of the House of Representatives, and Delegates from the Territories, and expenses of Resident Commissioners, made in the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation act for the fiscal year 1920, are made immediately available and authorized to be paid to Senators, Members of the House of Representatives, Delegates from the Territories, and Resident Commissioners, for attendance on the first session of the Sixty-sixth Congress.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

For stationery for Members and Delegates and Resident Commissioners, at $125 each, for the first session of the Sixty-sixth Congress, $55,000.

For the following employees during the first session of the Sixty-sixth Congress, namely:

For 44 pages, including 2 riding pages, 2 telephone pages, 1 press gallery page, and 10 pages for duty at the entrances to the Hall of the House, at $2.50 per day each; 9 messengers in the post office at the rate of $100 per month each; 3 telephone operators at the rate of $75 per month each; so much as may be necessary.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

Mr. GARRETT. I want to ask the gentleman a question concerning the messengers in the post office. As I understand it, they have been drawing no pay since the adjournment. Does this take care of them?

Mr. GOOD. No; this only takes care of the 44 pages, including 2 riding pages, and the 3 telephone operators who were formerly paid out of the contingent fund of the House but who are now carried in the legislative bill instead of the contingent fund.

Mr. GARRETT. Has the matter of these messengers been brought to the attention of the committee?

Mr. GOOD. No; it has not.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was accordingly read the third time and passed.

On motion of Mr. GOOD, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

INDIAN APPROPRIATIONS.

On motion of Mr. SNYDER, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the Indian appropriation bill (H. R. 2480), with Mr. LONGWORTH in the chair.

Mr. HAYDEN. I yield five minutes additional to the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. HERNANDEZ].

Mr. Chairman, at the time I was interrupted I was calling attention to the condition of the Jicarilla Apache Indians, in the northwestern part of the State of New Mexico. The problem of better health for these Indians is very urgent at this time, and something must be done about it. The tribal diminution on account of the prevalence of tuberculosis amongst these people is appalling. About 80 per cent of them are to-day suffering more or less from tuberculosis, and unless we do something for them now it will not be many years before there will be no tribe there for whom the Congress of the United States can do anything.

Twenty years ago, when I was trading with the Jicarilla Apaches, there were 800 of them—men, women, and children. I believe the last census showed only 600, and I have a report here from the agent in which he says that something must be done at once. He says the agency school is a regular hotbed of tuberculosis; that sick children come in to attend school and spread this disease among the other children, and they in turn take it back to their homes. My idea and his idea is that the school should be abolished and that larger hospital facilities should be furnished for the tribe, in order to begin to stop that trouble. The Jicarilla Apache Indians are selling a good deal of their timber at the present time. There are ample funds to the credit of the tribe in the Treasury of the United States to-day to take care of the situation. It was my intention to offer an amendment to the bill now under consideration, but the committee at their first meeting said that in order to expedite this legislation it would be well to offer amendments either on the floor of the House or else let them be offered in the Senate. I have acquiesced in this desire of the committee, and I am going to make an effort to have the bill amended in the Senate by one of the Senators from my State.

One of the troubles in dealing with the Indians is that sometimes people who do not know very much about them are put in the management of the Indians. Not all of those who are employed by the Indian Bureau are practical men who see the practical side of things. The Jicarilla Apaches, with 750,000 acres of land, with a tribal flock of 8,000 or 10,000 head of sheep, and with a herd of over 1,000 head of cattle, have not enough food or clothing to keep them in good health. There is something wrong about that. My idea is that this fund should be so used and that these flocks should be so distributed amongst the members of the tribe that they would take care of them instead of having them taken care of by outside people. This particular section of the country is particularly adapted to the raising of sheep. The tribal flock in the last eight years shows a profit of $143,000 over and above all expenses.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I quote from a letter written to me by the present superintendent of that Indian agency, a very efficient and capable official. He says:

There should be no misunderstanding of the tasks that lie ahead of us in this field. Our purpose is to stay the appalling death rate, inspire them with new hope, encourage them in outdoor activities, and endeavor to place them in a vocation from which they not only may gain a living, but from which they may become worthy assets to the State and Nation rather than liabilities. Self-preservation is not only the desire but the inherent right of any people. Ill health, privation, and long-continued neglect for the Jicarillas has engendered a state of despondency and pessimism that has clouded their ambition, and consequently the duty confronting us is the more apparent and difficult.

In March, 1912, a contract was made for the sale of 130,000,000 feet of timber from the allotted portion of the reservation, and to date there is a total net receipt of approximately $178,500 from that sale in seven years of the nine-year life of the contract. This sum is small in comparison with funds available and being used for other tribes, but it is certain that this amount is sufficient, if properly invested, to place these people on a new level, and recent legislation has made this money available for expenditure as indicated. It is extreme hardship to longer hold up the use of this money, thus subjecting them to continued privation and probably an earlier death, whereas early and appropriate use of our means at hand would do much for their present and future benefit.

The problem of better health for the Jicarillas is one necessitating most careful study as well as untiring energy on the part of all who may be interested. Tuberculosis is found in practically every home, and general conditions prevailing favor the spread of this disease. It is said that 80 per cent of the children of school age indicate tuberculosis in one form and another. A review of the deaths of the last two years is significant and is given in summary, as follows:

Period covered June 30, 1917, to Mar. 31, 1919.

	June 30, 1917, to June 30, 1918,		Approximate per cent.	June 30, 1918, to Mar. 31, 1919.		Tuberculosis, or indicated—
	Population, 1918 census.	Deaths.		Births.	Deaths
Births	18	10	55	32	15	In 24, or 96 per cent.
1 to 5 years	75	9	12	.....	6	In 15, or 100 per cent.
6 to 18 years	171	3	2	.....	7	In 9, or 90 per cent.
19 to 36 years	152	8	5	.....	11	In 17, or 84 per cent.
37 to 50 years	90	.....	.....	.....	.....
51 to 93 years	117	11	9	.....	9	In 5, or 25 per cent.

Tribal diminution at that appalling rate is such that one is compelled to see the necessity for early action that may tend to stay it. The boarding school as it now operates is of doubtful value, and it is certainly adding to the spread of tuberculosis. If 75 to 80 per cent of all school children are tubercular you will appreciate the exposure made by the stronger children when they are made to eat, sleep, work, and play with three times their number, from whom they can at any time contract the insidious disease. It has been proposed to convert the present boarding school into a sanatorium, and to do this effectively additional moneys must be appropriated or made available for this change. An estimate for $7,500 for repairs and improvements such as sleeping porches, a better system of ventilation for the dormitories, etc., and $30,000 for support and maintenance would be conservative to meet our needs. If the sum of $37,500 could be added to the total proposed for relief of distress, etc., in the current appropriation bill for the Indian Service for 1920, and made specifically for Jicarillas, this work could be done to the credit of the service and for the betterment of the Indian people on this reservation.

In 1915 a herd of cattle was purchased for the Jicarilla Tribe, with history as follows:

	Cost.	Value.
Original cost	$65,010.00
Equipment, of equal value now	2,164.31	$2,164.31
Supplies, maintenance, etc	11,275.34
Miscellaneous items	2,664.77
Salaries from beginning to date	12,179.48
Construction, house, barn, fence, corrals, etc	10,867.48	10,867.48
Receipts from herd to date		19,726.00
Present valuation of herd (estimated)		80,000.00
Total	104,161.38	102,757.79

A number of factors have opposed satisfactory results from the tribal cattle herd. Shortage of water on the range has been the greatest drawback, and predatory animals have taken a large toll, so large that it is hardly believable save to those who are actually cognizant of this territory. It is believed that with the utilization of the La Jara farm area and proper development of water on the range used by the herd, a better showing may be made. The short calf crops from year to year show the work of the wolves, bobcats, and coyotes; short range and water have likewise factored to reduce the calf showing from year to year. The herd this fall should show to the good, including 1919 calves. In October, 1914, a herd of sheep was also purchased from reimbursement moneys and gives the following results:

	Cost.	Value.
Original cost of herd	$23,477.50
Total expense to date, labor, maintenance, etc	38,150.00
Total receipts from herd to Mar. 31, 1919		$104,315.40
Present valuation of herd		100,000.00
Total	61,627.50	204,315.40
Balance in favor of the herd		142,687.50

Thus in four and one-half years the tribal herd of sheep have given a return almost the equal of that received from the sale of timber, and it must be understood that when the timber is once removed it will be generations to come before like returns may be expected, while with the sheep return is promised commensurate with effort put forth in their proper management.

Probably one-third of the families of the reservation have sheep or goats, or both, ranging in numbers from a few head to 1,500 and 2,000. Last fall Edd Ladd dipped 2,160 head; Garfield Velarde dipped 1,500; George Stockwell Vicenti had 1,700; Hoska Velarde, 800; Ignacio De Jesus, 570; Grande Maria, 230; and a number of others a fewer number.

You will appreciate the fact that the sheep industry for these people is not a new field. Their acquaintance with flocks of goats and sheep owned by the individual Indians and experience gained in connection with the many Mexican flockmasters, than whom there are none better, should not be overlooked in our proposed plans to establish these people in a vocation from which they are to make their living. To place 100 head of sheep with each family would give them a start commensurate with present needs, and while it is not said that each and all of them will make good, it is certain that a creditable majority will do well, and that would be as much as could be expected from any people. It is also true that those who failed could find support and employment from their more fortunate tribesmen, and after more experience there would be hope that they, too, could meet with better results in time.

The health problem would receive its best advancement from a vocation that would call these people to outdoor effort, and you will understand that a small flock of sheep would demand and have the attention of each and every member of the family from the 3-year-old up to and including both father and mother.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield to myself the remainder of the time on this side.

There assembled in the city of St. Louis on May 8, 9, and 10, 1919, delegates from all of the States in the Union representing the veterans of the Great War, who there organized what is known as the American Legion. Prominent in that organization were Col. Theodore Roosevelt and Col. Bennett Clark, well known to the membership of this House. [Applause.] The high and patriotic purpose of the American Legion is best expressed by the preamble to the constitution adopted at St. Louis, which I desire to read. It is as follows:

PREAMBLE.

For God and country we associate ourselves together for the following purposes:

To uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States of America; to maintain law and order; to foster and perpetuate a 100 per cent Americanism; to preserve the memories and incidents of our association in the Great War; to inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community, State, and Nation; to combat the autocracy of both the classes and the masses; to make right the master of might; to promote peace and good will on earth; to safeguard and transmit to posterity the principles of justice, freedom, and democracy; to consecrate and sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness.

At that meeting a number of resolutions were unanimously adopted, most of them addressed to the Congress of the United States. For the information of the House I desire that these resolutions be printed in the RECORD, and I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks for that purpose.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD as indicated. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The resolutions are as follows:

INDORSEMENT OF THE VICTORY LIBERTY LOAN.

Whereas the Government of the United States has appealed to the country for financial support in order to provide the funds for expenditures made necessary in the prosecution of the war and to reestablish the country upon a peace basis: Therefore be it

Resolved, That this caucus emphatically indorse the Victory Liberty loan, and urges all Americans to promote the success of the loan in every manner possible.

CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTORS.

Resolved, That this caucus go on record as condemning the action of those responsible for protecting the men who refused full military service to the United States in accordance with the act of Congress of May 18, 1917, and who were tried by general court-martial, sentenced to prison, and later fully pardoned, restored to duty, and honorably discharged, with all back pay and allowances given them, and as condemning further the I. W. W.'s, international socialists, and anarchists in their effort to secure the release of these men already pardoned, those still in prison serving sentence; be it further

Resolved, That this caucus demands a full and complete investigation by Congress of the trial and conviction of these parties and of their subsequent pardon.

DEPORTATION OF ALIEN SLACKERS AND ALIEN ENEMIES.

Whereas there was a law passed by the Congress of these United States July, 1918, known as an amendment to the selective-service act giving persons within the draft age who had taken out first papers for American citizenship the privilege of turning in said first papers to their local exemption board and thereby becoming exempt from service; and

Whereas thousands of men within draft age who had been in this country for many years and had signified their intention to become citizens, took advantage of this law and thereby became exempted from military service, or were discharged from military service by reason thereof, and have taken lucrative positions in the mills, shipyards, and factories; and

Whereas in this great World War for democracy the rank and file of the best of our American manhood have suffered and sacrificed themselves in order to uphold the principles upon which this country was founded and for which they were willing to give up their life's blood, if necessary, to preserve; and

Whereas we, the American Legion assembled, are of the opinion that these would-be Americans who turned in their first papers to avoid service are, in our opinion, neither fish, flesh, nor fowl, and if allowed to remain in this country would contaminate the 100 per cent true American soldiers and sailors who will return to again engage in the gainful pursuits of life: Therefore be it

Resolved, That we, the American Legion in convention assembled in St. Louis this 8th, 9th, and 10th day of May, 1919, numbering millions of red-blooded Americans, do demand the Congress of these United States to immediately enact a law to send these aliens who withdrew their first papers and thereby avoided service back to the country from whence they came, for we want them not, neither do we need them. The country which we live in and were ready, and are now ready and willing to fight for, is good enough for us, and this country which they live in and prospered in, yet were unwilling to fight for, is too damned good for them to remain in.

Resolved, That every alien brought into the Army by the draft who refused American citizenship when offered to him also be deported.

Resolved, That we further demand the immediate deportation of every alien enemy who during the war was interned, whether such alien enemy be now interned or has been paroled.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to each and every Member of the House and Senate of our United States and a copy be given to the public press.

PROTECTION OF THE UNIFORM.

Whereas it is recognized that the uniform of the United States is as much a symbol as the flag itself and thereby entitled to fitting respect; and

Whereas certain unscrupulous firms and individuals have taken nefarious advantage of popular sentiment by utilizing men in uniform as peddlers and sales agents; and

Whereas certain discharged men have so far forgotten the respect due the uniform that they have used it in peddling and panhandling on the streets and from door to door; Therefore be it

Resolved, That this caucus go on record as being unalterably opposed to such practices; and be it further

Resolved, That each State and local organization here represented be urged to do all in their power to put an end to this misuse of the uniform which has always been worn with honor and for honorable purposes.

RECLAMATION OF ARID, SWAMP, AND CUT-OVER TIMBER LANDS.

Whereas the reclamation of arid, swamp, and cut-over timber lands is one of the great constructive problems of immediate interest to this Nation; and

Whereas one of the questions for immediate consideration is that of presenting to discharged soldiers and sailors an opportunity to establish homes and create for themselves a place in the field of constructive effort; and

Whereas one of the purposes for which the formation of the American Legion is contemplated is to take an energetic interest in all constructive measures designed to promote the happiness and contentment of the people, and to actively encourage all proper movements of general nature to assist the men of the Army and Navy in solving the problems of wholesome existence; and

Whereas the Department of the Interior and the Reclamation Service have been engaged in formulating and presenting to the country broad, constructive plans for the reclamation of arid, swamp, and cut-over timber lands: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the caucus of delegates of the proposed American Legion in caucus assembled in this city of St. Louis, Mo., That we indorse the efforts heretofore made for the reclamation of lands, and we respectfully urge upon the Congress of the United States the adoption at an early date of broad and comprehensive legislation for economic reclamation of lands susceptible to reclamation and improvement.

REEMPLOYMENT OF EX-SERVICE MEN.

Whereas it is desirable both for the welfare of the soldiers, sailors, and marines, now rapidly being discharged from the service of the United States of America, and for the industrial readjustment of the country that the process of returning these men to productive occupations in civil life be speeded up as much as possible; and

Whereas by reason of the failure of the Congress of the United States to appropriate funds for the purpose the said process has been retarded and left to private initiative: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Legion, in caucus assembled, calls upon the Congress of the United States to promptly appropriate funds, to be administered for the benefit of existing coordinated bureaus for the employment of returning soldiers, sailors, and marines, to the end that there may be no interruption in the service now being rendered and that it may be broadened and speeded up; be it further

Resolved, That each local post or organization of the American Legion is urged during the period of demobilization to constitute itself a committee of the whole, which shall cooperate with the local employment bureau and shall establish and maintain a liaison between such bureau and every employer in the community through members of the local post or organization who are already employed in such establishment, to the end that it may be made easy for the employer to avail himself of the service of the bureau by communicating with some one in his own establishment, and that every soldier, sailor, and marine already replaced in industry may have an opportunity to assist his comrades to become likewise.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time—14 minutes—to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FESS].

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, from the outset of this Congress all the membership on both sides of the aisle are convinced, I am sure, that there is going to be rational expedition in legislation. Yesterday, because of a speeding up of legislation, there was heard from the Hall utterances that would indicate that the necessity of speed now is due to lack of speed in the last Congress, and we have heard from the Democratic side of the Chamber that the filibuster prevented the needed legislation. I do not think that any Member on either side of the aisle will say that there was any lack of effort in this Chamber. I do know that the membership is well aware that when there was talk about what ought to be done in deliberate consideration of the measures, recognizing that these large supply bills would inevitably take a good deal of time, and that any interference in the passage of the bills could very easily prevent their passage, the Republican Members consulted and served notice on the Democratic Members of the Rules Committee that if they would keep the calendar clear of unnecessary controverted issues and confine the legislation to that which was either emergent or of a supply bill character, the Republicans would join the Democrats and clear the deck, even to the extent of holding night sessions if necessary to pass the bills. I think that it is fair to say that that agreement was pretty well observed, and the measures went through with due speed and I think with rational deliberation.

The statements that have fallen from the lips of Members yesterday and to-day that what was necessary was due to a filibuster will leave the country under the belief that the filibuster was conducted somewhere and that the Republicans were responsible for it.

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman yield right there?

Mr. FESS. I will yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. MADDEN. I wish to call the attention of the gentleman from Ohio and the House, too, that most of the bills that failed of passage in the Senate had not been reported from the Senate committees and could not have been given consideration by the Senate if there had been no filibuster.

Mr. FESS. That is precisely why I have taken the floor, to explain that if there was any filibuster it was not a political filibuster and must have been due to a plan or the indifference of the Democratic committees in the Senate in not reporting the bills for action.

Mr. STEVENSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FESS. I will yield to the gentleman.

Mr. STEVENSON. Is it not a fact that a large number of them, including the very bill we are passing now, had been passed, gone to conference, and the conference committee agreed to report, and that they were in that position when the filibuster prevented even the adoption of the conference report, and therefore it was not, as indicated by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN], the failure of the committees to report, but the filibuster by certain Members, who conducted it in their own individual way?

Mr. MADDEN. If the gentleman from Ohio will permit me to reply in his time——

Mr. FESS. I will yield.

Mr. MADDEN. I wish to say that the Senate committees were in control of the Democratic Party in the Senate; that they did not report the bills to the Senate. The bills were not before the Senate for consideration and could not be considered, because they were not there, and it made no difference whether there was any filibuster or not.

Mr. CARTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FESS. Let me answer the gentleman from South Carolina that these bills were not sent to conference. This is the only bill, the one we are now considering, that was sent to conference, and therefore that idea would be misleading. Now I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. CARTER. Let me ask the gentleman if it is not a fact that the bill passed the House and went to the Senate and had been agreed to in conference and the conferees had reported; that it had been agreed to in the House and was before the Senate.

Mr. FESS. This is the only bill of those which failed that went to conference and had been reported for action and failed for want of time to accept the conference report. This is the only appropriation bill that filled the legislative situation stated by the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. STEVENSON. The gentleman will remember the water-power bill.

Mr. FESS. The water-power bill was not an appropriation bill. There are seven supply bills that will be before us which failed. This is the only one that had gone to conference and was rejected; that is, the conference report was not accepted. Therefore it comes to us at this time.

The naval bill, which carries $750,000,000, went to the Senate on February 27. That was only a week before the adjournment of Congress. The Agricultural bill went to the Senate February 3. The urgent deficiency bill that was before us yesterday got to the Senate on February 28, and the Senate committee reported it March 1.

Mr. HASTINGS. They passed it over there yesterday after we passed it yesterday.

Mr. FESS. Yes; but it is a Republican Senate now and not Democratic. [Laughter.]

Mr. HASTINGS. I thought the gentleman was intimating that they did not have time to pass it, that it required more time. They had it four or five days.

Mr. FESS. The District of Columbia bill got to the Senate December 12 and it was reported from the Senate committee February 5. They had some time on that. But if you will note, most of these bills did not reach the Senate until late, and nobody will claim that this branch of the Congress was especially dilatory. It was working by agreement, whether it was very generally known or not. There was no effort here to obstruct anything.

The Indian appropriation bill has been referred to. The military affairs bill reached the Senate February 19, and that bill was reported from the committee of the Senate back to the Senate on February 25. February 25 leaves only one week in which to pass a bill maintaining an Army of 500,000 men, and carrying an appropriation of one and a half billion dollars. It got to the Senate in time to be reported back to that body, leaving but one week in which to consider a billion and a half appropriation bill.

The sundry civil appropriation bill was not speedily passed in this House. Everybody here knows that there was a general opinion that that bill carried so many items that it could not possibly pass the other body because of the accumulated work, and it is generally known and nobody will question it that it was discussed for some time by members of the committee whether or not to report that bill at this session at all in this House.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FESS. Yes.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Does not the gentleman from Ohio know that the House passed all these supply bills two days earlier in the short session than the average time of getting them through in a short session?

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, the former Speaker of the House always deals in specific facts. I respect his reputation in that respect too much to answer either yes or no, without knowing myself, except to say that I know that he would not make a misstatement.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. I had the information looked up. Does not the gentleman know enough about the practices of the Senate to know that if they took a notion over there they would pass all seven of these bills in one day? [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. FESS. Whatever be the practice with the Senate, consideration of these bills in extenso is given in this House. If the Senate has such respect for the judgment of the House as to pass them all in one day, very well, but I should think they would want to take more time than one day in which to discuss them. The sundry civil appropriation bill never was considered by the Senate committee. There was not even a meeting called by the Senate committee, and it is the Democratic members of the Senate committee who are responsible for this, and no man here has the right to even hint that Republicans were responsible for the failure of measures when the Democratic committees did not report them back to the Senate.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FESS. Yes.

Mr. KITCHIN. I want to say that the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] is right when he said that the appropriation bills were passed in this House as early last session as they have been in former short sessions. I want to say, further, that Senator MARTIN, chairman of the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, told me in the presence of a Republican Senator that they had time in which to pass every single one of the appropriation bills that came from this House, because his committee had begun to study these bills as soon as we introduced them here; that they were ready to pass every one of them, and could pass them, but for the filibuster carried on by three Republicans. [Applause on the Democratic side.] While that filibuster was going on I discussed the matter with one of the leading Republican Senators, and he expressed regret that this filibuster was being made to prevent the passage of the appropriation bills.

Mr. FESS. I can not allow my friend, even with my great respect for him, to take all of my time.

Mr. KITCHIN. I put the facts into the RECORD, because the gentleman did not know them, and I knew that he wanted to know them.

Mr. FESS. The gentleman who interrupts me is past master in bluff, but he can not bluff me now.

Mr. KITCHIN. The gentleman does not think telling the truth is bluffing him, does he? [Laughter.]

Mr. FESS. No.

Mr. KITCHIN. The facts in the case ought not to embarrass the gentleman.

Mr. FESS. I refuse to yield to the gentleman and his bluff. The gentleman assumes that the Senate committee begins the consideration of a bill as quickly as it is introduced in the House. When he does that I refuse to yield to him. I further ask, if they did begin consideration as quickly as the bill was introduced here, why he assumes that the filibuster in the Senate prevented speedy action by the Senate?

Mr. KITCHIN. I do not assume it. I know it to be a fact.

Mr. FESS. Filibuster on the floor of the Senate does not prevent a Senate committee from considering a bill.

Mr. KITCHIN. Everyone in the House and Senate knows it except, apparently, the gentleman himself.

Mr. FESS. The gentleman has not the floor. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KITCHIN] had the privilege of the floor as a leader for so long that he assumes that he can break the rules of the House and interrupt another gentleman and interject into his remarks certain things without getting that gentleman's consent. To so persistently interrupt is disrespectful to the Member who has the floor, and is not such a characteristic as belongs to my friend.

Mr. KITCHIN. Can I interrupt the gentleman long enough to say that I beg his pardon? [Laughter.]

Mr. FESS. Oh, begging my pardon does not yield back the time that the gentleman has taken from me. I make a further statement, Mr. Chairman. The Senate was strongly organized by the Democratic Party, with a majority of 14; every committee in the Senate was in control of the Democratic Party. Seven of these great appropriation bills reached the Senate in the latter part of the session, and because three Members of the Senate who happened to be of one political party, who did not conduct a political filibuster but who acted from a purely individual responsibility, will the gentleman presume to state to this side of the House that the bills, seven of them, failed because of the Republican minority in the Senate or the House?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. FESS. The fault lies with the Democratic majority, and there is where it must stay. [Applause on the Republican side.]

By unanimous consent, leave was granted to extend their remarks in the RECORD to Mr. CARTER, Mr. KNUTSON, Mr. BLANTON, Mr. SNYDER, and Mr. MCKEOWN.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. LONGWORTH, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee, having had under consideration the bill H. R. 2480, the Indian appropriation bill, had come to no resolution thereon.

SWEARING IN OF A MEMBER.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Arkansas, Mr. CARAWAY, is present and desires to be sworn in.

Mr. CARAWAY appeared at the bar of the House and took the oath of office.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for leave of absence for five days for our colleague, CHARLES THOMPSON of Ohio, on account of serious illness in his family. He was called away to-day.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

Mr. RAMSEY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bill of the following title, when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 2329. An act making appropriations to supply urgent deficiencies in appropriations for the Bureau of War Risk Insurance and for the payment of pensions for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

Mr. DAVEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the files of the House the papers in the case of Harter Holderman (H. R. 12485, 65th Cong., 2d sess.), no adverse report having been made thereon.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state to the gentleman that such requests can be expedited by filling out a blank at the desk. Such memorandum will be sufficient. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 20 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until Saturday, May 24, 1919, at 12 o'clock noon.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

SATURDAY, May 24, 1919.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

God our Father, whose spirit permeates all space with rays divine, bring us, we beseech Thee, en rapport with Thee, that our acts may be in consonance with Thy purposes, and thus may we hallow Thy name in thought, word, and deed, and be able at the close of this day to ask Thy blessing upon our work. In the spirit of the Master. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

INDIAN APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the Indian appropriation bill.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 2480, the Indian appropriation bill, with Mr. LONGWORTH in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the bill by title.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 2480) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920.

The CHAIRMAN. General debate is exhausted, and the Clerk will proceed with the reading of the bill for amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

SURVEYING AND ALLOTTING INDIAN RESERVATIONS (REIMBURSABLE).

For the survey, resurvey, classification, and allotment of lands in severalty under the provisions of the act of February 8, 1887 (24 Stat. L., p. 388), entitled "An act to provide for the allotment of lands in severalty to Indians," and under any other act or acts providing for the survey or allotment of Indian lands, $10,000, to be repaid proportionally out of any Indian moneys held in trust or otherwise by the United States and available by law for such reimbursable purposes: Provided, That no part of said sum shall be used for the survey, resurvey, classification, or allotment of any land in severalty on the public domain to any Indian, whether of the Navajo or other tribes, within the State of New Mexico and the State of Arizona, who was not residing upon the public domain prior to June 30, 1914.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word in order to direct the chairman's attention to the fact that in line 13 there is a word that evidently is misspelled.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will correct it.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

For the relief and care of destitute Indians not otherwise provided for, and for the prevention and treatment of tuberculosis, trachoma, smallpox, and other contagious and infectious diseases, including transportation of patients to and from hospitals and sanatoria, $385,000, of which $10,000 shall be used to care for old and indigent Indians in western Washington, and of which sum $25 000 shall be immediately available: Provided, That not to exceed $45,000 of said amount may be expended in the construction and equipment of new hospitals at a unit cost of not exceeding $15,000: Provided further, That this appropriation may be used also for general medical and surgical treatment of Indians, including the maintenance and operation of general hospitals, where no other funds are applicable or available for that purpose: Provided further, That out of the appropriation herein authorized there shall be available for the maintenance of the sanatoria and hospitals hereinafter named, and for incidental and all other expenses for their proper conduct and management, including pay of employees, repairs, equipment, and improvements, not to exceed the following amounts: Blackfeet Hospital, Montana, $12,500; Carson Hospital, Nevada, $10,000; Cheyenne and Arapahoe Hospital, Oklahoma, $10,000; Choctaw and Chickasaw Hospital, Oklahoma, $35,000; Fort Lapwai Sanatorium, Idaho, $40,000; Laguna Sanatorium, New Mexico, $17,000; Mescalero Hospital, New Mexico, $10,000; Navajo Sanatorium, Arizona, $10,000; Pima Hospital, Arizona, $10,000; Phoenix Sanatorium, Arizona, $40,000; Spokane Hospital, Washington, $10,000; Sac and Fox Sanatorium, Iowa, $25,000; Turtle Mountain Hospital, North Dakota, $10,000; Winnebago Hospital, Nebraska, $15,000; Crow Creek Hospital, South Dakota, $10,000; Hoopa Valley Hospital, California, $10,000; Jicarilla Hospital, New Mexico, $10,000; Truxton Canyon camp hospital, Arizona, $10,000; Indian Oasis Hospital, Arizona, $10,000.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Arizona offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HAYDEN: Page 6, line 16, strike out "$385,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$375,000."

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I offer this amendment to correct what is clearly a clerical error in the bill. The bill as it passed the House allowed $375,000. It was amended in the Senate and the amount was increased to $385,000. The conferees did not agree to it and the Senate receded. It shows in the report that the amount should be $375,000, and therefore I move the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

SUPPORT OF INDIAN SCHOOLS.

For support of Indian day and industrial schools not otherwise provided for, for other educational and industrial purposes in connection therewith, $1,750,000, of which sum not to exceed $25,000 shall be immediately available: Provided, That not to exceed $40,000 of this amount may be used for the support and education of deaf and dumb or blind Indian children: Provided further, That not more $200,000 of the amount herein appropriated may be expended for the tuition of Indian children enrolled in the public schools: And provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be used for the support of Indian day and industrial schools where specific appropriation is made.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word, in order to ask, in view of the fact that the present fiscal year is nearly ended, why the necessity for making $25,000 of this appropriation immediately available. They have been able to proceed without these funds up to this time. Why not let this go on?

Mr. SNYDER. When the bill was considered nearly four months ago, we were informed at that time by the commissioner that the funds would not last through. I think this is the only place in the bill where we have permitted any funds to become immediately available. On account of influenza and other emergency matters, they asked that next year much of the fund should be immediately available. But in all other sections of the bill we have made it a rule to cut out the "immediately available" proposition.

Mr. WALSH. That was the condition four months ago?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. But does the gentleman think that we should make $25,000 of this specific appropriation available for the remainder of the current fiscal year?

Mr. SNYDER. I think we should at this time.

Mr. WALSH. It seems to me that even if they require any funds or their appropriation is not sufficient that they might well get along without dipping into the next year's appropriation.

Mr. SNYDER. It has been the rule under this section to do that very thing, to make a certain amount of funds immediately available each year, and we kept the item down as small as it is advisable to do.

Mr. WALSH. Well, I will withdraw the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment is withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk proceeded to read the next item.

Mr. WATSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word in order to——

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, is it not the rule to finish a paragraph before making an amendment?

Mr. WATSON of Pennsylvania. I thought it was finished.

Mr. SNYDER. They are reading a new paragraph.

Mr. WATSON of Pennsylvania. I wanted to ask a question under support of Indian schools.

Mr. SNYDER. Let the Clerk finish the reading of the paragraph first.

The Clerk read as follows:

For construction, lease, purchase, repair, and improvement of school and agency buildings, including the purchase of necessary lands and the installation, repair, and improvement of heating, lighting, power, and sewerage and water systems in connection therewith, $335,000: Provided, That this appropriation shall be available for the payment of salaries and expenses of persons employed in the supervision of construction or repair work of bridges and on school and agency buildings in the Indian Service: Provided further, That the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to allow employees in the Indian Service, who are furnished quarters, necessary heat and light for such quarters without charge, such heat and light to be paid for out of the fund chargeable with the cost of heating and lighting other buildings at the same place: And provided further, That the amount so expended for agency purposes shall not be included in the maximum amounts for compensation of employees prescribed by section 1, act of August 24, 1912.

Mr. WATSON of Pennsylvania. It was the other paragraph that I wished to inquire about.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. GARD. Pending that, I wanted to ask the chairman of the committee if the result of the committee of conference on this bill in the last session determined the amount on page 8, line 16, to be $335,000 or $350,000?

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I have the figures right here. The bill as it passed the House carried $350,000. It was reduced in conference to $335,000.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, I have been authorized by the Republican members of the Committee on Ways and Means to state to the House——

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, I think the gentleman is proceeding out of order. I would be glad to have him ask unanimous consent to proceed out of order if he wants to.

Mr. FORDNEY. Then I ask unanimous consent to proceed out of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan asks permission to proceed out of order. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HULL of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I desire to call the attention of the House to the fact that there now sits in the gallery a young man who has been recognized by all the commanding generals of the Army as having accomplished the greatest individual feat of the recent World War, Sergt. Alvin C. York, of Company G, Three hundred and twenty-eighth Regiment, Eighty-second Division. [Applause.]

The Clerk read as follows:

PER CAPITA COST.

That hereafter, except for pay of superintendents and for transportation of goods and supplies and transportation of pupils, not more than $225 shall be expended from appropriations made in this act, or any other act, for the annual support and education of any one pupil in any Indian school, unless the attendance in any school shall be less than 200 pupils, in which case the Secretary of the Interior may authorize a per capita expenditure of not to exceed $250: Provided, That the total amount appropriated for the support of such school shall not be exceeded: Provided further, That the number of pupils in any school entitled to the per capita allowance hereby provided for shall be based upon average attendance, determined by dividing the total daily attendance by the number of days the school is in session: Provided further, That all moneys appropriated for school purposes among the Indians for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919, may be expended, without restriction as to per capita expenditure, for the annual support and education of any one pupil in any school.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the paragraph. I should like to ask the necessity for increasing the amount for the maintenance of each pupil $25 above current law?

Mr. SNYDER. That was done for two reasons. First, because of the great increase in the cost of supplies, and so forth, necessary for the maintenance of the pupils; secondly, because heretofore the amount was based upon the enrollment and not upon the attendance. The gentleman will note that this amount is to be computed upon the average attendance and does not apply to the number enrolled. It was thought necessary to increase the amount for the maintenance of each pupil a certain per cent, due to the great increase in the cost of maintenance.

Mr. WALSH. You have changed the method of ascertaining the per capita allowance, so that now it is provided that it shall be based upon the average attendance, obtained by dividing the total daily attendance by the number of days the school is in session. Do all these schools begin their terms and terminate them at the same date?

Mr. SNYDER. They all begin them at practically the same date, but they do not all terminate at the same date, due to the fact that occasionally they run out of funds and have to stop before the regular closing date.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I desire to reserve a point of order upon the second proviso, on page 10, where they change the method of determining the per capita allowance.

Mr. CARTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALSH. I reserve the point of order until I get a little more information.

Mr. HAYDEN. I can give the gentleman this much information: The method which has been finally adopted of dividing the average attendance by the total number of days the school is in session is the method followed by practically every State in the Union in apportioning State school funds. It is obviously unfair to divide the attendance by 365 days when the school is in operation only eight or nine months. It was for that reason that this change was made. Taking the total number of days the school is actually in session as the divisor by which to get the average attendance is fair to all schools; but to divide the attendance by 365, the total number of days in a year, was not only unfair but unworkable; therefore the committee made this change.

Mr. WALSH. This method has been followed for a great many years.

Mr. HAYDEN. No; as a matter of fact it has not. The truth of the matter is that this limitation was placed upon the apportionment of Indian funds some years ago. It was tried then and found to be unworkable, and in every Indian appropriation bill thereafter until two years ago that limitation was removed by a special provision in the bill. Last year the same difficulty occurred and they are now trying to make the law workable by dividing by the number of days of attendance in school rather than by 365. I believe this new method will prove to be much more satisfactory.

Mr. WALSH. Was this provision in the law two years ago and three years ago?

Mr. HAYDEN. No; there was a provision in the Indian appropriation bills running back for a number of years, saying that for that particular fiscal year the limitation with respect to the apportionment of Indian funds should not apply. In other words, a general limitation was enacted some years ago which was found to be unworkable, and each year that limitation was lifted.

Mr. CARTER. If the gentleman will permit me for a minute, I will state that a great many years ago a limitation was placed on expenditures for schools, outside of the superintendents' salaries and the transportation of goods, of $167 per capita. About 10 years ago it was found that that amount would not suffice for the education of these pupils for a 10 months' school; so at that time a provision was placed in the bill exempting the amount appropriated in that bill from that provision. That was carried along until two years ago, at which time the exemption was stricken out by the House, reinstated in the Senate, and then stricken out in conference. It was found that the schools were going to be unable to operate, and so the Indian Committee was called together, and we recommended that this maximum be increased to $200 per capita. That was adopted by Congress and has been followed since until an increase was authorized last year. The Indian Bureau has insisted at all times that in applying the $200 per capita the average enrollment should be taken rather than the average attendance, which was not a true statement of the case at all. For instance, a child would be enrolled and attend school for a few days and then would not be at school again for the session, and yet they might be permitted to expend $200 for the entire year for such attendance.

Mr. WALSH. The result is the less the Indian goes to school the more the per capita costs.

Mr. CARTER. No; it is just the opposite under this provision.

Mr. WALSH. The law calls for a per capita of $200 or $225, and now you are increasing it.

Mr. CARTER. The general law provides for a per capita of $167. Heretofore we have carried the exemption in the bill, as I have stated, and finally we raised it for the current year to $200; but that was based on enrollment. This bases it on the actual attendance, so that if a child goes to school only so many days he is only paid for so many days. Under the old method of enrollment, if he left school he might be charged for the entire term, his name not being stricken off and the pay being drawn and distributed among the other pupils.

Mr. WALSH. Two hundred and twenty-five dollars and $250 is merely a limitation.

Mr. CARTER. Yes.

Mr. SNYDER. If the gentleman will notice the hearings on page 38, he will find the following:

Mr. HASTINGS. Where would you get the money to run the school under this last proviso—that is, to make this legislation applicable to this year—if we haven't already made a sufficient appropriation?

Mr. MERITT. The schools this year will get the benefit of the change in the word "attendance" to "enrollment," and they can figure their expenses on the basis of enrollment rather than on attendance.

We had a long and careful investigation made of that, and they fought vigorously to have the bill made up based on enrollment and not on attendance, and that was why we made the bill as it is.

Mr. WALSH. Who was it that fought vigorously?

Mr. SNYDER. The Indian Bureau.

Mr. CARTER. It is based on attendance, so that there might not be any camouflage about it.

Mr. SNYDER. There was no niggardness about it on the part of the committee; the committee fixed in the bill an amount which will take care abundantly of every pupil that attends the school.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, still further reserving the point of order, I would like to ask what is the necessity for permitting the current appropriation to be expended without restriction, as provided in the last proviso of the section?

Mr. SNYDER. That was due to the same thing that I spoke about before. The influenza came on and used up the fund beyond what they expected, and this was to give a little leeway in the matter for the balance of this year.

Mr. WALSH. Well, Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the reservation of a point of order.

Mr. GARD. Mr. Chairman, still further reserving the point of order, I desire to make an inquiry of the chairman of the committee. How many Indian schools are there where the attendance is more than 200?

Mr. SNYDER. I think there are 10.

Mr. GARD. How many Indian schools are there altogether?

Mr. SNYDER. Outside of the reservation schools, there are 29.

Mr. CARTER. I think the chairman might explain the difference between reservation and nonreservation schools.

Mr. SNYDER. Twenty-nine are strictly boarding schools appropriated for gratuitously and separately. The item in the bill calls for $1,750,000 for separate maintenance of the schools.

Mr. GARD. I am in favor of the education of the Indians, and I was wondering why it would not be wise to make a maximum allowance for all of them.

Mr. SNYDER. I was asked yesterday to give the amount in the bill appropriated for the purposes of schools. Of the $5,200,000 in the bill, $4,370,000 is used wholly for educational purposes for the Indian schools. A very large amount of money appropriated is not reimbursable in this bill for the education of the Indian children.

The CHAIRMAN. The reservation of a point of order is withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

That section 2138 of the Revised Statutes of the United States is hereby amended so as to read as follows: "That where restricted Indians are in possession or control of live stock purchased for or issued to them by the Government, or the increase therefrom, such stock shall not be sold, transferred, mortgaged, or otherwise disposed of, except with the consent in writing of the superintendent or other officer in charge of the tribe to which the owner or possessor of the live stock belongs, and all transactions in violation of this provision shall be void. All such live stock so purchased or issued and the increase therefrom belonging to restricted Indians and grazed in the Indian country shall be branded with the I D or reservation brand of the jurisdiction to which the owners of such stock belong, and shall not be removed from the Indian country except with the consent in writing of the superintendent or other officer in charge of the tribe to which the owner or possessor of such live stock belongs, or by order of the Secretary of War, in connection with the movement of troops. Every person who violates the provisions of this section by selling or otherwise disposing of such stock, purchasing, or otherwise acquiring an interest therein, or by removing such stock from the Indian country, shall be fined not less than $500 nor more than $1,000, or imprisoned not less than six months or more than one year, or both such fine and imprisonment."

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 18, line 8, change the figures "$500" to "$50"; same page, line 9, strike out the words "six months" and substitute therefor "30 days," so that the section will read:

"Every person who violates the provisions of this section by selling or otherwise disposing of such stock, purchasing, or otherwise acquiring an interest therein, or by removing such stock from the Indian country, shall be fined not less than $50 nor more than $1,000, or imprisoned not less than 30 days or more than one year, or both such fine and imprisonment."

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I will say for the benefit of the committee that this matter pertains to the sale of stock which is provided for restricted Indians by the Government. As the law exists to-day the restricted Indians can do business among themselves, but they can not sell stock to a white man.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. HASTINGS. I want to invite the attention of the chairman to the word "or," in line 9, on page 18, after the words "one year," and suggest that that ought to be "nor," just as it is in line 8.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I accept that suggestion, and ask that the amendment be so modified.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment will be modified as suggested.

There was no objection.

Mr. SNYDER. It was thought by the committee after careful consideration of this question this morning, with nearly the whole committee present, that the minimum penalty was too great an amount for an ignorant restricted Indian. There is no limitation upon the court. He may make it as much as he pleases, but we believe that in justice to the Indian the minimum amount of the penalty should be reduced as set forth in the amendment.

Mr. GARD. Mr. Chairman, this whole paragraph, beginning on page 17, line 11, is subject to a point of order as being new legislation, is it not?

Mr. SNYDER. It is not new legislation as I understand it. This amendment is an extension of the law.

Mr. GARD. I was not intending to make the point of order, but was merely inquiring whether it is new legislation.

Mr. CARTER. It changes existing law, but the point of order would not lie now, because debate has been had upon it.

Mr. GARD. What is the existing law?

Mr. CARTER. The existing law provides that the Indian, as I think the gentleman in charge of the bill stated, may sell his property to another Indian but may not sell it to a white man. That is to say, they may trade this property, which is given to them by the Government, to either a restricted or a nonrestricted Indian. A nonrestricted Indian may sell his property to anyone, so there has grown up a custom on the reservation whereby a white man would get an unrestricted Indian to buy the property of a restricted Indian and then in turn sell that property to a white man. This proposes to take care of that situation.

Mr. SNYDER. This makes them all amenable to the law.

Mr. REAVIS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. REAVIS. Some of the transactions that would make an Indian amenable to this provision of the statute are trifling in character.

Mr. SNYDER. Very trifling, indeed.

Mr. REAVIS. Does not the gentleman believe that even the minimum established by the amendment in some instances would be too high?

Mr. SNYDER. In some instances.

Mr. REAVIS. Why not amend this so as to leave the maximum and provide that he shall be fined not more than $1,000, leaving it to the discretion of the court?

Mr. SNYDER. That suggestion would be agreeable to me.

Mr. CARTER. I think that would be perfectly satisfactory.

Mr. REAVIS. Shall I offer such an amendment?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. HASTINGS. And why not also cut down the term of imprisonment?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Nebraska will state his amendment.

Mr. REAVIS. On page 18, line 8, strike out the words "not less than $500" and insert in lieu thereof "in any sum," so that it will read "shall be fined in any sum not more than $1,000."

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Chairman, before the chairman of the committee accepts that amendment let me make a suggestion to him. I have tried a great many of these cases in the Indian country, and I do not believe the amendment will accomplish what the gentleman thinks it will.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will suggest that the Clerk first report the amendment.

Mr. FERRIS. Very well.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. REAVIS: Page 18, line 8, strike out the words "not less than $500 nor" and insert in lieu thereof the words "in any sum not."

Mr. REAVIS. Mr. Chairman, I have not yet completed the amendment. I would like to add to that, if the Clerk will take it down as a part of the amendment, in line 9, to strike out the words "less than six months or" and in line 8 insert between the words "imprisoned" and "not," at the end of the line, the word "for," so that it will read "or imprisoned for not more than one year."

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will call the attention of the gentleman from Nebraska to the fact that that is not properly an amendment to the committee amendment, but it is more in the nature of a substitute.

Mr. REAVIS. Very well; I offer it as a substitute.

Mr. ELSTON. Mr. Chairman, may we have the substitute reported?

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The Clerk read as follows:

Substitute offered by Mr. REAVIS: Page 18, line 8, strike out the words "not less than $500 nor" and insert in lieu thereof "in any sum not," and on page 18, line 8, after the word "imprisoned," insert the word "for," and on line 9 strike out the words "less than six months or," so that as amended the line will read "shall be fined in any sum not more than $1,000, or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both such fine and imprisonment."

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, I suggest to the gentleman from Nebraska a sentence of one year would be pretty severe, and I think we might change that and make it six months.

Mr. REAVIS. Well, inasmuch as the discretion is permitted to the trial court to fix the penalty, and only the maximum is placed in the law, the fact that we make it one year does not make it at all obligatory upon the court to fix that as the penalty.

Mr. CARTER. Except the court might take that as indicating what the punishment might be, as courts sometimes do.

Mr. FERRIS. That is the usual working of it.

Mr. CARTER. I think it ought to be really reduced. I think——

Mr. REAVIS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to change my substitute so as to insert the words "six months" in lieu of the words "one year."

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Nebraska asks unanimous consent to modify his substitute as suggested. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The question is on the amendment offered in the nature of a substitute to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment in the nature of a substitute was agreed to.

The amendment as amended by the substitute was agreed to.

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 18, line 10, after the word "imprisonment," insert:
"Provided, That the penalty and prohibition herein provided for shall not apply to personal property purchased from the personal funds of individual allottees."

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Chairman, now I do not know what view the committee may take of it, but I want to call the attention of the committee to the actual practice of this Indian personal property. Here is an Indian who has trust funds in the Treasury of the United States, or rather in the hands of the superintendent. That individual Indian makes application to his agent to buy a team or a binder or mower or a rake or a plow or something of that kind for his use in connection with his allotment. He makes application to his superintendent for a quota of his own funds, not the Government's funds, to buy some piece of personal property that he needs and desires, from his own personal funds, money he has inherited or that has been assembled from the sale of his land or something of that sort. In such case I do not think he ought to be put under punishment if he drives his team or his cow, purchased in this way, 10 miles off the reservation, and I do not think we ought to fine him or put him under punishment even if he sells or encumbers property that he has purchased or has had purchased for him with his own money. I think the statute has been wrong all the time, and I believe it is wrong now, and I really think the committee should confine this penal code to personal property purchased from Government gratuity appropriation, to which I have no objection. There are numerous instances of gratuity appropriations for Indians for the purchase of cattle or horses, which are branded on the left shoulder "I D," which means the Interior Department. The Indian should not be permitted to mortgage or hypothecate property which the Government has given him, but I think he should have the right to handle his own personal property derived from funds from his own individual account.

Mr. McKEOWN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FERRIS. I will.

Mr. McKEOWN. Will not trouble arise in determining what is his personal fund?

Mr. FERRIS. I do not think there is any trouble about that. They can brand the property purchased from gratuity funds and let alone the property purchased from their own funds.

Mr. McKEOWN. The gentleman knows there is many an Indian who will go and dispose of personal property as soon as he can get it; that he will go to the agent and get him to buy property in order to get the money; that he will take it immediately and sell it and put the money in his pocket.

Mr. FERRIS. The answer to that is nine times out of ten when he goes to get the money from the agent he does not get it. The agent has discretion. He may grant or refuse any request. The agent is absolute. He can say yes or no, and there is no appeal. He can grant or deny, and no one can question. He has the widest powers. They have been buying too many Liberty bonds, too many of them serving in the Army, to reenact such statutes as this relative to their personal property.

Mr. ELSTON. That is the question I was going to ask. Are gratuities paid in money to the Indian before he makes the purchase?

Mr. FERRIS. Oh, no; as a rule, not. They buy his property for him. They supply discretion and everything else for him.

Mr. ELSTON. Then there is no confusion in the matter of the mingling the two kinds of money in his own possession. It is a mere matter of purchase from one or the other, according to the way he wishes——

Mr. FERRIS. But if the gentleman will pardon me, they do not let him make the purchase. Suppose he says to the Indian agent that he wishes $300 to buy a wagon or $300 to buy a team of horses. The agent sends his farmer to see if they are worth the money or not.

Mr. ELSTON. One further question. I notice the gentleman referred in his amendment to personal property. The section seems to refer to live stock only.

Mr. FERRIS. That is personal property.

Mr. ELSTON. The implication seems to be raised by the amendment that the section refers to any kind of personal property. He might use the phrase "such personal property" or use the term "live stock."

Mr. FERRIS. I am perfectly willing to make it live stock. I drew up the amendment very hurriedly. I did not wish to enlarge it. I merely intended to modify this penal code so that it would not apply to personal property purchased from their own funds.

Mr. REAVIS. I have looked at the section carefully, and it seems to me the only property the misuse of which would come within the purview of this section is that property issued to him by the Government or purchased for him by the Government.

Mr. FERRIS. They do it with his own money. Say here is a family of five, and one Indian dies and the other four inherit the money. They do not give them the money, but they put it in the hands of the agent, and the superintendent holds it and doles it out to them at $5, $10, or $15 at a time, as they are able to get it from him. Say the Indian comes and makes application to the agent and says that he wants to buy a pair of horses with which to farm or buy a pair of mules, which, we will say, cost $350. The agent will send his farmer to see if that team of horses or team of mules is worth the $350, and if so they will let him buy it.

This section as it stands would penalize the Indian who had purchased under Government supervision a team if he drove it off the reservation or ever sold it on a mortgage. I can not think this is right. I can not think it ought to be. The committee ought to change it.

Mr. REAVIS. Is it the gentleman's contention that the stock purchased for them by the Government is sought to be purchased for them by the Indians' own money?

Mr. FERRIS. Not always; and I am trying to separate the two cases. This bill is full of gratuity appropriations. I do not mean to say full of too many of them. And necessarily so. Some Indian tribes do not have anything and Congress has to give them the money out of this gratuity. If such money from that gratuity appropriation is needed to buy stock, I am glad to have them brand it "I D" on the shoulder, and I am glad to have the statute apply, so that they can not sell it or drive it off the reservation.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Oklahoma has expired.

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent for two minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. FERRIS. But for stock bought with their own money, for which they did not pay more than it was actually worth, and for which they have the approval of the Interior Department, I do not believe we ought to pass such statutes as this.

Mr. SNYDER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FERRIS. I will.

Mr. SNYDER. I am in full sympathy with the suggestion, but I believe it will complicate matters and make it necessary perhaps to employ a few more inspectors and a few more people to sort all the herds and find out those that have the "I D" branded on them and those that do not. I feel that the Indian who receives his own money from tribal funds ought to have the right to purchase what he sees fit to purchase and to sell it. Here is the complication. This section is proposed to cover the sale of live stock that is handed to the Indian as a gratuity for his use and which he has no right to sell.

Mr. FERRIS. They do not stop there.

Mr. SNYDER. I understand they do not.

Mr. FERRIS. They go and brand the property as Interior Department property, even though they use the money of the Indian to buy and pay for it.

Mr. SNYDER. I believe we have gone far enough in limiting this section when we have reduced the minimum fine. It ought to be determined by a court. I think at this time we ought to let it go.

Mr. FERRIS. I do not want to be contentious about it. I think if the gentleman from New York lived on an Indian reservation, as I do, where the Indian superintendent is several counties away, and they have to spend half the value of a horse to see if the agent will let them buy horses, trade horses, or sell horses, he would think that it is more than we ought to impose on them.

Mr. SNYDER. The gentleman will find all through these hearings that the department maintains that they have not sufficient superintendents and assistants to do the work they have to do now. If we vote on them the additional burden of separating the property, they will ask for more assistance. I do not think we ought to do it.

Mr. FERRIS. I do not think it will do that.

Mr. SNYDER. I believe it would.

Mr. GARD. Will the gentleman yield? Is not the language of this section as proposed by the committee intended to cover only such live stock as is given to the Indians and not purchased by his money?

Mr. SNYDER. It is intended to cover exactly the things the present law covers, and no more and no less.

Mr. CARTER. It covers any property that may be purchased by the Indian with the Federal funds or his own funds. The gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. McKEOWN] made a pertinent suggestion about this matter, and which I had not thought of until he suggested it. He says if this privilege is given the Indian, he will forego the idea of getting money from the Indian Bureau, but that he will get the Indian Bureau to buy property from his funds. Then he will sell that property for less than it is worth in order to get money. Since that might teach such Indians something about trading and values, it might not be such a bad proposition after all but for one thing, and that is it might result in having done the very thing the gentleman is now trying to prevent, to wit, it might be it would go to such an extent that the Indian Bureau would decline or refuse to buy property for the Indian with his own funds, because it would be claimed the Indian would dispose of the property as soon as it got into his hands. Therefore I think the amendment ought to be given more consideration than we are able to give it here on the floor of the House, and I hope the committee amendment as amended will be adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will read.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

I would like to get from the committee this: The gentleman from New York [Mr. SNYDER], the chairman of the committee, wisely suggested, if I understood him correctly, that this is solely on the Government purchases for the Indian. Now, the words "restricted Indians" refer to those who have not been given the right to dispose of their property as they see fit. So it includes those for whom the Government has bought property with the Government money, as well as the Indians for whom the Government has bought property with their own money?

Mr. CARTER. That is it.

Mr. RAKER. It takes the two classes?

Mr. CARTER. It includes both.

Mr. RAKER. And the position of the gentleman from Oklahoma now is that where the property is purchased for the Indian with Government funds there ought not to be any transfer without the consent of the department?

Mr. FERRIS. Yes.

Mr. RAKER. But, on the other hand, where the Indian is given his own money, he ought to be able to dispose of it?

Mr. FERRIS. That is it.

Mr. CARTER. Yes.

Mr. RAKER. That makes the distinction between the two?

Mr. CARTER. Yes; that makes the distinction; and my only objection to it is that it will eventually result in the department refusing to buy property for an Indian because the Indian will be likely to sell it in order to get the money instead of going to the bureau to get money.

Mr. FERRIS. Well, if the Government has my money, will it neither buy anything for me nor allow me to get it myself?

Mr. CARTER. That goes to the proposition of whether or not the Government has the right or ought to restrict an Indian that it considers incompetent.

Mr. FERRIS. The gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. CARTER] knows more about Indians than I do, but let me say one word about it. The chairman and I think a good deal alike on these questions relating to Indians, but the chairman thought it would result in producing more administration. I think instead it would make less administration, because if I own and operate a thing myself the bureau will not have to follow me up and run me down to see what I have done with it. It would dispense with much of the administration. I wish I could think it best to treat these Indians like mere children, but I can not adopt that view.

Mr. CARTER. But if an Indian persists, as he naturally will when he can not get more than five or ten dollars at a time and has to spend almost as much money in getting that much as it is worth in going to and from the agency, he will not want to get it in that way.

Mr. FERRIS. Is that right? Can that be conducive to the Indian's good or best welfare?

Mr. CARTER. No; but in the very nature of things the Indian will ask to have property purchased for him from his own funds, and if that property is purchased the Indian will not go back to the agency for money. He will sell that property if he needs money, because it will be less difficult that way for him to get the money he needs. The result of that will be that the Indian Bureau will close down on him and will not even buy for him the property that he may need.

Mr. FERRIS. But the discretion is always in the superintendent as to whether or not he will buy anything for him, whether he will let him have the first or second team, or in fact anything.

Mr. CARTER. Yes. We want to liberalize the administration to the Indians as far as possible, and particularly the matter of purchasing teams and cattle and team equipment for the Indians. Now, the thing that I fear is that the gentleman's amendment, while at first glance it may look good, will in practice discourage that policy that we are trying to promote, namely, to liberalize the purchase of goods that the Indian actually needs to maintain his own existence.

Mr. FERRIS. I think you will have a hard time to make the Indian think you are liberalizing his trading opportunities when you put him in jail if he uses his own money to buy a team or some other necessity. The committee in charge, of course, do not desire the bill amended, but they ought to consider it another year.

Mr. CARTER. But suppose that Charlie Carter, a restricted Indian, has the department purchase a team for him, and the department gives him the right to sell it; and suppose that Charlie Carter sells the team and squanders the money. Then will the Indian Bureau, when Scott Ferris and other restricted Indians come in, buy a team for him and them after the experience it has had with Charlie Carter?

Mr. FERRIS. If the Indian Bureau will not buy a team for an Indian who needs it and who has the money to pay for it, then it ought to be made to do it. If the verdict of the Indians who call on me are any criterion to go by, I undertake to say that they do not always perform their duty adequately in buying teams for Indians. There are many Indians who feel they do not get their affairs handled properly. Some of their objections may not be well taken, but they have some rights. They ought not to be treated too lightly either here or by the department.

Mr. CARTER. That is exactly the point I make.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. FERRIS].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

Mr. WATSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word in order to ask the chairman of the committee why, on page 7, line 25, the verbiage should not be changed.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. WATSON of Pennsylvania. I suggest that you strike out the second "for" that you use there and insert instead of it the word "and," so that it will read "and other educational and industrial purposes." It does not weaken the sentence. It is all on the same subject, and it seems to me that the construction there would be more euphonious.

Mr. SNYDER. I see no objection to that.

Mr. WATSON of Pennsylvania. I notice also on page 11 on line 25——

Mr. SNYDER. Will the gentleman please state again what he had to say as to page 7?

Mr. WATSON of Pennsylvania. I notice on page 7, on line 25, that there are two "fors" together. I suggest that you strike out the second "for" and insert the word "and," so that the line will read "and other educational and industrial purposes." It all relates to the same subject.

Mr. HASTINGS. I see no objection to it. The gentleman can ask unanimous consent to recur to that page and make that correction.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania ask unanimous consent to return to page 7?

Mr. WATSON of Pennsylvania. Yes; I ask unanimous consent to return to page 7.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent to return to page 7 for the purpose of offering an amendment. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. WATSON of Pennsylvania. I offer an amendment that the second "for" on line 25 be stricken out and the word "and" be inserted in its place.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. WATSON of Pennsylvania offers an amendment: Page 7, line 25, after the word "for" where it occurs the first time, strike out the second "for" and insert in lieu thereof the word "and."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

ARIZONA AND NEW MEXICO.

SEC. 2. For support and civilization of Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, including pay of employees, $330,000.

For support and education of 150 Indian pupils at the Indian school at Fort Mojave, Ariz., and for pay of superintendent, $35,050; for general repairs and improvements, $3,800; in all, $38,850.

Mr. GARD. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. GARD. I do so for the purpose of inquiring as to section 2, what provision under the appropriation of $300,000 is made for the support and civilization and the pay of employees. In other words, how much is the pay of employees?

Mr. HAYDEN. In the hearings, on page 116, the gentleman will find the appropriation itemized completely. The analysis shows as follows:

Analysis of expenditures:

Salaries, wages, etc	$147,810.00
Traveling expenses	6,924.29
Transportation of supplies	12,846.01
Telegraph and telephone service	577.03
Printing, binding, advertising, etc	41.80
Subsistence supplies	25,015.87
Dry goods, clothing, etc	1,298.27
Forage	9,964.28
Fuel, lubricants, power and light service	15,182.02
Medical, educational, stationery, etc	8,354.55
Live stock	1,712.00
Equipment and miscellaneous material	52,066.55
Sheep dip	6,709.67
Seed	1,013.44
Rent of buildings	114.70
Irrigating water	925.45
Miscellaneous	1,517.72
Outstanding liabilities	19,934.21
Total	312,007.86

Mr. GARD. How much actually came down for the support and civilization of these Indians?

Mr. HAYDEN. The whole amount is for that purpose. That is, this covers the pay of Indian superintendents, teachers, farmers, and all other employees in the Indian Service. It is not the design of the Indian Service in Arizona and New Mexico to issue rations except to old and helpless Indians. They are instructed in agriculture, they are given educational advantages in the schools, and thereby are advanced in civilization. The term "support" is carried all through this bill, but it is a survival from former times, when rations and clothing were commonly issued to the Indians. That is not the custom any more; in the Southwest, at least.

Mr. GARD. "Civilization" is likewise an expression which the gentleman might term a relic, is it not?

Mr. HAYDEN. It seems to me that if an Indian child is taken from the reservation when he does not know how to speak English, is placed in school, taught to speak our tongue, and instructed in our ways of life, he certainly is advanced in civilization. I think the term is correctly used here.

Mr. REAVIS. Where is the Fort Mojave school?

Mr. HAYDEN. The Fort Mojave school is in western Arizona, near the Colorado River.

Mr. REAVIS. Near Yuma?

Mr. HAYDEN. No; it is above Needles.

Mr. REAVIS. In the northwestern part?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes; in Mojave County.

Mr. TILSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes.

Mr. TILSON. I should like to ask the gentleman what is the necessity for these increases in practically all of these items connected with Arizona? It is "Arizona and New Mexico" in the title, but the items are mostly for Arizona in the text. I should like to ask what is the reason for these increases.

Mr. HAYDEN. The increases in the schools in the Indian Service are uniform throughout the bill, beginning, as we do, with schools in Arizona, because Arizona comes first on the alphabetical list of States. The gentleman from Connecticut will find that by reason of the increased cost of living, the cost of supplies and clothing and other necessary materials for the support of Indian children in these schools, it has been necessary to uniformly increase the amount for the maintenance of these schools all over the United States. The number of pupils in the school is multiplied by the per capita sum that has been determined upon for the use of that school, and that fixes the amount. The same rule is applied in Arizona as it is in Kansas, the Dakotas, and everywhere else.

Mr. TILSON. Is that the reason for the very large total of the present bill above the current law?

Mr. HAYDEN. That is the exact reason for the increase in the school appropriations.

Mr. TILSON. An increase in the grand total of $4,000,000 over the current law?

Mr. SNYDER. The reason for that is that the tribal funds were not included in the total in the bill presented a few months ago. The gentlemen will note that for this year the tribal funds are added to the grand total of the bill, so that the committee may know the total amount of funds disbursed under the bill under the four items—treaties, reimbursable, gratuities, and tribal funds.

Mr. TILSON. So that instead of being an increase of $4,000,000 it is an increase of $500,000.

Mr. SNYDER. Just about that.

Mr. HAYDEN. And of that increase of $500,000 the greater part is necessary for the proper maintenance of the Indian schools.

Mr. FAIRFIELD. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GARD] suggested that there was a distinction between the funds used for the support and civilization of the Indians and the funds used for the administrative work. I presume the gentleman had some idea of the distinction, and I confess I am interested to find out what was in his mind with regard to that. That is, What are the processes of civilization of the Indians? Is administrative work a part of that process? I should be very glad to have the gentleman enlighten us as to that.

Mr. GARD. I confess I do not know. That is the reason I made my inquiry of the gentleman in charge of the Indian appropriation bill. I should be very glad to have them advise us officially, since they can do it much better than I can.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. The gentleman from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN] has had a good deal of experience, or at least he has much definite knowledge about the Indian situation, and I should like to ask him if these schools that are mentioned throughout the bill are in the nature of public schools attended by all children, old and young?

Mr. HAYDEN. All Indian children?

Mr. FESS. I mean all Indian children.

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes. The Indian school system is based, first, upon the day schools on the reservations, which are similar to the common schools for white children in country districts, where the children attend school during certain hours in the day and then return to their homes. Then on the various reservations and off the reservations have been established Indian boarding schools, where, as the children become a little older, they may be taken away from their parents and sent to boarding school, given an education, and then returned to the reservation.

Mr. FESS. That answers my question. What proportion of the Indian children throughout the States have the advantage of educational facilities?

Mr. HAYDEN. It varies greatly in different parts of the United States.

Mr. FESS. Are any of them deprived of educational facilities?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes. For instance, the Navajo Indians in Arizona and New Mexico, a tribe comprising about 23,000 Indians, have very limited school facilities so far. There was a provision in the treaty with these Indians that the United States should provide them with school facilities, but nothing was done until seven years ago, when Congress began appropriations to carry out that old treaty, and schools are being established that Indian children may attend, but the work has not yet been completed.

Mr. FESS. There are schools where Indian children attend with children of the Caucasian race, are there not?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes; there is an appropriation in this bill relating to the State of Oklahoma where money is appropriated by the Federal Government for schools attended by both white and Indian children. As a matter of fact, an Indian child makes greater progress where he goes to school with white children than he does in an Indian school. They play together on the playgrounds, and he learns much faster than he otherwise would.

Mr. FESS. There is no limitation on the kind of instruction given Indian children; they have the same instruction as the white children?

Mr. HAYDEN. The only limitation is the amount of money that Congress appropriates for the schools for the Indian children.

Mr. FESS. I thank the gentleman. Now, one question more. In the boarding schools, what is the course of study? How thorough is it?

Mr. HAYDEN. If the gentleman is interested in that subject, he might ask the Commissioner of Indian Affairs to furnish him a document, which is about the size of these hearings, giving the complete course of instruction, a very elaborate plan worked out, I believe, in connection with the Bureau of Education in the Interior Department.

Mr. FESS. One more question, purely for information. Have we many instances where Indians have gone out of these schools into professional life in which they have made great achievements?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes; a number of Indians residing in the East have been successful as physicians, some as lawyers, some of them in journalism and other professions. They all obtained their primary instruction in the Indian schools. We had before us last year a delegation of Indians from Minnesota, two of whom were graduates of the University of Minnesota. One was the district attorney of his county at the time.

Mr. FESS. Do you have vocational education as a part of the instruction?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes; the course of instruction which I mentioned a moment ago lays great stress on vocational education.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. There have been so many inquiries in regard to this particular item that I think it would be well to put in the RECORD the reasons for the appropriation as outlined on page 117 of the hearings. It reads as follows:

This item, as the title indicates, is for the general support and civilization of the Indians of Arizona and New Mexico, which have a combined Indian population of 65,685, and is in the same amount as allowed for 1919. The affairs of these Indians are looked after by 20 superintendencies, which share in this appropriation. The following table shows the Indian population by superintendencies and the land area of each, which totals 23,343,035 acres:

Superintendency.	Area.	Population.
	Acres.
Camp Verde	298	435
Colorado River	240,699	1,184
Fort Apache	1,681,920	2,456
Havasupai	518	171
Jicarilla	761,112	621
Kaibab	138,240	102
Mescalero	474,240	630
Moqui	2,472,320	4,225
Pima	381,653	6,253
Pueblo Day	873,832	8,896
Salt River	71,691	1,277
San Carlos	1,834,240	2,623
San Xavier	155,954	5,237
Truxton Canyon	730,940	450
Zuni	215,040	1,815
Leupp	13,310,338	1,441
Navajo		12,080
Pueblo Bonito		2,724
San Juan		6,500
Western Navajo		6,565
Total	23,343,035	65,685

The Indians who benefit by this appropriation are scattered throughout the two States, either living on reservations established for their use and occupancy or on the public domain. The chief industry of the Indians of these States is that of stock raising, though a large number are engaged in agriculture where their land is adapted for such purposes. The efforts of the Government at this time are being directed to the work of making these Indians successful stockmen and farmers. The greatest needs of the Indians consist of the improvement of their stock by the introduction of high-bred rams, bulls, and stallions, the purchase of modern farming implements, and instruction and supervision in both industries by men qualified along these lines. There is also need of further fencing to be done to prevent trespassing by outside stock and to protect the grazing and farming lands of the Indians.

Of the amount expended for salaries of employees during 1918, approximately $26,000 was paid to Indians in various positions which they were capable of filling in connection with their industries, and $33,660 for the pay of physicians and nurses, whose efforts are devoted to improving the physical condition of these Indians and lessening or stamping out various diseases which they are subject to. The remainder of the amount expended for salaries was used in the employment of farmers, stockmen, carpenters, blacksmiths, wheelwrights, sawyers, millers, and other tradesmen in performing work and instructing the Indians in their industries, and the pay of clerical employees who are necessary to the conduct of the several agencies.

You will find further in the hearings specifically every one of the activities that this appropriation covers itemized so that it can be run down to the smallest item.

Mr. FAIRFIELD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. FAIRFIELD. What proportion of the Indians are domiciled in tribal relations; that is, do they live as separate families or do they live in the aggregate in tribal relations?

Mr. SNYDER. I will have to ask the gentleman from Arizona to answer the gentleman.

Mr. HAYDEN. All of the Indians who receive the benefit of these Arizona and New Mexico appropriations are living in tribal relations.

Mr. FAIRFIELD. In villages?

Mr. HAYDEN. Not necessarily. The Navajo Indians are nomadic, traveling from place to place, whereas the agricultural Indians are congregated in settlements.

The CHAIRMAN. The pro forma amendment is withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For continuing the construction of the pumping plant for irrigation purposes on the Colorado River Indian Reservation, Ariz., by the installation of a settling basin, $11,000, and for continuing the construction of the necessary canals and laterals for the utilization of water in connection with said pumping plant, as provided in the act of April 4, 1910 (36 Stat. L., p. 273), $82,000, and for maintaining and operating the pumping plant, canals, and structures, $41,000, reimbursable as provided in said act; and for continuing the purpose of securing an appropriation of water for the irrigation of approximately 150,000 acres of land on said reservation by the conduct of surveys and the preparation of plans and estimates for a complete irrigation system to supply water to said land, $54,000, reimbursable from funds in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the Indians of said reservation arising from the proceeds from the sale of town lots authorized by the act of April 13, 1908 (35 Stat. L., p. 70); in all, $188,000, to be immediately available.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the paragraph. What is the necessity for such a tremendous increase in the appropriation for this project—from $70,000 to $188,000?

Mr. HAYDEN. By reason of the fact that the pumping plant in operation there is capable of supplying a larger area of land under irrigation which the Indians and lessees are cultivating. It is an important and feasible project, and the department recommends that the work be continued.

Mr. WALSH. Most of the projects in the bill are feasible, but they do not double the appropriation, as far as I have ascertained.

Mr. HAYDEN. If the gentleman will look in other parts of the bill he will find large appropriations for new projects which have been recommended as feasible by the department.

Mr. WALSH. Yes; but those are new projects, while this one is a continuing project.

Mr. HAYDEN. And has demonstrated its entire feasibility.

Mr. WALSH. It seems to me that we might very well continue the development of this project by a more moderate increase of the appropriation.

Mr. HAYDEN. As a matter of fact the Indian Service asked for $30,000 more than is allowed in this appropriation. The committee reduced it to this sum, which is the lowest amount possible to properly carry it on.

Mr. WALSH. Is the gentleman familiar with the reimbursement provision of the statute that has been set out at the conclusion of this paragraph?

I notice in the current law the citation is given as Thirty-fifth Statutes at Large, page 77, and in this act it is page 70. Is it the same act or the same paragraph or the same section of the law?

Mr. HAYDEN. I can not verify the citation.

Mr. WALSH. Of course, if the citation is not correct——

Mr. HAYDEN. If it is not I should be very glad to recur to it and correct it.

Mr. WALSH. I am only pointing out that in the current law the citation is given as the act of April 13, 1908, Thirty-fifth Statutes at Large, page 77. If we are trying now to make this reimbursable by virtue of the act of April 13, 1908, we ought to be advised of it.

Mr. HAYDEN. I am quite sure that the current law is correct. I shall verify that, however.

Mr. WALSH. I assumed that the gentleman has the current law before him.

Mr. HAYDEN. I have not.

Mr. WALSH. Perhaps the gentleman can point out the authority for installing a settling basin in this project. I notice that that is something new.

Mr. HAYDEN. If the gentleman will look at the hearings, he will find that previously a settling basin was built at this pumping plant which proved to be very satisfactory, only it was not large enough, and this appropriation is a continuation of that work.

Mr. WALSH. I understand that the settling basin is constructed or is about to be constructed. Under what authority was that undertaken?

Mr. HAYDEN. On page 125 of the hearings the gentleman will find:

In addition to operation, it is essential in order to convey the water through the canals and laterals of the distribution system to remove large quantities of silt that are continually being deposited, and which, if not removed, soon render the canal useless.

During the past few months it has been necessary to remove more than 40,000 cubic yards of silt. The work of ditch cleaning, however, was not completed because of insufficient funds. It is proposed to overcome this silt problem, which is a serious menace to the efficient operation of the system, and avoid the annual heavy expenditure for cleaning the canals by constructing a settling basin at an estimated cost of $11,000. Funds for this purpose are included in this estimate.

I have personally visited this pumping plant, and I know there was a small settling basin there. The engineer said that it was very efficient for its size, and that by enlarging it so as to make a greater area where the velocity of the water could be checked, thus causing the silt to be deposited, there would be a great saving of expense. Therefore this appropriation was asked for.

Mr. WALSH. Apparently the only work of continuation, as far as the construction goes now, that is necessary at this reservation is the installation of the settling basin.

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes; the settling basin is a part of the pumping plant.

Mr. WALSH. And I say that all of the rest of the pumping plant has been completed, except they need a larger settling basin?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order, on page 20, line 4, to the words "to be immediately available."

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to be heard on the point of order. Clearly this comes within the rule that appropriations may be made in continuation of a project already in progress. Beginning in 1910 appropriations have been made for the construction and operation of this pumping plant. The pumping plant has been in existence since that time. It has been enlarged; settling basins have been added to it. This is an addition to that same plant. The appropriations for the maintenance and operation of the plant are a continuation of the work already in progress. I can not see that the item is at all subject to a point of order. It is an existing public work which must be maintained.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will ask the gentleman whether the provision that the funds are to be made immediately available is subject to the point of order?

Mr. HAYDEN. Is that the point of order that the gentleman from Massachusetts is making?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. The gentleman in making the point of order did not state the point of order that he made. He made a general point of order against the item.

Mr. WALSH. Oh, no; I made the point of order against the words "to be immediately available," and cited the line and the page where those words are to be found.

Mr. HAYDEN. I can only say this to the gentleman: It makes very little difference as a practical proposition whether the money is available on the 1st day of July next or is available when this bill is signed, possibly two or three weeks before that time. I only know this, that there is now not a cent of money available for work on that project; that areas of land have been planted which greatly need water. It is requested by the Indian Office that this appropriation be made immediately available to prevent the Indians and the lessees from suffering a loss of their crops. Two or three weeks' time might be of inestimable advantage to them. It can do no possible injury to the Government to allow the money to be made immediately available.

Mr. WALSH. They can not expend $188,000 in two or three weeks.

Mr. HAYDEN. No; but such part as could be applied to operation and maintenance ought to be made available at this time. I can not see how it possibly could do any harm, while a substantial injury may be done to the Indians, and it is liable to be done, if this appropriation is not made available at once.

Mr. WALSH. Of course, it is usually the rule that the larger the appropriation in various items in many appropriation bills the greater the injury that is stated why the money should be made immediately available. This bill is for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920. There are various items in this paragraph, some of which are undoubtedly authorized by existing law; but I think the universal ruling of the Chairmen of Committees of the Whole has been that in a general appropriation bill, where the items are specifically set forth, to add the words "to be immediately available" makes the language subject to the point of order, being new legislation.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, I am not resisting the point of order, but I am merely appealing to the gentleman as a business proposition, because I think he is doing an injury by not letting this money become immediately available. If the gentleman insists, of course the point of order can be made.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman insist upon his point of order?

Mr. WALSH. I do.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks it is clearly a change of existing law and sustains the point of order.

The Clerk read as follows:

For the construction of seven new pumping plants, including the sinking of wells, installation of pumping machinery, construction of tanks for domestic and stock water, and necessary structures for the development and distribution of a supply of water for Papago Indian villages in southern Arizona, $38,000; for operation and maintenance of constructed works for these villages, $14,000; in all, $52,000.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the paragraph. I desire to ask what authority of law there exists for the construction of seven new pumping plants?

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, there is no authority of law for it; it is clearly new matter carried in this bill. The Papago Indians live in the driest and most arid part of the United States. The question of their living there depends upon the water supply, and on that alone. It is highly advantageous to them that these wells be drilled so that they may have a larger supply of water for their stock and be able to drive cattle and horses farther away from existing wells. It is true in that country, as almost all over Arizona, that the limit of the stock-carrying capacity in any locality is not grass but is water supply. Horses and cows can go so far away from a well and can come back, but the richest grass in the world might be beyond that limit and yet not be available. The Indian Service has carefully explored this country to ascertain the areas where water can be obtained. They have purchased a well-drilling outfit to go from one part of the reservation to the other drilling these wells and thus create an increased water supply for the Indians.

Mr. WALSH. Do I understand the gentleman to say that the authorities are now drilling these wells, that this new apparatus has been purchased?

Mr. HAYDEN. The well-drilling apparatus was purchased three or four years ago, but they have not had sufficient funds to carry on the work.

Mr. WALSH. Well, the current law provides for the sinking of these various wells. Now you want to establish seven new pumping plants, and apparently you have only $18,000 for the establishment of those new plants, because the act of last year carried $20,000 under the first item of this paragraph.

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. Is it contemplated that they can sink other wells and install pumping machinery and construct tanks and other necessary structures and in addition to that establish seven new pumping plants for $38,000?

Mr. HAYDEN. It is not a very expensive matter to establish a pumping plant in connection with a well for domestic and stock water purposes. It merely takes a pump and a gasoline engine.

Mr. ELSTON. And that is separate from the well entirely?

Mr. HAYDEN. Of course, the wells must be dug.

Mr. WALSH. You must have the well hitched up to it somewhere in order to get the water.

Mr. HAYDEN. This appropriation authorizes the sinking of wells and installing of pumping plants, the construction of tanks for domestic and stock water purposes, and all of those are covered with the $38,000.

Mr. WALSH. So it includes the seven new pumping plants?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman withdraw the point of order?

Mr. WALSH. Well, I will withdraw the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For continuing the development of a water supply for the Navajo and Hopi Indians on the Navajo, Moqui, Pueblo, Bonito, San Juan, and Western Navajo Reservations, $30,000, to be immediately available, reimbursable out of any funds of said Indians now or hereafter available.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order on the paragraph. I will make it to the words "to be immediately available."

Mr. HAYDEN. It is admitted that those words are subject to the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. MADDEN). Does the gentleman make the point of order or reserve it?

Mr. WALSH. I make the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, the point of order, it is understood, was made to the words "immediately available," in line 24?

The CHAIRMAN. That is right.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the amount of $42,500 appropriated by the Indian appropriation act approved March 2, 1917 (39 Stat. L., p. 975), for the construction of two bridges over the Little Colorado and Canyon Diablo Rivers, near the Leupp Indian Agency, Ariz., is hereby reappropriated for the same purposes as provided in said act, to be immediately available, reimbursable as provided in said act, and to remain a charge and lien upon the lands and funds of the Navajo Tribe of Indians until paid.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order on the words "to be immediately available," page 22, line 2.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to withdraw from the Treasury of the United States the sum of $17,500 of any tribal funds on deposit to the credit of the Indians of the San Carlos Reservation in Arizona, and to expend the same for the operation and maintenance of pumping plants for irrigating the lands of the Indians on the said reservation, and for the installation of a tank or tanks for the economical handling of fuel oil for said pumping plants: Provided, That the sum so used shall be reimbursed to the tribe by the Indians benefited, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the paragraph. This seems to be an entirely new project. I do not know what authorization there may exist for undertaking this work, and I would like to ask what particular necessity there is for undertaking this at the present time, and if it might not well go over to another year?

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will look at the hearings, on page 135 he will find a very elaborate justification for this appropriation. The Indians on that reservation had an irrigation system drawing water from the Gila River, but great floods came down that stream and washed out the headworks, so that it was impossible to get the water from the river into the canal. This pumping plant is to be built for the purpose of pumping the water into the irrigating canal. The money is not to be paid out of the Treasury of the United States but out of funds of the Indian tribe.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman insist on his point of order?

Mr. WALSH. Just a moment, Mr. Chairman. How extensive is this work of installing oil tanks?

Mr. HAYDEN. Distillate is brought from California for the purpose of operating the engines, and it is cheaper to buy it in carload lots. It is proposed to construct suitable tanks capable of holding carloads of distillate. Otherwise they would have to buy this fuel oil in iron drums.

Mr. WALSH. Do I understand the gentleman to say that this project has been deferred for a year or two?

Mr. SNYDER. The purchase of the tanks has been.

Mr. HAYDEN. The project was undertaken some years ago, but on account of the flood conditions the Indians have made comparatively little use of it. There are 1,400 acres there ready to be irrigated, and the Indians would like to have this pumping plant constructed at once.

Mr. WALSH. Was this agreed to in conference?

Mr. HAYDEN. This item passed the House in the last Congress.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to withdraw from the Treasury of the United States the sum of $17,600 of any tribal funds on deposit to the credit of the Indians of the Fort Apache Reservation in Arizona, and to expend the same, in connection with an equal sum of the funds appropriated in this act for Indian school and agency buildings, for reconstructing, repairing, and improving the power plant and irrigation system on the Fort Apache Indian Reservation, Ariz.: Provided, That the tribal funds so expended shall be reimbursed to the tribe under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior: And provided further, That the sum of $17,600 of the amount appropriated in this act for Indian school and agency buildings is hereby set apart and reserved for this purpose.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the paragraph, and I would like to ask the chairman of the committee what is the necessity for this expenditure?

Mr. HAYDEN. You will find justification for it on page 136 of the hearings.

Mr. SNYDER. I will have to say to the gentleman that it has been so long since we went over that particular section I can not now really state the necessity for it.

Mr. HAYDEN. This is the situation, if the gentleman from Massachusetts would like to have information from me——

Mr. SNYDER. I would like to have the gentleman explain it.

Mr. HAYDEN. All the money heretofore expended upon the power plant and irrigation system at Fort Apache was directly out of the Treasury of the United States. Under this provision the Indians will pay for half of the cost of the necessary repairs and improvements. It is here directed that half of the expenditure, or $17,600, be made from their funds, and the other half from Government funds.

Mr. WALSH. Then the Government reimburses them?

Mr. HAYDEN. No; the reimbursement is made by the Indians benefited to the tribal fund itself. I intend to offer an amendment on line 1, page 23, to insert the words, "by the Indians benefited," so as to make it conform to the language in the previous paragraph.

Mr. WALSH. I was about to direct the gentleman's attention to the fact.

Mr. HAYDEN. I offer the following amendment, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. No amendment is in order until the point of order is disposed of. Does the gentleman from Massachusetts insist on his point of order?

Mr. WALSH. No; I will withdraw the point of order, in view of the information that has been given.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HAYDEN: Page 23, line 1, after the word "tribe" insert the words "by the Indians benefited."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For reimbursement of Yuma County, Ariz., for traveling and other expenses incurred by its county officers in the arrest, prosecution, and commitment of four Indian youths of the Colorado River Reservation to State institutions, $167.75, to be immediately available.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington and Mr. WALSH rose.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts is recognized.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on that.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. HAYDEN. The gentleman did not make a point of order, but reserved it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understood the point of order was made. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I would like to ask the chairman of the committee if he can see any objection to adding to this bill, in the right place, a new section, to read as follows:

That after the passage and approval of this act all Indians who have served with the armed forces of the United States during the European War shall be citizens of the United States and possess all the rights and privileges thereof: Provided, That said Indians shall forfeit none of their rights to tribal funds or lands.

Mr. SNYDER. I will say to the gentleman that the Committee on Indian Affairs was called together this morning to consider this particular matter, it having been mentioned so many times yesterday, and after going over the matter very carefully we found that there were so many difficulties surrounding it that it was impossible for us, in the time that we had, to prepare an amendment that would cover the question. So we determined to introduce a bill to-day covering the question; and the committee agreed to make it the first business of the committee and report it as their first bill after the appropriation bill. The bill has been presented, and the subcommittee has been appointed to prepare and perfect a bill that will make it possible to do what the gentleman has suggested in his amendment.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Does the gentleman think if such a bill is placed on the calendar there could be any possible objection to its passage?

Mr. SNYDER. I do not see how there could possibly be any objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

For support and education of 680 Indian pupils at the Sherman Institute, Riverside, Calif., including pay of superintendent, $138,600; for general repairs and improvements, $15,000; in all, $153,600: Provided, That not to exceed $20,000 may be expended from Indian moneys, Proceeds of labor, Sherman Institute, for the purchase of land and water rights, the title to which is to be held in the United States.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the proviso.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts reserves a point of order on the proviso.

Mr. WALSH. What is this question of land and water rights to be acquired out there?

Mr. SNYDER. It is claimed that they have not sufficient water for the proper care and maintenance of the school, and in order to provide it, it is necessary to purchase more land.

Mr. HAYDEN. You will find it in the hearings at the bottom of page 141; a short paragraph there.

Mr. SNYDER. The gentleman will find it is well covered in the hearings. Additional farm land is required at this school, to cost $20,000. This is a good school; one of the schools where the children are taught vocational education, and particularly in the vocation of agriculture, and it is necessary to add some more property in order to provide occupation for the children and to get a further supply of vegetables, and so forth, for the use of the school.

Mr. WALSH. I think they have some 40 acres out there already. Has the present supply run out?

Mr. HAYDEN. As the gentleman will notice from the hearings, the school authorities are now renting 240 acres of land, in scattered tracts, to be cultivated by the Indian students at this school. It is proposed, instead of renting land, to buy land with this money and add it to the school farm.

Mr. SNYDER. This is one of the best managed institutions under the direction of the bureau, and the committee thought it advisable to permit that number of acres to be added to the project, so that the development of school supplies for the needs of the school could be intensified, at least, to the extent of taking care of the requirements of the school. They may also sell some of the products of their farm.

Mr. WALSH. They own 40 acres of land and want to buy 240?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes. They rent more than that now in addition to what they own.

Mr. WALSH. I withdraw the reservation of the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman withdraws the reservation of the point of order. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For reclamation and maintenance charge on Yuma allotments, $131,564.94, to be reimbursed from the sale of surplus lands or from other funds that may be available, in accordance with the provisions of the act of March 3, 1911 (36 Stat. L., p. 1063).

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the paragraph, and wish to ask the reason for the increase in this item.

Mr. HAYDEN. The Yuma reclamation project was declared completed by the Secretary of the Interior and the charges for reclamation fixed. This is the first of 20 annual payments that it will be necessary to pay for the entire cost of that project. A contract was entered into by the Indian Service on behalf of the Indians with the Reclamation Service requiring that full payment be made for the cost of water service to the Indian lands. When the surplus Indian land is sold the United States will be reimbursed, and if enough money is not received from that source when final patents are issued to the Indians they must pay out the same as white men.

Mr. WALSH. The charge on the Yuma allotments in the current law was about $15,000.

Mr. HAYDEN. Certainly; but that was merely for the operation and maintenance of the project while in process of construction. It has now been completed, and this is the first year in which the construction charges must be paid.

Mr. WALSH. If that is so, you will have to change the language of the act, will you not?

Mr. HAYDEN. No; there is no necessity for any change in the act. It says, "For reclamation and maintenance charges."

Mr. WALSH. Yes; and that was the language you carried before you began to make the payments.

Mr. HAYDEN. That may be true, but it fully covers the case now. It was a reclamation charge and a maintenance charge, the bulk of it now being the cost of the reclamation of the land as part of the Yuma project.

Mr. McKENZIE. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the gentleman a question, if he will yield.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] yield?

Mr. WALSH. I withdraw the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts withdraws the point of order.

Mr. McKENZIE. I simply desire to ask the gentleman of the committee in charge of the bill if this scheme of reclamation now being carried out was brought about at the suggestion of the Indians living on these allotted lands, or is it a part of the general reclamation scheme that has been carried on by the Interior Department?

Mr. HAYDEN. The Yuma reclamation project includes about 75,000 acres of land, a part of it—some four or five thousand acres—being on the Indian reservation. The main canal from the Colorado River passes through the Yuma Indian Reservation, and therefore makes possible the irrigation of Indian lands. The Yuma Indians are furnished with water on the same basis as the white people, but the Indians being poverty stricken and unable to pay the charges, the Federal Government is advancing the money now for them to pay the cost of reclamation. The money so advanced is to be reimbursed later to the United States from the sale of surplus lands on the reservation.

Mr. McKENZIE. Can the gentleman say whether or not, in his judgment, this has been a wise expenditure of the public money?

Mr. HAYDEN. Oh, there is no question about it. The Colorado River Valley contains the most fertile land in the United States. Lands near Yuma owned by white men, to my own knowledge, are now renting at $30 an acre.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For support and education of 100 Indian pupils at the Greenville Indian School, California, including pay of superintendent, $24,000; for general repairs and improvements, including developing and installation of water supply and the purchase of land and water rights, $10,000; for purchase of dairy cows and farming implements, $1,200; in all, $35,200.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. DYER. I would like to ask the gentleman in charge of the bill a question. I notice in this paragraph and the one preceding and many others where provision is made for the support and education of certain Indian pupils, including pay of superintendent. Can the gentleman tell me how much of that $24,000 in this item, in the paragraph beginning with line 8, is for the pay of the superintendent?

Mr. SNYDER. I can tell you, I think. That is at the Fort Little School. The superintendent receives $1,500 a year.

Mr. DYER. The same as to the Greenville Indian School in California?

Mr. SNYDER. I think it will be the same.

Mr. DYER. Who appoints those superintendents?

Mr. SNYDER. Those are appointed by the superintendent of the reservation or by the Indian Service.

Mr. DYER. Are they appointed upon competitive examination?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes. They are all civil-service employees.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

For continuing the construction of a road from Hoopa to Weitchpec, on the Hoopa Valley Reservation, in Humboldt County, Calif., in conformity with plans approved by the Secretary of the Interior, $10,000, to be immediately available, and to be reimbursed out of any funds of the Indians of said reservation now or hereafter placed to their credit in the Treasury of the United States, in accordance with the Indian appropriation act of May 25, 1918 (40 Stats. L., pp. 570, 571).

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the words "to be immediately available" in lines 22 and 23.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word, for the purpose of obtaining some information, with a view to offering an amendment. The Committee on Indian Affairs did not hold any hearings on the present bill, except those that were held last year?

Mr. SNYDER. The committee held no hearings where witnesses were questioned. They held several meetings.

Mr. RAKER. I mean during this session.

Mr. SNYDER. We called no witnesses.

Mr. RAKER. There is an item that was in the last bill as it passed the Senate but which was not agreed to by the House conferees. We appeared before the Committee on Indian Affairs of the Senate and presented the facts as fully as we could, and we had them at hand, and the Senate allowed the item unanimously; but it was not concurred in by the House conferees. We did not get all the facts, because the Indian Bureau, as well as the Board of Indian Commissioners, agreed to make an investigation and report as to the condition of these California Indians, so that when the next appropriation bill came up we might legislate intelligently on the matter and provide for these Indians as they should be provided for. But in the meantime they allowed an item of $20,000 for the purpose of caring for these nonreservation homeless Indians. While I do not desire to take the time, and I do not know whether the distinguished chairman of the committee [Mr. SNYDER] has gone into the question, it seems to me that we ought to have at least this $20,000 for the present, until the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the Board of Indian Commissioners can investigate the condition of these California Indians.

Away back in 1851 and 1852 there were 23 treaties made with the Indians in California. By some hook or crook, because of the value of the mineral lands at that time, these treaties were not approved, and these Indians in California, who ought to be among the well-provided-for Indians of the United States, because of what they gave up and because of the lands to which they are entitled, have been only partially provided for. The purpose of the California members is to get the full data and facts, so that we may provide for these Indians in the future. I would like to have the committee put this small amendment on this bill. I will read it before I offer it:

Page 25, line 3, after the end of line 3, insert as a new paragraph the following:

"For the relief and care of nonreservation Indians in California in destitute circumstances, for the prevention and treatment of tuberculosis, trachoma, conjunctivitis, smallpox, and other diseases, and including the transportation of patients to and from county hospitals and almshouses, and to special physicians when necessary, $20,000; said fund to be expended under contract with county supervisors and under such regulations and conditions as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe: Provided, That not to exceed 50 per cent of the actual cost of such service to the supervisors shall be paid from said fund."

That amendment was unanimously allowed by the Senate committee. The facts as presented to that committee appealed to them so strongly that they urged the department officials, the head of whom was there, to make the necessary report, so that these Indians might be properly provided for.

Tuberculosis is raging among these Indians; trachoma is raging amongst them. Poverty stalks among them at all times, and the people have been trying to provide for them by contributions, as was stated by the ladies and the distinguished men present; and I should like to see this provision made in this bill, and would like to have the chairman of the committee offer this amendment himself, if he will.

Mr. SNYDER. I will say to the gentleman that while my sympathy is with him and his people down in that section of California, I do not feel justified in inserting any new matter in this bill, and this looks like going out and bringing back into the fold Indians who have gone astray.

Mr. RAKER. These Indians have been in a poor way for these many years. They have been given some consideration by the Government. The various counties of the State and the State itself, as well as private individuals all over California, have been assisting in this matter, but it is a reproach to this Government, when we look over the past history of the California Indians, and see how they have been buffeted about from pillar to post, their property taken from them, and no consideration given them, when, as a matter of fact, if they had the land that they are entitled to and which was agreed to be given to them under these 23 treaties they would be equal to the Oklahoma Indians, among the richest in the United States.

Mr. McKENZIE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAKER. I yield to the distinguished gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. McKENZIE. What is the status of these Indians?

Mr. RAKER. Their status is very bad, so bad that they have not had much to eat and very little to wear.

Mr. McKENZIE. I mean under the law what is their status? Are they tramps or itinerants?

Mr. RAKER. They have their various localities where they stay, and they go from place to place and live in wicki-ups and wigwams, and sometimes they survive and sometimes they do not. Twenty years ago there were about 40,000 of them, and now their number has been reduced to 20,000. They have been neglected for many years. It is time that we take care of them.

Mr. SNYDER. I will say to the gentleman that the committee expect to be in session frequently, and if he will present a bill covering this matter we will be very glad to give it consideration and give him a hearing on it at any time.

Mr. RAKER. If I introduce a special bill and get a report from the department on it, will the committee consider such a bill for the relief of these Indians, notwithstanding the general bill?

Mr. SNYDER. We will consider it on its merits.

Mr. RAKER. I mean nothing else except its merits.

Mr. SNYDER. We will consider it on its merits and pass on it when it comes before the committee.

Mr. HAYDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAKER. I will.

Mr. HAYDEN. Is this the matter that was brought to the attention of the committee by George Wharton James and a number of other gentlemen from California?

Mr. RAKER. It has been brought to my attention by personal contact and observation for 40 years. Because I have been fortunate enough to come to this great House as a Member, gentlemen have called my attention to it, as many others have. I have seen this condition from a boy up. I have seen people go without clothing to wear or enough of it, and I have seen them diseased, driven from pillar to post, when other Indians have been provided for. I am not criticizing the Committee on Indian Affairs of the House, because we have not had the data and had no opportunity to present it to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

Mr. HAYDEN. I want to suggest to the gentleman, as I did to Mr. James, when he and others called on me in the last Congress, that Congress had appropriated $20,000, and the Indian Bureau had spent only $250 for that purpose, leaving $19,750. I suggested that before he came to Congress for more appropriations he should visit the Indian Bureau and induce them to spend the money already appropriated.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. They spent $180 to give a man a trip to California, and it was not spent for the Indians at all.

Mr. RAKER. Oh, I hope the gentleman from Kansas will not bring anything like that into this controversy. The matter that the gentleman from Arizona referred to was for the purchase of land. The land will not give the Indians something to eat or cure their tuberculosis. It will not cure the smallpox. Our people had smallpox brought in by the Indians, and in my county we spent $15,000 to prevent the spread of that smallpox. The matter the gentleman refers to relates to land, and it takes money to make these investigations. I am very much disappointed that the chairman can not see his way clear to offer this amendment. I will say this, that I will re-present the matter to the Senate again; they will have hearings on the bill, and we will come back with all the facts and all the graciousness we can, with the truth in our behalf, and present the matter, hoping that it will be put into the bill. [Applause.]

The Clerk read as follows:

FLORIDA.

SEC. 4. For relief of distress among the Seminole Indians in Florida, and for purposes of their civilization and education, $20,000, including the construction and equipment of necessary buildings.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 25, line 7, after the word "education," strike out the figures "$20,000" and insert in lieu thereof the figures "$10,000."

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, in support of this amendment I direct the attention of the committee to the fact that the year ending June 30, 1918, Congress appropriated $8,000 for this very purpose—relieving the distress among the Seminoles. Of that sum only $1,022 was expended. Last year we appropriated $10,000, and this year we are asked to appropriate $20,000.

The gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. HASTINGS], who, of course, is very familiar with phases of Indian matters, when a similar bill was up before the committee in the Sixty-fifth Congress presented the apparent necessity for the relief of the Seminole Indians. I understand from a hasty perusal of the hearings that somebody, apparently of the Indian Bureau, sent a man down there named Frank Brandon, who went through the camp making an investigation of the condition of these Seminole Indians. I understand that he was a Cherokee Indian and unable to speak the Seminole language, and possibly that accounts for the surprisingly small expenditure made of the $8,000 appropriation. But it seems to me that unless this is a matter which comes within the general supervision of the Indian Bureau it is a subject that should receive some consideration by the State. We have listened to the eloquent plea of the gentleman from California [Mr. RAKER], who wishes to cure some of the worthy red men in his district of tuberculosis, smallpox, conjunctivitis, and other serious diseases in that great wealthy State of California. I believe from the perusal of the facts set forth before the committee that the gentleman from California presents a far more worthy case for an appropriation than the facts warrant in this case. But as I understand it, the Federal Government has expended some money down there; we have established a precedent and recognized the principle, but it does not seem to me that this is quite the proper time to be doubling up on appropriations for this purpose. They have jacked it up since 1918 from $8,000 to $20,000, and it is not justified.

Furthermore, I should like to know—I assume that the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SEARS], who has been on his feet since I offered the amendment, is waiting to give the information—just how this $20,000 is to be expended. I think, Mr. Chairman, in view of the manner in which increases have been made in other items of the bill, particularly for the support of schools and civilized Indians, that to double an appropriation made for this purpose is extremely unwise. I trust that the chairman of the committee will see fit to accept the amendment that I have offered decreasing the figures from $20,000 to $10,000.

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Chairman, I trust the gentleman from Massachusetts will not insist on the motion he has made cutting down this appropriation, and that if he does insist the Members of this House will vote down the motion. There are those in the House who can make a much stronger statement than I can make upon the subject, because I may be influenced by local surroundings, but I trust I am not. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL] knows the conditions of the Seminoles, and I am only sorry that Mr. Norton and Mr. ELLSWORTH are not present also on that side of the House to make a statement.

In 1832, under a treaty entered into by this Government, $250,000 was left in the Treasury for the Seminole Indians in Florida should they ever remove to the West. I contend that money is still theirs, if they should move to the West, but they prefer to remain in Florida. They have never been conquered, yet they are a law-abiding people. They are not citizens and they have no rights of citizenship. The State of Florida out of her own generosity, rather than any moral obligation, following the suggestion of the Committee on Indian Affairs, Republicans and Democrats, which was sent down there to investigate conditions, gave to the Seminole Indians a hundred thousand acres of land, and this $20,000 is for the purpose of building for them schoolhouses and giving to them some assistance. It might be surprising to my good friend from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] to learn that while these Indians have lived there ever since 1832, and prior thereto, the Seminole Indians of Florida to-day are the only real Indians that I know of in the United States. They have kept themselves apart; they have not mixed or mingled with the white race; and they pride themselves upon their honesty, their virtue, and their integrity. The committee which made the investigation was only struck with the one appalling fact; that they still mistrusted the white man and they still believe that the white man will not give them justice. That will be borne out by my colleague from Kansas, Mr. CAMPBELL, and my good friend, Mr. TILLMAN, and others on the Indian Committee. It is nothing but right that these Indians should receive some relief, and this same appropriation was passed overwhelmingly by the House at the last session.

Just one word of suggestion to my good friend from Massachusetts as to the amount of money expended. And my colleague the chairmon of this committee will bear me out in the assertion, as will also other Members of the House. I have always fought the appropriation of money for Indians unless the Indians receive the money. I am on record during the past Congress and I am going on record before the House to-day that if we can not secure for the Indians, for their immediate relief, the $20,000, I shall stop asking the membership of the House to give them any relief. I do not believe in making an appropriation and wasting it. I have tried for four years, and the House has been good to me, and it has made appropriation after appropriation, and yet you can only get about one thousand dollars of the eight or ten thousand dollars expended. The good citizens of Fort Lauderdale and Miami, during the influenza epidemic, with this money lying in the Treasury for the relief of the Indians, hired physicians with their own money; bought coffins with their own money; and buried the Indians who were unfortunate enough to die during that epidemic, with the Government of the United States, I claim, failing to do its part.

Mr. EMERSON. Where do these Seminoles live?

Mr. SEARS. The Seminoles, when I first went to Florida in 1880, lived near my home town.

Mr. EMERSON. I thought they lived in the Everglades.

Mr. SEARS. They first lived at or near Tallahassee, but the white man has gradually forced them back and back and back. In 1880, as I say, it was no uncommon sight to see the Seminole Indians walking the streets of my home town, Kissimmee. To-day they are living down on the southern, eastern, and western edge of Lake Okechobee, nearly 100 miles from there.

Mr. EMERSON. And that is in the Everglades?

Mr. SEARS. Practically. They go out and clear up a piece of land and in some cases, I am told, build a house upon it—I concede they have no title to the land—and then some white man would file on the land or purchase same. Then the Indian would be told to move on, and, rather than have any trouble, he would move on. And they have been driven back and back until they can go no farther, and to protect them the State of Florida has given them 100,000 acres of land where they are living and around where they are living. And now we are only asking the Government to carry out a part of the moral obligation that we feel is due them in order that they may receive some education and relief.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Chairman, the report of the hearings will show that for four years I have been consistently against this proposition. The final statement in the report of this year shows that I said then that in reality we must look upon it as a moral responsibility more than a legal one, and that was conceded by the commissioner and by all of the members of the committee. There was never any legal responsibility on the part of the Government to take these Seminoles back into the fold of the Indian Bureau. Year after year for four years we have been prevailed on to put something in the bill for the benefit of these Indians. I have contended all of the time that it was a State burden, and that the State should take care of its own paupers the same as any other State in the Union.

Mr. SEARS. The chairman is absolutely correct, but I still insist that my point is well taken, that if the Seminoles should move to Oklahoma to-day, under the treaty entered into by the Government, they would be entitled to the $250,000 and at least 3 per cent interest from 1832 down to the present date.

Mr. SNYDER. The gentleman will concede that they had a right to go 100 years ago, of which they did not avail themselves.

Mr. SEARS. The treaty says whenever they may go.

Mr. SNYDER. And they have chosen to stay where they are. Notwithstanding that, they want us to increase this appropriation every year, and after doing that we can not get the department to expend any of it. The amendment as offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] is the same amount that was carried in the bill when it passed the House. I think it is a sufficient amount and the amendment is acceptable to the chairman of the committee.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, some years ago I was at Miami and close enough to the reservation to go out and see the Seminole Indians. I became interested in them. They were at that time about the only Indians in the United States for which the Government was not doing something. They were a clean, self-supporting, fine-looking lot of people, without schools, without churches, without homes, without hope.

White people were closing in on them and crowding them closer and closer, and about the only places they had were little knolls in the swamps to live on. In making up the next Indian appropriation bill I asked that an item be placed in the bill, with a view of investigating their status and to see whether or not something could be done for those Indians. That was some five or six years ago, and we have been appropriating about $10,000 a year for the Seminole Indians ever since. The Seminole Indians have had absolutely no benefits out of that. Somebody who was sent down there has spent somewhere in the neighborhood of $1,000 or $1,100 a year. The money has never been spent for the benefit of those Indians. I would make this item $50,000 gladly if the money could be spent for the benefit of the Seminole Indians and show results. Whether or not this item shall be $10,000 or $20,000 is a matter of small concern if the Seminole Indians can get some benefit. I think the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SEARS] agrees with me perfectly on this matter. We have been unable to get any action by the Bureau of Indian Affairs that has resulted in any benefit to the Seminole Indians. Congress has done everything it can do with respect to the matter, and whether this item is $10,000 or $20,000 makes very little difference if the policy is pursued for the next fiscal year that has been pursued in the past four years in respect to this appropriation.

Mr. SEARS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. SEARS. The gentleman recalls my statement when this was up before the committee, that unless we could get it expended for the benefit of the Indians I would not even ask the committee for an appropriation, but I want the House to give the $20,000, that I may have a chance during the next 12 months to see if I can not get it expended in the interests of the Indians. If we do not, it will stay in the fund; so nobody is hurt.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I recall the statement of the gentleman from Florida with respect to this item, and I do not know why the item was increased, or why it should be increased, in view of the attitude of the Bureau of Indian Affairs heretofore with the appropriations already made. If the gentleman from Florida wants the amount increased, I am disposed to agree with him. My interest in the Seminole Indians is so great that I want something done for the Seminoles, and I am opposed to making appropriations from year to year and having a small amount of it used for the benefit of somebody who wants to make a trip to Florida, and the Indians get absolutely nothing out of it in the way of benefit.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words. Mr. Chairman, I rise rather to support the item in this bill as reported by the committee. I think this is as meritorious, if not the most meritorious, appropriation that is contained in this bill and I feel at full liberty to speak about it because it does not affect my own State. It is to be expended wholly within the State of Florida. I agree heartily with much that has been said by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL]. I share with him his criticism of the department that declines or fails to expend the money. I believe any appropriation by the Congress of the United States of a sum of money is in effect a command upon the particular department that it ought to be expended in the way that Congress intended it should be. Now, some three years ago Congress provided by an amendment in the Indian appropriation bill for a committee to investigate the various Indian tribes, and in March, 1917, a part of the Committee on Indian Affairs, of which I happened to be then a member, started out upon this investigation, and the first place we went was to investigate the condition of the Seminoles of Florida, and I want to say to the House and I want to say to the country that no man has sufficient language to exaggerate the conditions of the Seminole Indians in Florida. They are the most backward Indians on the face of the earth. They are the least civilized of any Indians that I have ever known of or ever read about. There are approximately about 600 of these Seminole Indians in Florida, almost all of them of pure blood. I will surprise the House when I tell you that of the 600 there are only one or perhaps two who ever entered a schoolhouse; one boy who seemed to be precocious had been taken charge of by some white friend and he had been induced to enter a school and made a very fine record, and we also understood that his sister or some relative or perhaps two of them had been induced to enter a white school. Now, let me say to the House that as far as the testimony disclosed before the committee they did not have a single school that the Seminole children attended. More than that, they did not have a single missionary among them. There is not a single Seminole child who ever went to a Sunday school. There are no preachers, as I stated a moment ago, and there has absolutely nothing been done to civilize them. They have been living down there, as my friend from Florida says, around Lake Okechobee and around the Everglades of Florida. When Florida was sparsely settled they made a living by hunting and fishing. They killed plumed birds down there and would sell their plumes to the white traders for a splendid sum. Florida has passed a law preventing them doing that, so that means of making a livelihood was closed. I am not criticizing that. Railroads have been built through various parts of Florida, particularly along the eastern coast. Cities have been built up, and the population of Florida has been greatly increased so that the Indians are crowded back into the interior, and there is very little hunting and fishing for them. Now, they do not have any homes. They live in little camps in tents, and whenever the land is homesteaded upon which they were on they simply moved to another place. Now, that is the condition of these Seminoles in Florida. They are in a terribly bad condition.

Mr. McKENZIE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HASTINGS. I will.

Mr. McKENZIE. Just for some information. When the Federal Government made an arrangement with the Seminole Tribe to remove them to the State of Oklahoma it was unfortunate that all the Seminole Indians did not go and participate in the Government's allotments given to them out there and become wards of the Government, but remained in the State of Florida as citizens or, you might say, subjects of the State of Florida.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. McKENZIE. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman have two or three minutes longer.

Mr. HASTINGS. Three minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. McKENZIE. If the gentleman will yield further, what I want to get at is this: These Seminole Indians at the present time are not under the jurisdiction of the Federal Government or the Bureau of Indian Affairs, are they?

Mr. HASTINGS. No.

Mr. McKENZIE. That being true, by what authority could the Commissioner of Indian Affairs or any Federal officer expend money such as authorized in this appropriation without further legislation?

Mr. HASTINGS. Well, they can do it provided we authorize it. For instance, if we make an appropriation and authorize the expenditure for the purpose of the support and civilization of those Indians, that money can be expended.

Mr. McKENZIE. If we go that far and authorize the Commissioner of Indian Affairs to expend this money for the benefit of the Indians in Florida, will we not then again assume jurisdiction of those Indians and they become wards of the Government in the State of Florida?

Mr. HASTINGS. If the gentleman from Illinois could have gone with this committee down there and visited those camps that they occupy and seen the pitiable condition of those Indians there, he would not hesitate, I venture to say, to vote ten times this amount in order that they might be cared for.

Mr. McKENZIE. If the gentleman will pardon me, I am perfectly ready and willing to do anything for these unfortunate people; and I feel, as the gentleman does perhaps, that on account of their ignorance some advantage has been taken of them, and I feel our Government ought to do justice to them. But we must so legislate that the Commissioner of Indian Affairs shall have the right to expend money that we appropriate here.

Mr. HASTINGS. I do not think there would be any doubt but that he has the right to expend it, provided we make an appropriation, but the trouble has been that the Indian Office has been investigating, and the money has not been expended. And I agree with the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL] and the chairman of the committee, and with the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SEARS] in their criticism of the nonexpenditure of this money. I think it ought to be expended, and I think it can be wisely expended, and I think in such a way as to greatly help the Seminoles down there in the State of Florida. And I believe it is a meritorious appropriation. I do not believe at the present time the amount ought to be reduced, and hence I hope that the amendment that reduces it will not be adopted.

Mr. SNYDER. I would like to ask the gentleman if he thinks there is any more reason now why it should be made $20,000 than we originally made the bill?

Mr. HASTINGS. I never did think that $10,000, taking into consideration what I know of the condition of the Seminoles, the number of them, and how they are scattered over the country, was sufficient, and particularly in view of the action of the Florida Legislature, as I understand, in granting a large area of land to the Seminoles down there, I do not think the original appropriation was sufficient, and I believe we ought to make an appropriation in an amount sufficient that they can make some little showing among the Seminoles this coming year.

Mr. SNYDER. If the gentleman will permit, certainly it is large enough an amount until they can demonstrate they can expend the money and do something with it.

Mr. HASTINGS. I will say frankly, Mr. Chairman, the money has not been expended or was not expended last year. I do not know what has been done in the last five or six months, but up to that time it had not been expended. The failure to expend the money met with the criticism of all the Members who were in Florida and knew the conditions down there. I do not believe there is a single member of the investigating committee but who agrees with me about the condition of the Seminoles down there in Florida, and that the statement of their condition can not be overdrawn, and that you can not find language to overstate it.

Mr. SEARS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for three minutes, to answer the questions asked by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. McKENZIE].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Florida asks unanimous consent to proceed for three minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. SEARS. My colleague is fair and wants to be fair. The fact of the business is this: In 1832 the United States entered into a treaty with the Seminole Indians. It is claimed—but I do not know whether it is true or not—that the Indians representing the Seminoles were made drunk by the white people. It is a fact that the treaty was signed by the Indians by their mark, showing that they could not write their names. It is signed by the representatives of the United States, but there were no witnesses to the transaction. It gave to the United States the entire State of Florida. The Government thereby recognized that the Seminoles owned the State. The gentleman will not deny that. These 600 Indians have always denied the right of those Indians representing them to sign that treaty for them. And they contend, and I contended to the Indian Committee, on account of their ignorance the treaty was not binding, and that there is at least a moral obligation resting upon us. The gentleman knows no court will hold that a deed signed by myself and my wife by our marks and without any witnesses is a good deed. I could come in and set it aside. But the Indian has no court to come to. He is simply coming to the Congress through myself as a representative of the people—they can not vote—asking that you give them something in the nature of relief.

Mr. EMERSON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment of the gentleman from Oklahoma.

I feel that these Seminole Indians ought to be treated as human beings or as animals. Now, if human beings, they ought to be brought out of the Everglades somehow and educated. I visited them a little over a year ago, and I want to concur in everything that the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. HASTINGS] has said concerning their condition. And when we entered into any treaty with them it was like entering into a treaty with a lot of alligators down there. I do not have any idea that they had any conception of what the treaty meant. They are the most ignorant class of people I ever saw; they are the most primitive class of people I ever saw. They were all barefooted. They live up in the swamps and Everglades, where no white man would think of living. I have not any recollection, as my friend from Kansas says, that they were clean, unless they had fallen into the water of the swamp accidentally.

The women wear 40 or 50 rows of beads around their necks—the most peculiar thing I ever saw in my life. Those strings of beads look like a great muffler such as a farmer up in New England might wear in the depth of winter. Forty or fifty or seventy-five rows of beads are worn, and one row is supposed to be worn for each year of their age.

I think something should be done for this class of people. They should be brought out into a state of civilization.

Mr. HASTINGS. Did the gentleman examine their camps?

Mr. EMERSON. No; I did not.

Mr. HASTINGS. If the gentleman will permit me, I wish to say that I went down to one of those camps, and I do not think they had 10 cents' worth of breadstuff there for 40 or 50 people to live on. They had no houses. They had what they call thatched tents. They put up four posts and cover them with thatch, and put down a board floor, 2 or 3 feet from the ground, and they sleep there. They may have a wagon cover or sheet, or something of that kind, but it is impossible for a man to find language properly to describe the condition of those Seminoles. If we make a gratuitous appropriation for Indians in the West, I do not believe that any man who has gone down there and has seen those Indians as I saw them and as the committee saw them would deny that something ought to be done to take care of them. They have no schools or churches or anything.

Mr. EMERSON. I may say that after looking at them I decided not to visit them in their camp. I thought I would go back to Miami, where I was staying.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, the Seminole Indians are a strong, virile race of people, primitive, ignorant, and uncivilized, but evidence of their virility is given in the fact that they have lived right up against the white man's civilization for lo, these many generations, and still have not as yet accepted one iota of it. They live in a manner just as primitive, they are just as much native tribesmen, as when the great Genoese navigator landed on the sunny shores of San Salvador.

Mr. EMERSON. And wear the same clothes.

Mr. CARTER. They have not changed their mode of life at all. They are the one tribe of Indians in the United States who, man, woman, and child, have totally rejected the white man's civilization and even the white man's Christianity. I was told on the stand, by preachers and missionaries among them, and by one or two of the Seminoles themselves, that never had a native Florida Seminole been in a house of worship of the white man, and that they never expected to enter any except their own places of worship, where they expected to pursue for the remainder of their lives their devotion to the Great Spirit and entertain their hope of eventually attaining the happy hunting grounds.

These primitive people at one time owned the entire peninsula of Florida. They have been divested of title, they have been divested of possession, in order that the white man might have a home, in order that the white man, the United States citizen, might be given some convenient place on which he could pursue the method of his livelihood.

There are only about 600 of those Seminoles left, and it would not cost this Government a great deal to take care of that small band of Indians. It will cost more, perhaps, per capita to civilize and educate them on account of their obstinate disposition than it would to educate any other class of people in the United States.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CARTER. In just a moment. But when once they have been educated, when once they have been raised to the plane of civilization which the white man has attained, they will make citizens equal to the white man. Now I yield to my friend.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. After this appropriation is made it seems to me the difficulty may be in expending it for the benefit of those Indians. As I understand it, they do not care for anything connected with the white man's civilization. I wish the gentleman could tell us how this money can be expended.

Mr. CARTER. I will get to that. The gentleman is now complaining that the appropriation heretofore made is not expended. I have complained of that myself, and I have complained of it to the Indian Bureau. But we must take into consideration a true estimate of the conditions. When you find a people who like these will not accept civilization, and have sufficient virility to do so successfully, you have a more difficult task in spending money for civilization than with respect to other Indian tribes or members of other Indian tribes who will accept civilization. The Indian Bureau has had men in Florida heretofore. They have tried to induce the Indians to go into the schools, to become connected with churches. Seminoles and Creek Indians speaking the Seminole language have gone from Oklahoma at their own expense and have taken an interest in those Indians. They have tried to bring them to some degree of civilization, but all their efforts to teach them have been failures. Nevertheless I believe that if the proper persons can be sent among them, if the Indian Bureau will adopt the policy of sending among the Florida Seminoles none but persons who can speak the Seminole language, people of their own blood, a great deal of good could be accomplished. The Indian Bureau can find many teachers, preachers, and others from among the Seminoles and Creeks in Oklahoma who would delight to undertake this task.

It will not take a great many of them. There are many teachers there who are teaching in the schools now who would be glad to take the responsibility, would be glad to try to elevate those who are in fact their own kith and kin. I think if that policy were pursued and if our Indian Bureau were to send to them some intelligent people who can speak to them in their own language their confidence could be gained and something could be done that will preserve and keep them from utter ruin and extermination. Those people have within them the traits of good citizenship, if we can only develop them.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Oklahoma has expired.

Mr. CARTER. I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes more.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Oklahoma asks unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes more. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. McKEOWN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CARTER. Yes.

Mr. McKEOWN. I wish to suggest that it is probably not known that the Seminoles of Florida speak the Mississippi language, and attempts have sometimes been made to send among them Seminoles from Oklahoma who speak the Muskogee language.

Mr. CARTER. I may say to my friend that the Seminoles from Oklahoma conversed with the Florida Seminoles fluently and with no difficulty. If I remember correctly, one of the Creeks from Oklahoma acted as interpreter at one of our hearings. He had no difficulty in making himself understood, and the Seminole Indians seemed to have more confidence in him than they had in those who could not speak their language.

When we were down on this trip the citizens of Florida seemed to hail our coming there as an event foreshadowing the purchase from the State of a large area of land for the Seminoles in Florida. We had several hearings there, and, as chairman of the committee, I thought it well to dispel that idea as much as possible, so I made a statement, which was carried to the newspapers, to the effect that the furnishing of land for the Seminoles was not in any sense of the word a task for the Federal Government to perform; that the Federal Government had turned over to the State of Florida all of the public land within that State; that if the Indians had any claim at all it was to the lands of Florida originally and those of no other State; that since the State of Florida had acquired those lands as a gratuity, I think, from the Federal Government, I was sure Congress would look upon the proposition of furnishing land as a State proposition and not a Federal one; but I concluded by saying that so far as I was concerned—and I could speak only as one Member of the House—if the State of Florida would undertake to furnish land for the Seminole Indians I would advocate, as best I could, the appropriation of sufficient funds to educate them, and teach them how to cultivate the land, and give them the elements of a common-school education at the expense of the Federal Government.
